MONTREAL, April 23—The body of the late George Wentzel, a German-American who committed suicide in Montreal about a month ago when proceedings were about to be taken against him for bigamy, was permitted to be forwarded to the home of relatives in Florida yesterday, but the young woman with whom he had been living here as wife number two, was forbidden by United States immigration officials to cross the boundary.

This was the sequel of a dramatic incident enacted at the Bonaventure station Tuesday evening when the young woman and the coffined body of the man were taken from a train about to depart for New York. An immigration officer of the United States service was making his usual inspecting of outgoing trains when he noticed a heavily veiled woman sitting in one of the coaches, and taking a second look recognized her as a woman who had previously come under his observation in connection with the bigamy case.

"I am taking my poor husband's body to Tampa, Florida, to be buried", the woman stated when the official asked her errand.

"But you know, Mrs. Wentze, that you cannot enter the United States after the decision of our bureau a monht ago", the officer replied. "I must ask you to leave the train, and I am sorry to say I shall be obliged to remove Mr. Wentzel's body from the train. The body may be forwarded later."

The immigration officer helped the woman off, and later removed the corpse from the express car, and then reported to his superiors here. The latter permitted the body to be sent on yesterday, money for that purpose having been forwarded by the legitimate wife living in New York, who had also intended going to Florida for the funeral.

"We were sorry to have to act so" said an American immigration officer last night, "but we had no alternative. This woman had already been barred from the United States, but her nerve in attempting to evade the order was nothing compared to the nerve she showed in attempting to go to the man's own home and there come face to face with his parents and legitimate wife", he added.

The whole story was a sordid one. A little over a month ago word came from New York that George Wentzel living at 14 Desjardins avenue in this city, and supposed to be married to a young woman of eighteen here, already had a wife living in New York. Wife number two then started for New York, but was turned back at the border. Shortly afterward Wentzel shot himself and the body was placed in a vault here. A few days ago the genuine Mrs. Wentzel sent money to have the remains sent to his home in Florida for burial, when the Montreal wife for the second time attempted to get into the United States.

OLD PEOPLE GAIN

STRENGTH BY TAKING VINOL. HERE IS PROOF.

So many cases like this are constantly coming to our attention that we publish it for the benefit of others:—Mr. John Widmayer of Jackson, Mich., says: "I am nearly 70 years of age, and was in a feeble condition but Vinol has done wonders for me. It is the best medicine to create strength I have ever seen and I have taken a good many of them: Last spring I was run down and worn out but I took Vinol and soon regained my strength. Vinol is certainly an invigorating tonic for old people."

It is the medicinal curative elements of the cod livers without oil aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron which are contained in Vinol that makes it so efficient in such cases.

If you have an aged father, mother or anyone in your family who needs a strength-creating tonic try Vinol on our offer to give back your money if it fails to benefit—Red Cross Drug Store—J. S. McKeown, Belleville, Ont.

HIGH SCHOOL FORMS PLAY BALL

A very interesting game of baseball was played yesterday at the High School grounds between the first and second forms. The latter were victorious by a score of 12 to 10. They all played a good game and gave their pitcher, S. Newton good support, especially Spider Rayfield and G. Roote.

The pitching staff of the first form was a little weak. After knocking Redner out of the box, Green went in but he had a "sore" arm. He was hit hard, the good fielding of his team saved him from a worse defeat.

Stan Nurse started to umpire the game and was impartial in his decisions but "Judge" Lynch, who succeeded him, handed out some pretty "raw stuff" to the second form team. Following is the line-up

NAPS CAN'T SHAKE THE HOODOO

Cleveland, April 23.—In the sixth inning of yesterday's game here between the Cleveland and Chicago American league teams, Catcher Billings, of Cleveland was spiked by Outfielder Bodie as he slid into the plate. Last night physicians said that an artery in Billings' leg was severed and he will be out of the game for two months further handicapping the already crippled team.

Boston, April 23.—The purchase of Jimmy Murray, outfielder of the Buffalo Internationals, and the release of Pitcher Willard, Meikle and Arthur Duchensnil to the Rochester club of the samt league, were announced last night by the Boston National league management. Murray will report immediately. Both pitchers were disposed of under an optional agreement.

TORONTO HAS FAST TEAM

TORONTO, April 23.—The Leafs' fighting back qualities enabled them to draw first blood at Providence yesterday, and incidentally the fans are beginning to like the team better each day. Gifted with more speed than last season and also ability to wield the willow effectively makes them loom up very strong on the offensive, while the defensive end of it depends on the pitchers as the fielding is well looked after. Ritter gives promise of developing into a star, while Herbert showed that he had the goods last Fall. Everyone knows that Hearne can be counted upon to win a big majority of his games, thus sifting it down to three heavers, and surely two more capable ones can be dug up out of the consignment now on hand. Regge and Johnson have yet to show, but both are well recommended, as is Gilbert, the other southpaw. Graham and Schwab look to be comers, while Gaw, although he was a regular last year does not possess International League calibre. What the Leafs need is a good utility infielder and also an outfielder.

"FEDS" ALMOST HAD HEARNE

TORONTO, April, 23.—Bunny Hearne was almost tempted away from the Leafs by the Brooklyn Feds, according to a despatch from Providence. "Bunny" did not sign up with the rest of the Leafs on opening day but Manager Kelly thought nothing of it until numerous telephone calls from Baltimore made him suspicious and immediately Joe was on the warpath. Hearne was found to be at a show but on his arrival back at the hotel at 11 o'clock, the southpaw was cornered and after prolonged negotiation was finally signed. "Bunny" was offered $1,000 to sign with the Feds, and this offer looked big to the southpaw. Morever the Brooklyn Feds, or rather former Leafs, as Bill Bradley and Bert Maxwell are with the Tip-Tops, gave him no peace all day and as they spoke to Hearne over the long distance phone, they increased their offer every time and naturally the young heaver was undecided what to do. Hearne's loss would have put a bad crimp in the Leafs and incidentally have raised the wrath of President McCaffery and Manager Joe Kelly.

PHILADELPHIA, April 22.—Three persons lost their lives in a fire that destroyed their home here early today. Olivia's Prize Package

And the Secret It Revealed

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The red auction flag fluttered from a tree over the front gate and told to the village of Wayboro that the household effects of the late Zebedee Paine would be sold to the highest bidder.

Ada Paine, a niece of the dead man and his only known representative and heir, was here, there and everywhere, whispering a word of advice to one concerning some especially choice article, finding a comfortable seat for some good gossip of the neighborhood or detailing her own future plans to an interested group of listeners.

Miss Paine had been Zebedee's housekeeper for fifteen years preceding his death. It was Ada who had soothed the old man's last hours, and some people said that Ada Paine was now reaping the reward for which she had so ardently labored. Others said that young Zebedee Paine would never have left home and lost his life in the sea if it had not been for his black eyed cousin Ada's sharp tongue.

Olivia Deering walked slowly up the path and bent her head to enter the low, old fashioned doorway. She was a tall, stately woman with abundant brown hair lightly flecked with gray at the temples; her skin was clear and rosy and her hazel eyes shining and lustrous. She wore a simple white lawn dress and a plain hat.

People turned and stared and nodded at Olivia, and many of them wondered how many years had passed since Olivia had been under that roof. It was known that once she had called to see old Mr. Paine concerning the reported death of his son, and it was rumored that Olivia had not been permitted to see old Zebedee and that Ada Paine had sent her away with burning cheeks and anguished eyes.

"THANK GOD, I HAVE RETURNED IN TIME!"

Since then Olivia Deering and Ada Paine had not been on speaking terms.

Now Ada's black brows drew together in a frown when she saw Olivia's dignified form moving through the crowd.

"I expect likely she wants to buy some [illegible] little Zebedee's belongings for a keepsake," tittered Louise Ramsell, the sharp tongued village dressmaker.

"There ain't going to be any personal belongings put under the hammer," said Ada hastily, not knowing that at that very moment the auctioneer's zealous assistant had just dug out from a hiding place in the garret an old mahogany workbox which had belonged to Mrs. Zebedee Paine and which Ada had hidden there herself long years ago.

And in the next room to the one in which Ada was now whispering to Louise Ramsell Olivia Deering was watching the auctioneer with a pallid face as he held the mahogany workbox high in the air above the curious crowd.

"And now this here mahogany box, locked fast, to be sold sight unseen. What am I offered?"

As in a dream Olivia lived the next few moments. She heard her own voice bidding steadily against that of some unknown person. For some unexplainable reason she wanted that workbox more than anything in the world. Then, because Wayboro folk preferred to know just what they were buying and very many of them possessed ancient workboxes similar to the one offered for sale, the other bidder dropped out, and Olivia found herself the possessor of it for the sum of [illegible]40.

Somehow after this purchase Olivia's interest in the sale ended, and, wrapping the box in her light summer shawl, she left the house. Her tall, graceful form hurried up the street, turned at a corner and went up a grassy road, where her little white painted cottage stood in a lovely garden at the end. From the white cottage Olivia could glimpse the sea, and winter and summer for twelve years its distant murmur had seemed to whisper some message to her from the lost lover of her youth.

Now she tossed aside her hat and sat in the window overlooking the sea. The mahogany box was in her lap, and her shapely fingers rested lightly upon it.

The box was heavy. Something moved about within it. Very likely it had not been opened since Zebedee went away to sea. Olivia recollected that Zebedee had told her that his dying mother had given him her workbox for his very own, and he had whispered that he kept Olivia's letters in it and a curl of her hair and the first roses she had ever given him.

Then all at once Zebedee had gone away to sea.

Without a word to Olivia he had left her, and Ada Paine, who was in love with her handsome young cousin, had whispered here and there that Zeb was tired of Olivia and was taking that way of getting out of his engagement.

Olivia was thinking of all these things as she sat there alone, looking at the sea, with the mahogany box in her lap.

Presently she looked down at the box without a key.

"I wonder," she said dreamily; "I wonder if he took my letters when he went away or if he left them behind?"

She went to a small table, and from the drawer she took a bunch of keys of assorted sizes. Finally one tiny twisted key fitted into the little lock. The bolt moved, and in response to Olivia's touch the cover of the box was raised.

For a long time she sat staring down at the contents of the mahogany box. They were so unexpected.

Instead of a bundle of old creased and yellowed love letters there was a little heap of unopened letters. Some were the letters she had written to Zebedee during the winter she spent with her aunt in Lansing, and others were his letters which she had never received because they had never passed through the postoffice, and it was on her return to Wayboro that she learned that Zebedee had gone away and that she was jilted. At that time Ada Paine had been assisting in the postoffice during spare time from her duties as her Uncle Zebedee's housekeeper.

Olivia wondered if there was any connection between the two circumstances.

There was the evidence that Zebedee had written to her. He had been faithful, and at last convinced of her fickleness he had gone away to sea to lose his life in a shipwreck.

From her seat in the window Olivia could look down the grassy road, and presently she saw Ada Paine's short, dumpy form hurrying toward the cottage.

Olivia gathered up the letters and concealed them in a locked trunk in the spare room. Then she made her way downstairs in time to open the door to Ada Paine's insistent rapping.

"Will you come in?" asked Olivia stiffly.

"Yes," panted Ada Paine as she hurried into the sitting room. Her black eyes darted here and there and finally rested on the mahogany box.

She crossed the room and held the box close to her breast.

"How dare you come to my house and buy this?" she demanded fiercely.

Olivia surveyed her coolly.

"It was a public auction. I had a perfect right to attend and to buy anything that was put up for sale."

"This is a mistake. It was not intended to be sold. It is mine—my personal property." There was anxious inquiry in Ada's sharp eyes as she looked at the pale, composed face of the woman she had wronged.

"If it is your box, Ada," said Olivia, "why does it contain letters that belong to me—letters that I never received from your Cousin Zeb, letters that he never received from me—why?"

Ada Paine gazed in horror at Olivia.

For a long time they stood thus. They did not hear footsteps approaching by the grassy road and enter the house by an open side door.

"Ada, why did you suppress my letters to Zeb? Why did you withhold my letters to him? I never could understand his desertion. I believed him fickle, and he was true to me, and, Ada Paine, you have much to answer for. I loved Zebedee Paine, and he went to his death believing me to be false to him!" Olivia's self control wavered. A voice came from the doorway—a man's deep throated tones, thrilling with emotion.

"No, Olivia, I didn't go to my death. I am very much alive, dear. Thank God, I have returned in time to save my old home and, what is more precious, my sweetheart, my only love!"

Olivia turned to find herself in the arms of a handsome middle aged Zebedee, sun browned under tropic skies, where he had been held prisoner by a savage tribe of south sea islanders for the past three years, so that his self enforced exile had become actual imprisonment.

While he whispered in Olivia's willing ear the wretched woman who had so foully shadowed their lives suddenly dropped the mahogany box and fled from the house.

And it was [illegible] that the years of separation [illegible] embittered their hearts that [illegible] Zebedee made haste to find [illegible] assure her of their forgiveness.

And Wayboro people agog over these sudden happenings, whispered that when Olivia Deering bought the mahogany workbox she certainly had found a prize package, but this they could only guess because of the resultant happiness for all concerned, for no word of these things ever passed the lips of Olivia or her husband or their much chastened cousin.

INDIAN LIFE.

Priceless Records of Canadian Artists Now In Ontario Museum.

On the walls of two of the large rooms of the new Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto, there is spread out a history of Indian life in Canada on canvas, which forms one of the most valuable treasures of which the city can boast. They are the combined paintings of Paul Kane, Edmund Morris, and John Catlin, the gift to Toronto of Sir Edmund Osler, and there are 190 paintings in all. Many of these have hung until recently on the walls of University College, where they were not so accessible to the Toronto public as their broad historic value deserves.

They are a prairie breeze medley of G. A. Henty and Fennimore Cooper, with only two detractions. One is their sad lack of heart interest; only one squaw being visible, and that one absolutely impossible. The other is that they are evidently historically accurate.

In the sixty-odd paintings by Edmund Morris, the student of physiognomy may form a different theory as to the origin of Lo, the poor Indian, each time he wanders past. All of these paintings are life portraits of Chieftains of the Plains Tribes. When remembered that evolutionists are already preparing to say good-bye to the last redman as he steps off into the setting sun, the value of these splendid portraits to future Canada will be seen.

First are the Blackfoot Indians, and their terribly slanted foreheads have the stamp of the negroid races. In the race of the Crees are the high-bridged [illegible] identical with the race which takes all our sneers and our money back to Jerusalem, while the slanted eyebrows, long, sharp eyes, and high cheekbones of the Assiniboine tribes only need a coating of powder to pose for Japan.

And over all the faces is the black tragedy of the people who asked no mercy because they showed none, and who froze, starved, or burned themselves to the Happy Hunting Grounds in gloomy calm and dignity, until the white man brought the fire-water.

"Stapledlamsink," is the name of one solemn-eyed Cree person, and this on being translated reads: "Slow coming over the hill," but it was probably the name which delayed him. "Man Sitting in the Middle of the Sun," "Man Standing Above Ground," and "Man Who Ties the Knot," are some others of the chiefs represented, but the face of one called "Pound Maker," unless the artist idealized it, carries all the poetry and blackness of the Indians' losing game in his fathomless eyes.

Apart from the historic value, the paintings of Morris are splendidly executed, very little dress detail being used, lest it detract from the centre theme, the spirit of the Indian race.

The Paul Kane pictures of life among the Indians make it very evident that these artists lived for years with the Indian tribes to become imbued with their life. They breathe the open air of the larger Canada. Few of them are remarkable from the artists' viewpoint, but they all lean together and shout "Canada" till the walls fade away and you hear running water chanting through little rocky crevices and over sheer rocks while the sun weaves rainbows through its thin green mist. Then crouched in the grass, just safe, you watch the wide red tongue of flame lick the green covering from the prairies. "Indian Summer" can almost stand up for criticism, with a brown mist of water, grey-green frost-bitten meadows, and a wet pink, mournful sky.

Olivia's Prize Package

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The red auction flag fluttered from a tree over the front gate and told to the village of Wayboro that the household effects of the late Zebedee Paine would be sold to the highest bidder.

Ada Paine, a niece of the dead man and his only known representative and heir, was here, there and everywhere, whispering a word of advice to one concerning some especially choice article, finding a comfortable seat for some good gossip of the neighborhood or detailing her own future plans to an interested group of listeners.

Miss Paine had been Zebedee's housekeeper for fifteen years preceding his death. It was Ada who had soothed the old man's last hours, and some people said that Ada Paine was now reaping the reward for which she had so ardently labored. Others said that young Zebedee Paine would never have left home and lost his life in the sea if it had not been for his black eyed cousin Ada's sharp tongue.

Olivia Deering walked slowly up the path and bent her head to enter the low, old fashioned doorway. She was a tall, stately woman with abundant brown hair lightly flecked with gray at the temples; her skin was clear and rosy and her hazel eyes shining and lustrous. She wore a simple white lawn dress and a plain hat.

People turned and stared and nodded at Olivia, and many of them wondered how many years had passed since Olivia had been under that roof. It was known that once she had called to see old Mr. Paine concerning the reported death of his son, and it was rumored that Olivia had not been permitted to see old Zebedee and that Ada Paine had sent her away with burning cheeks and anguished eyes.

"THANK GOD, I HAVE RETURNED IN TIME!"

Since then Olivia Deering and Ada Paine had not been on speaking terms.

Now Ada's black brows drew together in a frown when she saw Olivia's dignified form moving through the crowd.

"I expect likely she wants to buy some of little Zebedee's belongings for a keepsake," tittered Louise Ramsell, the sharp tongued village dressmaker.

"There ain't going to be any personal belongings put under the hammer," said Ada hastily, not knowing that at that very moment the auctioneer's zealous assistant had just dug out from a hiding place in the garret an old mahogany workbox which had belonged to Mrs. Zebedee Paine and which Ada had hidden there herself long years ago.

And in the next room to the one in which Ada was now whispering to Louise Ramsell Olivia Deering was watching the auctioneer with a pallid face as he held the mahogany workbox high in the air above the curious crowd.

"And now this here mahogany box, locked fast, to be sold sight unseen. What am I offered?"

As in a dream Olivia lived the next few moments. She heard her own voice bidding steadily against that of some unknown person. For some unexplainable reason she wanted that workbox more than anything in the world. Then, because Wayboro folk preferred to know just what they were buying and very many of them possessed ancient workboxes similar to the one offered for sale, the other bidder dropped out, and Olivia found herself the possessor of it for the sum of $3.40.

Somehow after this purchase Olivia's interest in the sale ended, and, wrapping the box in her light summer shawl, she left the house. Her tall, graceful form hurried up the street, turned at a corner and went up a grassy road, where her little white painted cottage stood in a lovely garden at the end. From the white cottage Olivia could glimpse the sea, and winter and summer for twelve years its distant murmur had seemed to whisper some message to her from the lost lover of her youth.

Now she tossed aside her hat and sat in the window overlooking the sea. The mahogany box was in her lap, and her shapely fingers rested lightly upon it.

The box was heavy. Something moved about within it. Very likely it had not been opened since Zebedee went away to sea. Olivia recollected that Zebedee had told her that his dying mother had given him her workbox for his very own, and he had whispered that he kept Olivia's letters in it and a curl of her hair and the first roses she had ever given him.

Then all at once Zebedee had gone away to sea.

Without a word to Olivia he had left her, and Ada Paine, who was in love with her handsome young cousin, had whispered here and there that Zeb was tired of Olivia and was taking that way of getting out of his engagement.

Olivia was thinking of all these things as she sat there alone, looking at the sea, with the mahogany box in her lap.

Presently she looked down at the box without a key.

"I wonder," she said dreamily; "I wonder if he took my letters when he went away or if he left them behind?"

She went to a small table, and from the drawer she took a bunch of keys of assorted sizes. Finally one tiny twisted key fitted into the little lock. The bolt moved, and in response to Olivia's touch the cover of the box was raised.

For a long time she sat staring down at the contents of the mahogany box. They were so unexpected.

Instead of a bundle of old creased and yellowed love letters there was a little heap of unopened letters. Some were the letters she had written to Zebedee during the winter she spent with her aunt in Lansing, and others were his letters which she had never received because they had never passed through the postoffice, and it was on her return to Wayboro that she learned that Zebedee had gone away and that she was jilted. At that time Ada Paine had been assisting in the postoffice during spare time from her duties as her Uncle Zebedee's housekeeper.

Olivia wondered if there was any connection between the two circumstances.

There was the evidence that Zebedee had written to her. He had been faithful, and at last convinced of her fickleness he had gone away to sea to lose his life in a shipwreck.

From her seat in the window Olivia could look down the grassy road, and presently she saw Ada Paine's short, dumpy form hurrying toward the cottage.

Olivia gathered up the letters and concealed them in a locked trunk in the spare room. Then she made her way downstairs in time to open the door to Ada Paine's insistent rapping.

"Will you come in?" asked Olivia stiffly.

"Yes," panted Ada Paine as she hurried into the sitting room. Her black eyes darted here and there and finally rested on the mahogany box.

She crossed the room and held the box close to her breast.

"How dare you come to my house and buy this?" she demanded fiercely.

Olivia surveyed her coolly.

"It was a public auction. I had a perfect right to attend and to buy anything that was put up for sale."

"This is a mistake. It was not intended to be sold. It is mine—my personal property." There was anxious inquiry in Ada's sharp eyes as she looked at the pale, composed face of the woman she had wronged.

"If it is your box, Ada," said Olivia, "why does it contain letters that belong to me—letters that I never received from your Cousin Zeb, letters that he never received from me—why?"

Ada Paine gazed in horror at Olivia.

For a long time they stood thus. They did not hear footsteps approaching by the grassy road and enter the house by an open side door.

"Ada, why did you suppress my letters to Zeb? Why did you withhold my letters to him? I never could understand his desertion. I believed him fickle, and he was true to me, and, Ada Paine, you have much to answer for. I loved Zebedee Paine, and he went to his death believing me to be false to him!" Olivia's self control wavered. A voice came from the doorway—a man's deep throated tones, thrilling with emotion.

"No, Olivia, I didn't go to my death. I am very much alive, dear. Thank God, I have returned in time to save my old home and, what is more precious, my sweetheart, my only love!"

Olivia turned to find herself in the arms of a handsome middle aged Zebedee, sun browned under tropic skies, where he had been held prisoner by a savage tribe of south sea islanders for the past three years, so that his self enforced exile had become actual imprisonment.

While he whispered in Olivia's willing ear the wretched woman who had so foully shadowed their lives suddenly dropped the mahogany box and fled from the house.

And it was a sign that the years of separation had not embittered their hearts that Olivia and Zebedee made haste to find Ada and to assure her of their forgiveness.

And Wayboro people, agog over these sudden happenings, whispered that when Olivia Deering bought the mahogany workbox she certainly had found a prize package, but this they could only guess because of the resultant happiness for all concerned, for no word of these things ever passed the lips of Olivia or her husband or their much chastened cousin.

Most of us think we know a lot of people that his satanic majesty doesn't have

INDIAN LIFE.

Priceless Records of Canadian Artists Now in Ontario Museum.

On the walls of two of the large rooms of the new Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto, there is spread out a history of Indian life in Canada on canvas, which forms one of the most valuable treasures of which the city can boast. They are the combined paintings of Paul Kane, Edmund Morris, and John Catlin, the gift to Toronto of Sir Edmund Osler, and there are 190 paintings in all. Many of these have hung until recently on the walls of University College, where they were not so accessible to the Toronto public as their broad historic value deserves.

They are a prairie breeze medley of G. A. Henty and Fennimore Cooper, with only two detractions. One is their sad lack of heart interest; only one squaw being visible, and that one absolutely impossible. The other is that they are evidently historically accurate.

In the sixty-odd paintings by Edmund Morris, the student of physiognomy may form a different theory as to the origin of Lo, the poor Indian, each time he wanders past. All of these paintings are life portraits of Chieftains of the Plains Tribes. When remembered that evolutionists are already preparing to say good-bye to the last redman as he steps off into the setting sun, the value of these splendid portraits to future Canada will be seen.

First are the Blackfoot Indians, and their terribly slanted foreheads have the stamp of the negroid races. In the race of the Crees are the high-bridged noses identical with the race which takes all our sneers and our money back to Jerusalem, while the slanted eyebrows, long, sharp eyes, and high cheekbones of the Assiniboine tribes only need a coating of powder to pose for Japan.

And over all the faces is the black tragedy of the people who asked no mercy because they showed none, and who froze, starved, or burned themselves to the Happy Hunting Grounds in gloomy calm and dignity, until the white man brought the fire-water.

"Stapledlamsink," is the name of one solemn-eyed Cree person, and this on being translated reads: "Slow coming over the hill," but it was probably the name which delayed him. "Man Sitting in the Middle of the Sun," "Man Standing Above Ground," and "Man Who Ties the Knot," are some others of the chiefs represented, but the face of one called "Pound Maker," unless the artist idealized it, carries all the poetry and blackness of the Indians' losing game in his fathomless eyes.

Apart from the historic value, the paintings of Morris are splendidly executed, very little dress detail being used, lest it detract from the centre theme, the spirit of the Indian race.

The Paul Kane pictures of life among the Indians make it very evident that these artists lived for years with the Indian tribes to become imbued with their life. They breathe the open air of the larger Canada. Few of them are remarkable from the artists' viewpoint, but they all lean together and shout "Canada" till the walls fade away and you hear running water chasing through little rocky crevices and over sheer rocks while the sun weaves rainbows through its thin green mist. Then crouched in the grass, just safe, you watch the wide red tongue of flame lick the green covering from the prairies. "Indian Summer" can almost stand up for criticism, with a brown mist of water, grey-green frost-bitten meadows, and a wet pink, mournful sky.

AMERICAN TROOPS TO AID NAVY

United States War Department Will Send Force to Vera Cruz

Embargo Against Shipment of Arms and Ammunition Into Mexico Is Put Into Force Again—Gen. Frederick Funston of Aguinaldo Fame Will Be In Charge of Forces Sent to Mexican Port.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—United States troops moved last night to reinforce the American navy at Vera Cruz; the embargo on arms into Mexico was formally restored, and troops were ordered to the Mexican border primarily to relieve uneasiness among border residents, but also as a precaution against hostile military operations along the international lines. Secretary Garrison announced that a brigade of infantry and some artillery under Brig.-Gen. Frederick Funston, who made a reputation in the war in the Philippines, had been ordered to embark on the four army transports at Galveston for Vera Cruz to support the expeditionary forces of marines and bluejackets there. The chance that Gen. Maas, the Federal general, might make a return attack on Vera Cruz with reinforcements, and the possible necessity of a forward movement toward Mexico City to protect fleeing Americans and the Vera Cruz railroad, were the underlying reasons for the military movement.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL FUNSTON.

Rear-Admiral Badger has requested and obtained, it is reported, permission to capture all Mexican gunboats and vessels carrying troops or ammunition for the aid of the Mexicans around Vera Cruz.

The restoration of the embargo on arms was officially announced after the pronouncement of Gen. Carranza, the Constitutionalist chief, that he regarded the seizure of Vera Cruz as a violation of Mexican sovereignty, had been considered by the Administration. While Mexican Constitutionalists here protested that Carranza's real attitude was friendly, the American Government decided to take no chances, and abruptly stopped the shipment of all arms into Mexico.

President Wilson early in the day had issued a statement warning Gen. Carranza, the Constitutionalist chief; that the United States was dealing now and would continue to deal with those whom Huerta commands, and "those who come to his support." Both Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American Charge d'Affaires, and Senor Algara, the Charge d'Affaires of the Mexican Embassy here, have been given their passports, thus severing diplomatic relations between the Government and Mexico. This is not regarded by the Washington Government as presaging war, but a declaration of war by Huerta would not be unexpected.

During the day a special reserve fleet, ranging from Dreadnoughts to tiny gunboats, was ordered to the Atlantic coast of Mexico. No fighting of any consequence was reported from Vera Cruz. The American land forces pushed their way three miles inland to some important breastworks to make their position secure. Rear Admiral Fletcher and American Consul Canada were occupied most of the day in Vera Cruz handling hundreds of American refugees. British and German vessels took off more than 1,200 refugees at Tampico, and a general exodus of Americans from Mexican cities was reported.

ENGLISH PAPERS SARCASTIC.

Surprise at Carranza's Note Not Creditable to U. S. Statesmen.

LONDON, April 24. — The London morning papers comment in an ironical vein on the dealings of President Wilson and Secretary Bryan with Mexico.

The Post says:

"They ought carefully to have considered what sort and size of war they wanted before they allowed shots to be fired. President Wilson is now at war with both halves of the Mexican people. How by that war he can give the Mexicans the self-government that seems to him desirable we cannot imagine."

The Daily News says:

"If the Washington Government was really surprised at Carranza's ultimatum, its surprise is not very creditable to its statesmanship and intelligence."

The fountain of eternal youth

But I would like some stuff, forsooth,
To keep my hair from falling out.

BRYSON, QUE., FIRE-SWEPT.

Twenty-Eight Stores and Dwellings Burned—Loss $65,000.

OTTAWA, April 24.—The business section of Bryson, Que., the county seat for Pontiac, was wiped out last night by a conflagration, which, starting in Goddands' hotel at the end of Main street, early yesterday morning, swept the entire street, destroying twenty-eight stores and dwellings and entailing a loss of $65,000.

Owing to the absence of any fire fighting apparatus the residents were unable to stop the progress of the flames, which swept the whole street, with the exception of the courthouse and a couple of other buildings.

Over thirty families have been rendered homeless, and tents and provisions are being rushed from Portage Du Fort, Campbell's Bay, Shawville to the stricken town. All telegraph and telephone wires were burned down and communication was completely cut off.

Blaze at Kingsville.

KINGSVILLE, Ont., April 24. — A serious fire which broke out in the business district of Kingsville did much damage to half a dozen business places and for a time threatened to become general. The flames were first discovered by the night watchman in the Hart Block, on the south side of Mann street, and he promptly gave the alarm. Hard work by the volunteer fire department confined the flames to the one block, but the loss will, it is estimated, amount to between $20,000 and $30,000, most of which is covered by insurance.

The principal losers are: Herman Ulch, harness shop; Pearsall's photograph studio; Sherman's restaurant, and Hart estate. The cause of the fire is unknown.

A Haileybury Fire.

HAILEYBURY, Ont., April 24.—The Wright Block, in Main street, the temporary quarters of the Judicial offices of the district of Timiskaming, caught fire, causing a loss of several thousand dollars, and gutting the building. In this building were situated the offices of Sheriff Caldbick and Registrar T. J. Meagher, on the ground floor, and of Judge Hartman, Crown Attorney F. L. Smiley, Magistrate S. Atkinson, and other offices on the second storey. The basement is used as a bonded room by Hamilton & Co., liquor dealers. The Wright Block is of concrete block construction and was built after the fire of August, 1906.

Threatened to Quit Queen's If Leonard's Offer Was Accepted.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 24.—It is reported that Major R. W. Leanard will not make any further concessions in regard to his military training offer to Queen's University. He insists upon the board being composed of six members, three military and three academic. Queen's has been holding out for a majority of academic members on the board. It is said that Major Leonard wants to have some control of the scheme for two or three years in order to get it on a good basis.

At a meeting of the University trustees on the 29th, it is expected that the offer will be accepted.

BILL IS NOW COMPLETE

Redistribution Does Not Please the Opposition However.

Mr. Rowell Objects to Allotment of Ridings and When Resolutions Are Voted Down In Committee Threatens to Obstruct Measure In the House — Hydro Radial Bill Gets Second Reading.

TORONTO, April 24.—In the final draft of the redistribution bill to be submitted to the House only two new changes have been made. Strathroy will remain in North Essex and will not be shifted to West Essex as first proposed, and the Town of Port Dalhousie will go into East Lincoln instead of into West Lincoln.

At the last meeting of the committee yesterday Mr. Rowell and his supporters objected to the new plans of the Bruce ridings. They said that the Liberals were being hived and that no necessity for any change existed. The proposed change, they said, figured on Conservative majorities. "Simply penalizing the county because at the last election it committed the crime of returning three Liberals," said Mr. Rowell.

In reply, Hon. Mr. Lucas said that the same could be said of the treatment to Conservatives in Kent and Lambton.

Mr. Rowell, in opposing the "A" and "B" seating system in Toronto, read extracts from papers, and said that the Liberals were not getting a chance. Each member should have a seat of his own.

He pointed to the Greys as a further example of where the Government was unfairly strengthening its position. In the Victorias the Liberal candidates also were having their chances imperilled.

With all of these objections the Opposition submitted resolutions of amendment, which were voted down by the committee. Mr. Rowell said he would obstruct the passage of the bill in the House.

Hon. Adam Beck in the Legislature last evening expanded further on the proposals regarding the Hydro-radial systems.

Mr. Beck began his remarks by stating that the Liberals, although they much desired to claim credit in furthering the cause of publicly-owned power, had stood aside when they were needed mst. The demand for radials had followed the remarkable success of the power system. In the new arrangement the promoter and his kind would be avoided, and the commission bond guarantees would finance the municipalities to the last dollar invested. The latter would pass bylaws asking the commission to submit estimates as to construction, revenue and other matters and the people would vote before anything was done.

Messrs. Rowell and Proudfoot expressed cordial support of the bill, but said the Opposition was entitled to considerable credit for it. They could see that Mr. Beck had converted some backward colleagues before he was allowed to bring in his bill.

The second reading of the radial bill then passed.

tawa water bill for first reading. He explained the two systems to be tried and that immediate action had been requested.

British Steamer In Ice.

HALIFAX, N.S., April 24. — The British steamer Glencliffe, from Cardiff, Wales, to Chatham, N.B., is in a dangerous position in the ice off Port Hastings, Cape Breton.

VILLA NOT CONSULTED.

He Repudiates Intention To Join Huerta Against U. S.

EL PASO, Texas, April 24. — Gen. Francisco Villa, head of the rebel military forces, informed George C. Carothers, special agent of the State Department, that he will decline to be dragged into a war with the United States by anybody.

"Why," he smiled, "all Europe would laugh at us if we went to war with you. They would say that 'little drunkard, Huerta, has drawn them into a tangle at last'."

Villa said he was not consulted in the drafting of the Carranza note transmitted to Secretary Bryan Wednesday night, and which was regarded as somewhat hostile in tone.

Carothers took supper with Villa and canvassed the situation thoroughly.

"Honest," said the rebel general, "I hope the Americans bottle up Vera Cruz so tight they can't ever get water into it. Your admiral is doing something it would have taken us a long time to accomplish, if we could have accomplished it at all."

Has Broken With Carranza?

JUAREZ, April 24.—Gen. Pancho Villa's presence here, his statements, which have been issued without qualification and with absolute frankness, and his contradiction of Gen. Carranza's position, have caused the well-founded report to originate here that he and Carranza have at last broken over matters of policy, and Villa has taken the destiny of his revolution in his own hands and has come to the border to learn the facts, to talk with his American friends, and to let the American people know just how he feels without the enshrouding fog of diplomatic words.

Mission For Navvies.

What an interesting man Mr. J. M. McCormick, head of the Navvy Mission in Canada, is. Mr. McCormick is at present in London endeavoring to raise $100,000 for his praiseworthy mission, says a London paper. As he put it to me, "In Canada the navvy is the man that faces death, disasters, and mutilation every day to build the lines that pays the investor's dividends. I want just a little share of those dividends to send out another dozen missionaries and a few hospitals." And I am glad to learn that Mr. McCormick is in a fair way of accomplishing his object.

A WORD OF ADVICE TO BRITISH TRAVELLERS

LONON, April 24.—Special—"The complaint I have to make against English travellers, who come to Canada," said Mr. H. I. Logan, former M. P. for Cumberland County, N. S., on his recent visit to London, "is that they come by way of New York, and if they do go further west than Winnipeg, they keep on to Vancouver. Thus they completely miss the Maritime Provinces, and they do not see the great empire that lies north of Saskatchewan and Alberta. If Englishmen travelled more in Canada, there would be less pessimism talked about the Dominion, and less fear expressed about its going ahead too fast." Mr. Logan was twelve years a member of Parliament for Cumberland County, N. S., in the Dominion House of Commons.

"LYNCH HER" MOB CRIED

Woman Insulted Old Glory at I.W.W. Meeting

NEW YORK, April 23.—Under the command of Police Commissioner Woods half in Park Row fer police reserves strove for an hour and a half in Park Row this afternoon to protect I.W.W. orators from injury. The orators, one of whom was Becky Edelsohn, who became an I.W.W. heroine by throwing her arms around "Wild Joe" O'Carroll when he was beaten by the police in a riot in Union Square, were intent upon denouncing the United States flag as something not worth going to war for, or defending under any conditions.

Police had to hold off 3,000 infuriated persons who surged up to the Franklin statue determined to mob the speakers for their remarks. The meeting ended when the police became exhausted from pushing the crowd back and arrested two of the orators on charges of disorderly conduct. Miss Edelsohn and Sam Hartman, the prisoners, were released in the custody of their counsel to await a hearing tomorrow morning.

"It is all a frame-up by the capitalists in which the blood of good working men will be spilled to protect the investments in Mexico of Hearst, Rockefeller and the Guggenheims."

This was the assertion on the part of the woman orator, which started the near riot. Cries of "Lynch her," "Kill the I.W.W.," and similar outbursts from the quickly gathering mob brought the police on the run. The crowd was further infuriated when the speakers called them "cowardly tools of the wealthy."

FANNING THE SAILS

CONTRARY TO NATURAL LAW.

As a Matter of Fact, the Force of the Air Driven Against the Canvas Would Have a Tendency to Send the Vessel Backward Instead of Forward.

"If an electric fan could be made large enough to throw a sufficient amount of wind to move a small sailboat and such a fan was placed on the end of a boat with the wind from the fan blowing against the sail on the very boat the fan is on, is it possible that it could move the boat? The argument is that the fan, being on the same boat as the sail, cannot move itself. But as the air detaches itself from the fan and hits the sail, my idea is that it can, provided it has the strength to move the boat. Please give an answer."

This question is worth answering because it involves a principle of physics that ought to be universally understood and ignorance of which may lead to the waste of both time and money upon inventions that will not work.

The writer of the question thinks that because the air, as she expresses it, is "detached from" the fan when it starts off to strike the sail, it ought to act like an ordinary wind and push the boat before it. But she would not think so if she reflected that the particles of air driven from the fan resemble a swarm of bullets shot from a gun.

The air particles get their force from the fan as the bullets get theirs from the gun, and just as the gun recoils with a force equal to that which it imparts to the bullets, so the fan, whether driven by electricity or steam or turned by hand, inevitably recoils with the same amount of force that it imparts to the air.

To make clearer the comparison between a stream of bullets from a gun and a stream of wind from an electric fan, imagine a Maxim gun placed at the rear of a boat and an impenetrable target at the front, and then suppose that the gun should hurl a continuous current of bullets against the target. Anybody can see that the boat would not be driven forward, because the recoil of the gun would constantly force it backward with the same energy with which the bullets, striking the target, forced it ahead.

But if the gun were placed on shore or on another support its stream of bullets striking the target would drive the boat forward, because then their effect would be like that of a wind blowing freely across the water and having no connection with anything on the boat.

An ordinary wind is able to drive a boat whose sail it strikes because its reaction (that of the wind) is not upon the boat, but upon the great mass of the atmosphere or upon the earth.

The principle to be remembered, and ignorance or forgetfulness of which has cost the happiness of more than one uneducated inventor's life, is that no mechanical force can be produced without an expenditure of energy precisely equivalent. Never forget that there can be no action without equal reaction and that if the action takes its origin within the limits of the thing that is acted upon the reaction will also be felt within those same limits.

Your electric fan would drive a toy vessel placed on the deck of your boat, although it would not drive the boat itself, because, with regard to the toy vessel, the breeze from the fan would have an independent origin, like an ordinary wind blowing over a lake, and its reaction would not be upon the toy, but upon the boat over whose deck the toy glided.

If you are inside a car and push upon the car you cannot move it as you could if you stood upon the ground outside and pushed. In the first case your action and reaction are both upon the car, but in the second case the action is upon the car and the reaction upon the ground outside. The same thing happens if you suspend a bar above your head and lift yourself by pulling down on it, and afterward put the bar under your feet and try to lift yourself by pulling up on it. You succeed in lifting yourself in the first case, but you fail in the second, because when the bar is under your feet the force of your pull reacts upon your own body and urges it down just as much as up.

There is one effect of the electric fan which might surprise you—it would tend to drive your boat backward instead of forward. It would push against air like the propeller of an aeroplane, and to make it drive your boat forward you would have to face the fan around, so that its reaction would be upon the atmosphere behind instead of ahead of the boat, and in either case your sail would be not only useless but an encumbrance.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

Correcting the Judge.

"Do I understand you to say," asked the judge, "that his remarks were acrimonious?"

"No, judge, your honor; I didn't say that. I said he just swore at me. I ain't agoin' to claim that he done what he didn't do."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-west Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

Popular Judgment of Genius.

Fabre's first entomological work gained the honors of the Institute of France and a prize for experimental physiology. His extraordinary absorption in his entomological pursuits was a source of perplexity to those among whom he dwelt. One morning he was passed by three women vintagers on their way to work. When they passed him again at sunset he was still seated on the same stone, with his eyes fixed on the same spot, whereupon he saw one of them tap her forehead as she whispered, "A poor innocent." But more than one country guard suspected that he was up to no good in his mysterious wanderings about the countryside. However, the sight of the little dark ribbon of the Legion of Honor, with which he had been decorated by the French government, was generally sufficient to allay suspicion.—Westminster Gazette.

Hail to the Chief!

Jones had not wanted to go to the gregarious feast where the speeches strung out endlessly. Circumstances obliged him to stay. The speeches were strung out partly because the chief and dullest orator was not expected until late. Finally he came, and there was a rush of committeemen to escort him to his place.

"Hello!" exclaimed Jones' companion, "what is that they are making such a pother about?"

NATURAL ELECTRICITY.

Tapping the Air For It a Problem That Baffles Science.

In answering the question, "Is the prophecy that 'went the rounds' about twenty years ago that some way of 'tapping nature' and thus securing unlimited supplies of electricity from air or from space coming true?" Edgar Lucien Larkin in the New York American says:

The nearest approach to the great work of tapping nature's unlimited store of electricity is the act allowing irrigating streams from high mountains to turn turbine generators over and over again in different power plants along down the sides of the mountains and then after securing all mechanical work of gravitation secure growing work in the growth of food plants. This is the height at present of human skill in the work of "tapping nature."

Windmills turning armatures is another way of tapping. And the capture of water in tides, using the force of outflow, is still another. We still have the dynamos with us. We must turn armatures with their polar fields of magnetic lines.

We must use running water or flowing winds to tap nature or burn carbon under boilers, which is too expensive and prosaic to be called the high art of tapping, as one would turn a faucet.

I suppose my correspondent means just tapping a free supply. This auspicious event has not arrived unless using solar engines is tapping. Heat reflected by mirrors directly from the noonday sun upon boilers has been made to generate steam and turn armatures.

Another way of tapping is to allow the sun to shine on thermo electric piles, unions of ends of bars of unlike metals.

What my friend evidently wants is electricity as cheap as air, water and sunlight. This really is the dream of electricians. Since nothing exists but electrons, and these are electricity, it does seem that we ought to get all we want for nothing by merely taking or tapping the supply. But Edison, Thomson, Rutherford and Tesla and Steinmetz have not blazed the way into this unknown problem of the ages.

I have no doubt that man will make this conquest, for the mind phasing in man is illimitable.

NEW ZEALAND'S GUM MINES.

Gathering a Harvest That Ripened Ages and Ages Ago.

Gum digging in New Zealand offers one of the most unusual and interesting forms of labor, partly because of the ease with which the work may be carried on and partly because it is said New Zealand is the only country where gum digging is done.

Originally the gum which is now brought to light came from the kauri tree, which is now scarce, but ages ago great forests of it probably covered most of the northern part of the North island. These forests were swept away by fire, and today the landscape is mostly low brown hills with occasional swamps. Gum burns very easily, but such as was covered by the dank forest debris escaped the fire.

Hardened and preserved through uncountable ages, this is the gum the gum digger seeks today. By paying 5 shillings a year he may wander and dig where he likes over enormous areas of government lands. All that is required is a kind of spear to locate the gum, a spade to dig it and a bag to put it in. At night it is scraped and sorted, according to size and quality.

"In digging," says a writer in Pearson's Magazine, "you enjoy all the excitement of gambling without incurring the sin. And then to work for yourself when you like, where you like and how you like is delightful beyond belief. Also you are free to live as your fancy turns and to have as many friends as you wish or as few."

The climate is pleasant, and the returns from the work, though not financially great, ranging from $1.75 a day upward, are perhaps all that the enterprise warrants.

Wheels In a Watch.

The main wheel in an ordinary American watch makes four revolutions a day of twenty-four hours, or 1,460 in a year; next, the center wheel, 24 revolutions in a day, or 8,760 in a year; the third wheel, 192 in a day, or 59,080 in a year; the fourth wheel, 2,440 in a day, or 543,000 in a year; the fifth, or scape wheel, 12,960 in a day, or 4,729,200 in a year. The ticks or beats are 388,800 in a day, or 141,882,000 in a year.—Milwaukee Free Press.

Music and Medicine.

A reporter asked an opera manager one day if he believed in the new therapeutic idea that music was a medicine. "Believe in it? Of course I do," the impresario replied. "I know at least three operas that are a drug on the market, while as for popular songs there isn't one of them that doesn't make me ill."

His Luck.

"Don't you know that your husband is walking the floor because of his debts?"

"Isn't it fortunate?" replied young Mrs. Torkins sweetly. "You know the doctor said that Charlie simply must take more exercise."—Washington Star.

Perhaps It Would.

Under the Table.

It is surprising what a lot of useful space is usually allowed to go to waste under the kitchen table. Why should it not be utilized? Brass hooks screwed into the under side of the wood might be used to support pails and other cumbersome and not exactly sightly utensils, which are allowed to stand about, getting in one's way, and making the kitchen look untidy.

Vol. 47 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, APRIL 24, 1914. No. 297

"RUN TO EARTH"

By the Author of
"Lady Audley's Secret," "Aurora Floyd," etc., etc.

"Yes, Honoria, the story of an old man's love for a woman young enough to be his daughter. I was sitting by my cheerless fire-side, meditating very gloomily upon the events of the day, which had been a sad one for me, when your thrilling tones stole upon my ear, and roused me out of my reverie. I listened to every note of that old ballad. Although those words had long been familiar to me, they seemed new and strange that night. An irrestible impluse led me to the spot where you had sunk down in your helplessness. From that hour to this you have been the ruling influence of my life. I have loved you with a devotion which few men have power to feel. Tell me, Honoria, have I loved in vain? The happiness of my life trembles in the balance. It is for you to decide whether my existence henceforward is to be worthless to me, or whether I am to be the proudest and happiest of men."

"Would my love make you happy, Sir Oswald?"

"Unutterably happy."

"Then it is yours."

"You love me—in spite of the difference between our ages?"

"Yes, Sir Oswald, I honor and love you with all my heart", answered Honoria Milford. "Whom have I seen so worthy of a woman's affections? From the first hour in which some guardian angel threw me across your pathway, what have seen in you but nobility of soul and generosity of heart? Is it strange, therefore, if my gratitude has ripened into love."

"Honoria", mumured Sir Oswald, bending over the drooping head, and pressing his lips gently on the pure brow—"Honoria, you have made me too happy. I can scarcely believe that this happiness is not some dream, which will melt away presently, and leave me alone and desolate—the fool of my own fancy."

He led Honoria back towards the house. Even in this moment of supreme happiness he was obliged to remember Miss Beaumont, who would, no doubt, be lurking somewhere on the watch for her pupil.

"Then you will give up all thought of a professional career, Honoria?" said the baronet, as they walked slowly back.

"I will obey you in everything."

"My dearest girl— and when you leave this house, you will leave it as Lady Eversleigh."

Miss Beaumont was waiting in the drawing room, and was evidently somewhat astonished by the duration of the interview between Sir Oswald and her pupil.

"You have been admiring the grounds, I see, Sir Oswald", she said, very graciously. "It is not quite usual for a gentleman visitor and a pupil to promenade the grounds tete-a-tet; but I suppose, in the case of a gentleman of your time of life, we must relax the severity of our rules in some measure."

The baronet bowed stiffly. A man of fifty does not care to be reminded of his time of life at the very moment he has just been accepted as the husband of a girl of nineteen.

"It may, perhaps, be the last opportunity which I may have of admiring your grounds, Miss Beaumont", he said, presently, "for I think of removing your pupil shortly."

"Indeed!" cried the governess, reddening with suppressed indignation. "I trust Miss Milford has not found occasion to make any complaint; she has enjoyed especial privileges under this roof—a separate bed-room, silver forks and spoons, roast veal or lamb on Sundays, throughout the summer season—to say nothing of the most unremitting supervision of a positively maternal character, and I should really consider Miss Milford wanting in common gratitude if she had complained."

"You are mistaken, my dear madam; Miss Milford has uttered no word of complaint. On the contrary, I am sure she has been perfectly happy in your establishment; but changes occur every day, and an important change will, I trust, speedily occur in my life, and in that of Miss Milford. When I first proposed bringing her to you, you asked me if she was a relation; I told you she was distantly related to me. I hope soon to be able to say that distant relationship has been transformed into a very near one. I hope soon to call Honoria Milford my wife."

Miss Beaumont's astonishment on hearing this announcement was extreme; but a surprise was one of the emotions peculiar to the common herd, the governess did her best to suppress all signs of that feeling. Sir Oswald told her that, as Miss Milford was an orphan, and without any near relative, he would wish to take her straight from "The Beeches" to the church in which he would make her his wife, and he begged Miss Beaumont to give him her assistance in the arrangement of the wedding.

The mistress of "The Beeches" possessed a really kind heart beneath the ice of her ultra-gentility, and she was pleased with the idea of assisting in the bringing about of a genuine love match. Besides, the affair, if well managed, would reflect considerable importance upon herself, and she would be able bye and bye to talk of "my pupil, Lady Eversleigh"; or, "that sweet girl, Miss Milford, who afterwards married the wealthy baronet, Sir Oswald Eversleigh." Sir Oswald pleaded for an early celebration of the marriage—and Honoria, acustomed to obey him in all things, did not oppose his wish in this crisis of his life. Once more Sir Oswald wrote a cheque for the wardrobe of his protegee, and Miss Beaumont swelled with pompcsity as she thought of the grandeur which might be derived from the expenditure of the sum of money at the West-end emporiums where she was in the habit of making purchases for her pupils, and where she was already considered a person of some importance.

It was holiday time at "The Beeches" and almost all the pupils were absent. Miss Beaumont was, therefore, able to devote the ensuing fortnight to the delightful task of shopping. She drove into town almost every day with Honoria, and hours were spent in the choice of silks and satins, velvets and laces, and in long consulations with milliners and dress-makers of Persian celebrity and boundless extravagance.

"Sir Oswald has intrusted me with the supervision of this most important business, and I will drop down in a fainting fit from sheer exhaustion before the counter at Howell and James's, sooner than I would fail in my duty to the extent of an iota", Miss Beaumont said, when Honoria begged her to take less trouble about the wedding trousseau.

It was Sir Oswald's wish that the wedding should be strictly private. Whom could he invite to assist at his union with a nameless and friendless bride? Miss Beaumont was the only person whom he could trust, and even her he had deceived; for she believed that Honoria Milford was some fourth or fifth cousin—some poor relative of Sir Oswald's.

Early in July the wedding took place. All preparations had been made so quietly as to baffle even the penetration of the watchful Millard. He had perceived that the baronet was more than usually occupied, and in higher spirits than were habitual to him; but he could not discover the reason.

"There's something going on, sir" he said to Victor Carrington; "but I am blest if I know what it is. I dare say that young woman is at the bottom of it. I never did see my master look so well and so happy. It seems as if he was growing younger every day."

Reginald Eversleigh looked at his friend in blank despair when these tidings reached him.

"I told you I was ruined, Victor", he said, "and now, perhaps, you will believe me. My uncle will marry that woman."

It was only on the eve of his wedding-day that Sir Oswald Eversleigh made any communication to his valet. While dressing for dinner that evening, he said, quietly—

"I want my portmanteaus packed for travelling between this and two o'clock to-morrow, Millard; and you will hold yourself in readiness to accompany me. I shall post from London, starting from a house near Fulham, at three o'clock. The chariot must leave here, with you and the luggage, at two."

"You are going abroad, sir?"

"No, I am going to North Wales for a week or two; but I do not go alone. I am going to be married to-morrow morning, Millard, and Lady Eversleigh will accompany me."

Much as the probability of this marriage had been discussed in the Arlington Street household, the fact came upon Joseph Millard as a surprise. Nothing is so unwelcome to old servants as the marriage of a master who has long been a bachelor. Let the bride be never so fair, never so high born, she will be looked on as an interloper; and if, as in this case, she happens to be poor and nameless, the bridegroom is regarded as a dupe and a fool; the bride as an adventuress.

The valet was fully occupied that evening with preparations for the journey of the following day, and could find no time to call at Mr. Eversleigh's lodgings with his evil tidings.

"He will hear of it soon enough, I dare say, poor, unfortunate young man", thought Mr. Millard.

The valet was right. In a few days the announcement of the baronet's mariage appeared in "The Times" newspaper; for, though he had celebrated that marriage with all privacy, he had no wish to keep his fair young wife hidden from the world.

"On Thursday, the 4th instant, at St. Mary's Church, Fulham, Sir Oswald Morton Vansittart Eversleigh, Bart., to Honoria, daughter of the late Thomas Milford."

This was all; and this was the announcement which Reginald Eversleigh read one morning, as he dawdled over his late breakfast, after a night spent in dissipation and folly. He threw the paper away from him, with an oath, and hurried to his toilet. He dressed himself with less care than usual, for to-day he was in a hurry; he wanted at once to communiacte with his friend, Victor Carrington.

The young surgeon lived at the very extremity of the Maida Hill district, in the country. It was a comfortable in he counry. It was a comfortable little residence; but Reginald Eversleigh looked at it with supreme contempt.

When Choosing Food.

In working out a ration it is necessary to consider not only the food value of each thing eaten, but it is necessary to give it conditions which will not hamper it and keep it from giving up all its power.

An unpleasant consciousness of our digestive process is all too frequently due to the unfortunate combinations we make, and in this matter we are often the abject slaves of tradition.

SCALLOPED SETS.

Sheets and Pillowcases For Beds Are Embroidered Simply.

While making sham sheets first fold in the hem which should be about four and one-half inches in width. The hem should be put in with hand sewing and the stitches should be very small and even.

Stamp the scallops about one-half inch from the edge so as to leave plenty of space for the embroidery. Before beginning the work sew a strip of goods along the edge so that the work can be done in an embroidery hoop. The scallops are worked through the two thicknesses of the material over a slight padding.

Pillowcases to match the sheet should be made and the hem in these should be put in before stamping the scallops. Pillowslips, made after the French method, open at both ends, are really worth the extra work, for the scalloped ends not only add to the beauty of the case but make it easier to adjust the pillow.

Garden Specializing.

It is a good plan, so a successful amateur gardener has said, to try one new annual every year. Perhaps you may not care for the plant again. Perhaps it may not be just what you expected, but if you really do find one or more that seem to thrive particularly well in some spot, stick to those and try them year after year.

Try to improve on them, so that you will have some specialty which, after awhile, you will consider as your own flower. We can never give up all the old favorites, nor make up our minds to grow only roses or sweet peas or pansies, but by making a specialty of roses or pansies or sweet peas and studying their needs we shall develop at least one really valuable flower among the mass of blooms in our gardens.

Friezes Out of Style.

It is much better to have a picture molding close up to the ceiling unless the walls of a room are more than eight and a half or nine feet high. If above that drop the ceiling paper down a foot or so to the picture rail. The old time deep border or frieze is seldom seen now, and it is a great improvement doing the walls this newer way. Satin striped paper in two tones of the same color is very good, especially for bedrooms. Pink is apt to fade as well as very light blue.

To Remove Tin Lids.

The following is a sure method of removing lids from small jars and round tin boxes. Place the article on the floor on its edge; then put your foot on it and roll it backward and forward. This never fails to remove the most stubborn lid.

Story of a Man Who Was Believed a Thief

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

Among those who went to California when gold was discovered there in 1849 was Joseph Griffin. He was a married man with one child, a girl of ten.

Griffin decided to make the land journey. He went from Buffalo to St. Joseph, Mo., traveling most of the way by stage, and there outfitted with one of the "prairie schooners" of that day, a wagon with a canvas top, drawn by horses, which he filled with provisions, cooking utensils, bedding and such other articles as would be needed on the journey. When all was ready and he was about to start a rawboned country boy stepped up to him and said:

MR. GRIFFIN TOLD ZEB THEY MUST PART.

"Say, mister, won't you take me along?"

"What's your name?" asked Griffin of the boy.

"Zeb."

"Zeb what?"

"I don't know. Father and mother were killed by Indians on the plains. I was picked up by buffalo hunters."

"Have you any home?"

"No."

Little Molly Griffin stood by the wagon listening to this dialogue, and her big blue eyes were filled with pity. She said nothing, but remained intent on what her father was saying.

"Have you no clothes but those you have on?" he asked the boy.

"No."

Griffin remained silent a few moments, deliberating. Then he said:

"I want a boy about your age to help with the horses and anything else there is to be done on the way. I'll give you your grub, but I've nothing else for you. If you want to go with us on those terms you may."

"I do."

"Well, come along with me. Those clothes wouldn't last you halfway. You'll need an overcoat when we get to the mountains, and I must have another blanket. Reckon we have buffalo robes enough."

Mrs. Griffin called her husband aside and expressed a doubt as to the propriety of taking with them a waif who was entirely unknown to them, but Griffin said he would need some one.

Zeb proved a valuable acquisition. He soon learned to harness and unharness the horses and was very useful in unloading and loading the wagons when the party camped under the stars. When Griffin was obliged to make repairs the boy proved very handy as an assistant. It was the first time in his life that he had been a member of a family, and he seemed delighted with the association, the duties and the experience of traveling all day and camping at night with the others.

A recital of the adventures of the party would fill a volume. There is only room here to say that after many mishaps and dangers they reached the mountains and after many more mishaps and dangers passed over them and finally struck the region of the gold diggings. By this time Zeb had become a fixture in the family. It would have been cruel to send him away; none of them wished to part with him.

Griffin had brought some money with him, which he invested in mines that had been partially developed. But for a long while none of these investments turned out to be very profitable. Meanwhile Zeb grew to be a young man and gave indications of having sprung from parents above the average in the social scale. He had outgrown doing chores for the Griffin family, but had not outgrown his interest in them. Mr. and Mrs. Griffin were the only parents he had ever known, and, as for Molly, he would at any time have given his head to gratify a whim of hers. But as he grew older he took his pick and shovel and started forth to try his luck as a prospector.

When Griffin had been in California six years he struck a bonanza. He bought a partly developed mine for a song and sold it for a fortune. The amount he received for it was 420 pounds of gold.

It must be remembered that California was still an inaccessible country. To reach the Atlantic coast by land the same perilous journey the Griffins had taken to reach the Pacific must be taken again. To go by sea meant something, though less dangerous, at any rate more tiresome. They desired to return to their home in New York state and carry their fortune with them, but dreaded either of these routes. After much deliberation it was decided that they would go southward by sea to Panama and there attempt to find transportation across the isthmus to Colon and thence by sea again to New York. They would avoid the necessity of a journey down the west coast and up the east coast of South America.

They made preparations for the journey, putting their gold in a box to take with them. It was carefully weighed, showing that there were exactly 420 pounds of gold, exclusive of the box. Just before the ship sailed on which they had taken passage Mrs. Griffin was taken suddenly ill. After deliberation Mr. Griffin decided to send Zeb in advance with the treasure that he might investigate the means of getting across the isthmus. If he found it too difficult to warrant their going by that route he was to write the fact and they would make other arrangements. Zeb sailed on the ship that was to have taken the whole party and in due time reached Panama. He had been instructed by Griffin that if he found it best to turn in the gold at Panama and take a draft on New York he was to do so. As soon as he arrived he made inquiries as to crossing the isthmus and found it practicable, though dangerous, principally from the liability to contraction of disease.

He wrote Mr. Griffin the result of his inquiries, but the latter did not receive his letter, for Mrs. Griffin recovered as quickly as she had been taken ill, and, finding a ship about to sail that would touch at Panama, her husband, worrying about his gold, decided to follow Zeb to the isthmus.

When the party reached Panama they found Zeb in trouble. He had decided to buy a draft for the gold and had taken steps to do so. But on weighing the metal, instead of its weighing 420 pounds, it weighed 416. This was a sad blow to Zeb. So fearful had he been that some one might purloin some of it that he had had it placed in his stateroom on the ship and kept it there during the whole of the journey. He scrutinized the box to see if he could find a gimlet hole, a loose nail or any other evidence of an outlet for the gold, but none appeared, and his heart sank within him at the imputation that must necessarily rest upon him of having stolen the missing four pounds of gold himself.

When the Griffins arrived Zeb confessed the shortage which he was unable to account for. Loath as was Mr. Griffin to believe that Zeb had appropriated the missing four pounds of metal, he was forced to believe that the young man had lost the money gambling or in some other way and had been obliged to take the gold to save himself. Possibly he had hoped he might replace it. Mr. Griffin reverted to the time when they had taken Zeb in without any one to vouch for him and admitted that that had happened which might have been expected. Molly, now a girl of seventeen, was the only one of the three who in spite of the indisputable evidence believed in Zeb's innocence.

After a conference Mr. and Mrs. Griffin came to the conclusion that Zeb had been cornered in some way and had yielded to temptation. They cared little for the gold that was missing, but regretted that one they had grown fond of should have robbed them. Mr. Griffin told Zeb that they must part and handed him $500 for immediate use. Zeb declined to take the money.

Mr. Griffin decided to take his gold to New Orleans and succeeded in getting his family across the isthmus without one of them coming down with any of the fevers then prevalent in that region. On reaching the Crescent City he had the treasure carted to a bank and asked for a draft for its value on New York. The gold was counted and the draft made out. When Mr. Griffin saw it he remarked that there must be some mistake. He had figured the amount himself from the weight and had made it much less. The amount of the draft was the same as it would have been had the gold missed at Panama not been taken, whereupon he received the following statement:

"Gold sent from Washington to the mint at New Orleans has been found to weigh less at the latter than the former place. This is because New Orleans is nearer the equator than Washington, and the centrifugal force arising from the revolution of the earth is greater the nearer one approaches the equator, rendering objects lighter."

Here was an explanation of the missing four pounds of gold. Mr. Griffin hurried at once to his wife and daughter to announce that there had after all been no robbery. Zeb was communicated with and money sent to bring him to New Orleans. When he arrived he was received with open arms and from that time forward was a member of the Griffin family, taking their name in lieu of his own, which he never knew.

A Persistent Poisoner

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

The use of the poisoned needle is not new. In the early part of the seventeenth century a man named Tebaldo in Venice invented an instrument in the form of a key from which he shot a tiny needle into the flesh of one he wished to kill.

In Rome during the period when the use of poisons was an art in Italy there occurred a similar case to that of this Venetian. One Lorenzo Luchese went from Florence to Rome, taking with him a more minute knowledge of poisons and poison methods than existed anywhere except in the city on the Arno. There was something uncanny about him that soon turned the Romans against him. A certain young lady, Blanca Ranzine, attracted the attention of the stranger, and he was observed to cast longing eyes upon her. But she was betrothed to a noble Venetian, Ricordo Mantel, and it was assumed that Luchese's love was hopeless. But one day Signorina Ranzine's lover after having mingled with a crowd witnessing a race on the Corso was seized with a sharp pain and died within a few hours. It was supposed be died of heart disease.

Not long after this Luchese proposed to Signor Ranzine for the hand of his daughter. The application was declined on the ground that the lady's heart was buried with the lover she had lost and she would never marry. Luchese said that he would not give up hope and took every means to ingratiate himself with Signorina Ranzine. But she took a dislike to him and would have nothing to do with him.

After awhile the young lady met a man named Francesco Demetrio, a handsome and in other ways a charming man, who fell desperately in love with her and won her from her intended celibacy. They became engaged, and Bianca's friends rejoiced that the heart of one so young would not after all be buried. Demetrio had heard something from Florence about Luchese that put him on his guard against the man.

Every one knew that Luchese had cast longing eyes on Bianca Ranzine before the death of her betrothed and that he had proposed for her hand soon after his death. Moreover, poisoning being much in vogue at that time, there were those who believed that Ricordo Mantel had not died of heart disease, but had been secretly poisoned. Demetrio after hearing the reports from Florence about Luchese strongly suspected not only that Mantel had been poisoned, but that Luchese had been the poisoner.

However, he kept his own counsel and at the same time a strict watch on Luchese. If Demetrio was in any room where Luchese was present he would immediately leave. On several occasions he noticed that the Florentine tried to get near him, but he had always prevented his doing so by moving away. One day Demetrio was talking with a friend on a street on a fete day when a procession of the church was passing and suddenly felt a sharp pain in his arm. Turning, he saw Luchese pushing his way from him among the crowd.

"Seize that man!" Demetrio said to his friend. "He has punctured my arm and doubtless poisoned me."

The friend gave chase and caught Luchese. As soon as he laid hands on him he felt a sharp pain in his hand. There happened to be a doctor in the crowd, who, learning what had occurred, asked Demetrio to show him where he had been pricked. So small was the wound that it could scarcely be discovered, but the doctor whipped out a lancet and cut away a piece of the flesh. Demetrio's friend, having turned Luchese over to an officer, came reeling back, and the doctor, learning that he, too, had been pricked, treated his hand as he had treated Demetrio's arm.

The doctor took both pieces of flesh to his house, and on cutting them into bits found in each a small needle not half an inch long. Whether there had been poison in either of them he could not tell, but the evidence was strong enough against Luchese to insure his conviction. He was searched as soon as arrested, but nothing incriminating was found on him. His house was searched, and in it were found a variety of poisons and a little box containing needles similar to those that had been put into Demetrio and his friend. The instrument with which he had shot the needle into the flesh was picked up on the street near where the attack had been made. It was simply a small brass tube with a spring in it, which could be loosened by a pressure of the thumb.

Luchese was tried and executed.

Demetrio suffered but little from the effects of the puncture, but his friend was ill a long while.

The fact that Mantel had doubtless been poisoned by the man who wished Bianca for himself was kept from her. Indeed, she was not informed that Luchese had tried to poison her second lover. After Luchese's execution she and Demetrio were married, and great interest was manifested in the wedding, for every one except the bride knew that one lover had been murdered and the second had nearly met the same fate.

But it was not to be expected that what was common property could be kept from her always. She learned in time and in consequence always dreaded that her husband might fall at the hands of some secret enemy.

BURIED AT CROSS-ROADS.

Amerry Girod's Grave Is at Montreal's Busiest Corner.

The grave of a suicide, an outlaw and a fugitive, dug at cross-roads according to the practice of the time—that in merest outline is the tragic story connected with the spot where Sherbrooke and St. Lawrence streets intersect.

To-day this point is practically the centre of Montreal, and over it all day long and far into the night there hurries the varied traffic of two great thoroughfares—pedestians, carriages, drays, tramcars, forming two swirling currents of urban life that grow swifter and deeper, as years pass. Where those two thoroughfares intersect—cross-roads it was then—a grave was dug almost 77 years ago; and in it was interred the remains of a wretched man, whose memory is preserved because of his misfortunes rather than because of any worthy achievements.

That man was Amerry Girod, a stormy petrel of the stormy times of 1837. He was associated with a cause that drew to its support many able, brave and disinterested men, who risked all for the right as they saw it, but who, so far as the attaining of their end was concerned, did not judge and act wisely and well.

But little is known of the early life of the man, who was buried at the crossing of Sherbrooke and St. Lawrence streets. According to some accounts he was born in one of the cantons of Switzerland, by other he is spoken of as an Alsatian, and, therefore, a native of France as France existed at that time.

He claimed to be a scientific agriculturalist, but when given a Government post at Quebec he accomplished nothing, and, finally, left the ancient capital and settled at St. Eustache, where in 1837 he took upon himself the command of the insurgents, who had assembled there under their local leader, Dr. Chenier. None of his exploits is particularly praiseworthy, although he figured largely in the records of the rebellion. When the Government troops attacked St. Eustache he fled leaving his forces behind him. Two of the insurgents, seeing the cowardly flight of their braggart, self-appointed general-in-chief, tried to shoot him; but they missed their mark, and Girod sped on unscathed.

In his flight Girod circled northward and then turned to the east crossing the river that flows by St. Rose, traversing Isle Jesu, crossing Back river, and so gaining the Island of Montreal.

The police and cavalry from the city were scouring the island for the purpose of capturing refugees from St. Eustache; and the police came upon the trail of the wretched Girod. On the eighteenth, that is, on the fourth day after the fight at St. Eustache and the flight of Girod, the police came upon him and surrounded the place in which he was in hiding. Further flight, he saw, was impossible and resistance was useless. At bay, Girod resolved that he would not be taken alive. Drawing his loaded pistol, he held it to his head and blew out his brains.

The police removed Girod's body to Montreal. It was the body of a suicide, and, according to the practice of the time, it was ordered to be buried at a cross-roads. "It was buried," writes Kingsford, "at what was then called the Cote a Barron, in the middle of the cross-roads of the St. Lawrence Main street and Sherbrooke street."

One of the onlookers at that strange burial was a young man named Henry Hogan, who, in later life, was for many years proprietor of the St. Lawrence Hall, which stood on St. James street, where the building of the Dominion Express Company now stands, and which in its day was the most widely known place of public entertainment in all Canada. The historian Kingsford writes, "I am informed by Mr Henry Hogan, of Montreal, that as a young man he was present at the interment."

A Hundred Years Ago.

One hundred years ago March 18 the Legislature of Upper Canada was in session in Toronto, with three members prisoners of war in the hands of the Americans, and two others, Abraham Marcle and John Willcocks, were reported "deserted to the enemy." The seats of the traitors were declared vacant.

It was reported at this session that a printing press had been purchased and brought to Toronto from Ogdensburg to replace the only one in the city, which had been destroyed when the city was captured by the Americans in 1813. No other press was obtainable for the printing of official records. How the purchase was negotiated in Ogdensburg during the war is not made clear by the historians.

The Case of I Don't Remember

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

James Shine was sixteen years old when he started out one morning to go fishing. It was a walk of a mile to the lake, and between the village and the lake ran a railroad.

The youth ranked with the best for smartness, both mental and physical, and was in the best of health and spirits the morning he set out with his fishing-tackle. What happened before he got there was told by the engineer of a freight train. One at the crossing could see the trains while they were yet forty rods away, and no accident had ever happened there.

On this occasion, as the train approached, the engineer saw young Shine kneel down on the track to tie his shoe. A whistle of warning was sounded, and, in fact, the whistle was kept going until the pilot of the engine struck the boy and threw him a full fifty feet.

Young Shine was picked up for dead, but he wasn't dead. He was nowhere near it. He hadn't a broken bone and only one big bruise. He seemed as good as ever physically in a fortnight, but there was a great change in him mentally.

You have read of a person being "knocked silly?" Well, the boy had so suffered. There wasn't a hurt on his head, but his memory was gone. He didn't know who he was, and he could not remember any one else. It was a form of aphasia with a curious feature about it. His mother would say to him:

"James, your name is James Shine."

"Yes, it is James Shine," he would reply.

Five minutes later if asked his name he would reply that it was Peter Jones or something else.

At the age of twenty James Shine got lost. He was sent to a sawmill half a mile away, and in some way he got turned around and walked out into the country. It was a year before he was heard of again. He had made his way to a point a hundred miles away and hired out to a widow as a farm hand and after a few months married her. He had given her a dozen different names as his right one.

When the widow was reproached with having married a young man only half her age and one plainly off in his head she replied:

"Well, I thought it would be a good thing to get married again, and, I tell you, he is the best worker I ever had on the farm."

No effort was made to get the young man away, as he seemed quite content there, but one day he walked off without a word to any one and brought up in a town 200 miles away. He got work in a brickyard, giving still other names. One day his name was Davis, the next Barnes, the next Meadows, and so it went. Of course people wondered about it, and the police investigated him, but as he was a good worker and never made any trouble he was not interfered with.

After a few months and under the name of Bird young Shine married another widow. This one had five children, and when taken to task for her capture she replied:

"I noticed he was rather queer in the head, but I guess all men are that. Do you think a widow with five children to clothe and feed is going to turn a would be husband down just because he appears to be a bit dotty?"

The wives had a row over the one husband, and the husband moved on. He went about forty miles away and obtained work in a planing mill and in less than four months was married to his third widow. He had started in with a widow and had a preference for that class. He had lived with No. 3 about four months when Nos. 1 and 2 came down on him. He was arrested and tried as a bigamist, but before his trial had taken place he broke out of jail and made a long skip and went to work in a livery stable. Here he gave twenty different names in twenty days, and many people thought him a fugitive from justice, but as he was quiet and industrious he was not bothered.

There was only one widow in the town, but in a few months she had been sought out and courted and married. After a bit No. 4 heard about the others and had the bigamist jailed. This time he went to trial. When asked on the stand if young Shine had seemed a sensible, rational person to her she replied:

"I can't say he did."

"But you married him?"

"But I'd been trying for six long years to catch a husband and was clear discouraged."

It was the opinion of doctors who examined the husband that he was neither morally nor legally responsible for his acts. Each one of the four wives offered to take him back, but of course the law could not permit this.

The question what to do with the offender came up. A number of doctors swore that he was half a fool, and he was sent off to a state asylum. There he proposed marriage to one of the female cooks, and an escape, an elopement and a marriage might have followed had not the man been taken ill and died. On the day of his death he seemed quite rational, and in talking with the doctor he said:

"They say that I have married four different widows."

"Yes."

"And was courting a fifth."

"Yes."

"Lord bless the widows! If I could live my life over again I'd marry twenty of them before I got through!"

A recent U.S. Department of Agriculture Bulletin declares that a half acre devoted to the various kinds of garden crops would easily support a family with $100 worth of vegetables during the year.

SHE SAVED HIM

By MAY C. ETHERIDGE

"John, I've something to say to you. You're a good fellow, and I have no family. I have some stock in the Hope Mining company that is valuable and other securities. They're all in this tin box. There is also a will in the box leaving all I possess to you."

"Why, Mr. Hathorn," said John Murray, surprised, "what in the world put that into your head? I've been working for you only six months, and you never saw me before I came to you and asked you for a position in your store. Besides, you are a healthy, strong man, liable to live thirty or forty years longer."

"I'll tell you, John. You've told me about that wife of yours in the east and that little kid you set so much store by. Something tells me that I'm not long to live. If I were to die tomorrow there wouldn't be a person in the world to claim what I left. If I will it to you you can bring your family out here and go right on with the store. I might as well make some one comfortable, mightn't I? Come with me."

He took John to his bedroom over the store, pulled up a plank in the floor, put in the box and relaid the plank. Then the two went downstairs and resumed their work. That night John Murray wrote his wife in the east and told her of the bequest that might some day come to them.

It was about three months after this that John, who took care of the books and the cash, made up a deposit of the cash that had come in during the week for the bank at the county seat, some ten miles distant. While riding through a narrow defile a man sprang upon him and before he could draw his revolver disarmed him and, taking out a rope, bound him hand and foot. Then, appropriating the money he carried, he left John beside the road and made off in the direction of the store.

John remained as he was several hours before any one came along to release him; then he returned to report the robbery. Entering the store, he found it deserted. Looking about the place, he found Hathorn's dead body in the barn, with a little hay thrown over it.

Here were two troubles John had to report to his neighbors, though the first was nothing in comparison with the second. His story looked very unlikely. It seemed more probable that he had made up the story about having been robbed, had appropriated the money himself and had murdered his employer. The store stood alone, with no house within a mile. John was arrested and tried, and, though the evidence against him was purely circumstantial, it insured his conviction, and he was sentenced to be hanged.

One day a woman entered a jewelry store at the county seat, where John was awaiting execution, and offered to sell a watch. The jeweler noticed on the case the initials E. L. H. He asked the woman if these were her initials, and she admitted that they were not and looked frightened. This excited the suspicion of the jeweler, and he kept the woman parleying till he could learn more of her. Then it occurred to him that the initials were those of Mr. Hathorn, whose murder had excited so great a commotion in the community. He sent for an officer, and the woman was arrested. Having been put through a severe examination, she broke down and confessed that she had murdered Hathorn and carried off the watch with her. But she claimed that plunder had not been her object, averring that Hathorn had married and deserted her.

There were two opinions as to this confession, the one being that it was untrue, the other that it was genuine. Those who maintained the latter view were supported by the fact that Murray's lawyer had brought evidence to show that Hathorn had feared some secret enemy. This turned the scale against the woman, though Murray was not at once released. As soon as he was he went to the jail where she was confined to have a look at her.

He was astonished to see his own wife.

Fortunately the official that was with him was behind Murray and the wife had time to give her husband a warning look not to recognize her before the man came up. During the interview she also succeeded in whispering to him: "Fly for your life. I will be all right." John saw in this a scheme to save him and as soon as he left the jail disappeared. A day or two later Mrs. Murray recalled her confession, telling the following story:

She said that as soon as she heard of her husband's arrest she had gone west. She had had Hathorn's initials engraved on a watch that belonged to her brother and used it to get herself arrested. She told of the tin box of which her husband had written her and which had not been referred to by defendant's counsel in the trial since the will it contained would show a motive for the murder by Murray.

Attended by court officials, Mrs. Murray went to Hathorn's room in the store, and the box was found. Besides the articles in it already mentioned was a paper on which was written, "Eben Greenleaf has sworn to kill me, and I believe he will."

Who Greenleaf was never came to light. John Murray was invited to return, but wrote his wife to sell out the store and bring his inheritance east.

ST. PATRICK DID IT

A Story Which Culminates on St. Patrick's Day

By TERENCE M'KEON

Little Mike Malone and Kathleen Rafferty were near neighbors in Limerick county, Ireland. Mike's father owned a few acres of ground, on which he made a scant living, and Kathleen's father and mother rented a like area from a landlord. Mike was freckled, and Kathleen's hair was red.

When Mike came to be about eighteen and Kathleen sixteen his freckles had disappeared and Kathleen's hair which had really never been of a fiery hue, was turning into beautiful auburn, while her complexion was of that peachy [illegible] prevalent among the Irish people. Mike had reached a period in life when young fellows begin to think about a career. He thought aloud to Kathleen, but to no one else, pouring his different plans into her ear. He would enlist in the army; he would ship for a sailor; he would go to London and seek a position.

Kathleen did not approve of any of these plans. She might have given her consent to the last named, but she was a strong Catholic and had heard that the English people were mostly Protestants. One night she had a dream which was probably induced by thinking about these matters. She dreamed that St. Patrick had appeared to her and said:

"My daughter, you are a good girl, and Mike is a good boy. I know that you are earnest for the good of your church and for Mike. Tell him to go to America. There he will find many Irish people, and since the Irish there are nearly all Catholics he will not be diverted from the true church. And since there is plenty of work in America for strong young men like Mike to do it will depend upon himself, and himself alone, whether he makes himself comfortable. After he has made a home there he can send for you."

Kathleen related this dream to Mike except the part about his sending for her, which she kept to herself.

"But, Kathleen," he said, "how shall I get on without you over there? Didn't St. Patrick say anything about your going with me?"

"No, he didn't."

"Then I won't go, either."

"Would you disobey the instructions of our patron saint? Go to America, and, if you care enough for me to wish me to be near you, doubtless St. Patrick will find a way to bring us together. But maybe after you have been away from me awhile you'll forget all about me."

The last sentence was spoken with a tinge of sadness. Mike declared that if all the oceans on the face of the globe were between them he would never forget her. But he said that he could not go to America without means to pay his passage and a little money to keep him while he was getting work. Indeed, some one had told him that the government of the United States would not let him into the country unless he could satisfy it that he would be self supporting.

"YOU CAN DO THAT BEFORE YOU LEAVE THE ISLAND."

But Kathleen, whose faith was strong, urged him to rely on St. Patrick. The saint would not have appeared to her in a dream for the purpose of telling her how to advise Mike if he did not intend to help him. So Mike determined to go, and, not having Kathleen's simple faith, he concluded that he would have to provide the means for his going. He resolved to walk to Queenstown, where he hoped to find a berth on one of the ocean steamers going to New York.

The day he left home, after bidding goodby to his father and mother, he started on his journey, and Kathleen walked a few miles with him. When she reached her turning point she took from her pocket some gold and silver coins and handed them to Mike, telling him that she had saved them for him and wished him to take them to help him on his journey. Mike's eyes grew wet, but he refused to take the money till Kathleen said to him:

"Didn't I tell you that St. Patrick would help you?"

"But this is not St. Patrick who helps me; it is you, Kathleen."

"Not a bit of it. It's St. Patrick doing it through me. How would I have been able to get the money together if he hadn't helped me to do it?"

It was not the argument, but the faith of the girl and the knowledge that he would pain her by refusal, that induced Mike to take the money. But he resolved not to use it. He had heard that in that wonderful country one may plant a little money like an acorn and it will grow to be a great tree, and he resolved to invest the money for Kathleen and send it back to her with its accumulations. Then, after a long embrace, they parted, Mike keeping up his courage by making resolutions to work hard and save what he made, Kathleen buoyed by what St. Patrick had told her in her dream.

On reaching Queenstown Mike found that stokers were needed for the ships, for this was a very hard berth, and it was difficult to find men who would heave coal down in the hot furnace room. Fortunately for Mike, he found a chance to work his passage on one of the large liners that made the voyage across the Atlantic in a few days. On reaching New York he found no difficulty in passing the immigration commissioners since they had no objection to strong and healthy men. The only use Mike ever made of the money Kathleen had given him was to show it to the officials who examined him as evidence that he was provided with funds.

Mike had promised Kathleen that he would spend the first few years in the new country in learning a trade. So he hired himself as a helper to a carpenter, working for almost nothing for awhile, but getting advanced as he learned the work. His boss became a contractor, which threw Mike into other branches of mechanical work, and, being quick to learn, he became familiar with many of the other departments of building. The result was that after serving his apprenticeship he worked as mason, plasterer, decorator, and knew a good deal about plumbing. Six years after reaching America he began to think about setting himself up as a contractor.

Mike had come over to America when some of the great railroad systems were being reorganized. One day while working on a house owned by a wealthy gentleman Mike told him of the money Kathleen had given him and asked him how he might invest it. The gentleman told him to buy a few shares of a certain railroad stock that was selling at a very low price. Mike invested the money as advised, and five years later the stock he had bought was paying 6 per cent dividend. This made the shares Mike had bought worth eight or nine hundred dollars.

Mike wrote to Kathleen that he could now support a wife and had saved the funds to enable her to come over and marry him. He also wrote her of the fortunate investment he had made for her. Kathleen wrote back that all this good fortune had come through St. Patrick, who would never have advised Mike's going to America if he hadn't intended to help him. Kathleen received her lover's letter at the beginning of the year and prepared to leave for America in the spring. Mike sent her what money she needed for the journey and enough besides to provide her with a suitable outfit as a bride.

It was the 6th day of March when Kathleen sailed for New York. The voyage was expected to require eight days, but the weather proved stormy, and the vessel did not reach Ellis island, where the immigrants have to pass the commissioners of immigration, till the tenth day after sailing, and even then it was late in the afternoon when the steerage passengers were transferred to the station. Kathleen on reaching the dock was suddenly clasped in a pair of strong arms and recognized her lover.

"Why, Mike!" she said, "how big and strong you are grown!"

"And how beautiful," replied Mike, "you are! Your complexion is like the rose and your hair the color of gold!"

They went together to the emigrant office, where Mike introduced Kathleen to the commissioner, stating that she would not be a burden on the government since he proposed to marry her at once.

"Very well," said the commissioner; "you can do that before you leave the island."

"Divil a bit!" Mike protested. "Do you suppose we'd be married out of a church?"

Mike persuaded the commissioner that he was in earnest and would be responsible for the new arrival. So the couple went to New York, and, Mike having spoken to a priest and stated the necessities of the case, they were married without publication of the banns. Then Mike took his bride to his home, which was much to her liking.

Kathleen had arrived on March 16, and the first day she spent in America, the first of her married life, was St. Patrick's day. She had not counted on this when she sailed and attributed it not to coincidence, but to St. Patrick, who had in a dream advised her to tell Mike to go to America. Mike had been expected to join in the procession that was to take place, but had excused himself, knowing that he would be newly married. He had provided a place for Kathleen and himself to see the paraders, and after attending early mass the pair occupied it. As the paraders passed Kathleen said to her husband:

THE HAPPY HUNTING GROUND

But the Game In Time Grows Scarce There

By F. A. MITCHEL

Miss Leila Rathbone was born a flirt—an unconscious flirt. She didn't know that she was flirting even when she was deliberately drawing some youth into her toils. Nevertheless she was not surprised when she got him there. It did not occur to her that she had anything to do with his being there. All the other fellows got there. Why not he? This commenced when Miss Rathbone was fourteen years old—if not earlier—and lasted till she was double that age. The game was so plentiful that she had no idea that there would ever be a dearth of it.

Miss Rathbone, as I have said, began to bring down youths at a very early age and continued it as long as her heyday lasted, which was about the same duration as that of most girls. She had a comfortable home, and it did not occur to her that there was any reason why she should marry. What did she know of the waning interest in this world's affairs that comes to all who grow old, except in children—children of their own? At twenty she was at the summit of earthly contentment. The woods were as full of game as ever. At twenty-four there was a falling off, not in her attractiveness, but there were not as many men within range. At twenty-eight all the men seemed to have grown backward and were nothing but boys, while on looking in a mirror she saw unmistakable signs of change in herself. The bud had fully opened, and the rose was beginning to pass beyond bloom.

Meanwhile the fifteen years that had passed since she had begun to emerge from childhood had brought changes in her surroundings. She was far more alone than she had been. Social affairs, even tennis and golf, had lost much of their charm. Those of her friends who had married had passed from her to their children. They were as glad as ever to meet her, but she realized that their little ones had taken her place in the hearts of their parents. She began to envy her friends the possession of their children. The parents were still young, and their offspring were still children. Miss Rathbone had not reached an age to understand the value of a grown son or daughter to an old person.

When Miss Rathbone was nearing thirty she was still an attractive woman. Having come to realize what she had missed, or believed she had missed, in not having taken steps to build her own nest, she resolved to make hay during the brief season when the sun would still shine. She remembered regretfully the superfluity of game within range during past years and recognized the fact that the woods for her had been pretty well cleaned out. As after civilization has encroached on hunting grounds sportsmen must go farther for game, so did Miss Rathbone come to think that she must seek new fields. Spring was coming on, and she thought of summer resorts. But she knew that the only game to be found at such places are old men and boys. She had discovered that she had passed the age when a college student had ceased to be something for her to look up to.

Travel next suggested itself to her. When a young girl she had been more nearly caught in her own traps while touring in Europe than at any other time. She had found sightseeing in company with young men an admirable field for her flirtations. And as for an ocean voyage, after the wearing off of mal de mer, there seemed to be something about salt water to induce love. Miss Rathbone decided to join the begira of those sailing for foreign ports the next season.

Miss Rathbone joined a party of her acquaintances who were going to make a three months' tour of Europe. How changed were her circumstances from that Miss Rathbone who had often had difficulty in staving off the importunities of several young men, each of whom was bent on receiving an answer to a proposal! Could it be possible that she was going abroad for the purpose of bringing down some bachelor who, having arrived at middle age, had lost much of that spirit which impels a man to tumble head over heels in love on the slightest provocation? But Miss Rathbone remembered that while the older man is not aggressive he is vulnerable.

During her trip abroad Miss Rathbone met bachelors, but found them confirmed celibates. They seemed to her like wild horses that had never been broken to a bit or a saddle. Their own comfort, their independence, were their gods. As for giving up any of their privileges, they had no such idea whatever. They were like the crow, which, utterly worthless for game, keeps carefully out of the huntsman's range.

During a sojourn at Lake Como Miss Rathbone fell in with a widower, Edwin Dudley, who was not much her senior and whose descent into the Avernus of bachelorhood had been averted by marriage. He had placed his only child, a boy, at school in Geneva and was taking a holiday in northern Italy, where at the time the climate was neither too hot nor too cold.

Mr. Dudley was staying at the same hotel as Miss Rathbone and first saw her one morning at breakfast on the stone balcony against which dashed the waters of the lake. The situation was propitious. Directly opposite rose a high mountain, looming up between the lake and the blue sky. To the right and to the left were cliffs and battlements innumerable, some near at hand, some mellowed by distance, some a velvet green, some brown, some red. Miss Rathbone felt a molety of that spirit of the beautiful that she had experienced in her younger days. As for Mr. Dudley, he looked at her with manifest interest.

Americans abroad are very like a circle of intimate acquaintances at home, with this difference—at home they are hedged about by innumerable conventionalities; abroad they have much of the bonhomie of the old stagecoach days. Mr. Dudley had no difficulty in securing an introduction to Miss Rathbone, and he had scarcely done so when he invited her to go out on the lake with him in one of those rowboats pulled by lusty Italians the stern seats of which are supplied with cushions and canopies.

During this boat ride Mr. Dudley, perhaps following that disposition of Americans abroad to feel on short acquaintance as if they had known each other for years, developed a familiarity which would be accorded only to an old acquaintance. He rallied the lady on not having mated, declaring that it must certainly have been her own fault and wondering why she should prefer maidenhood to matrimony.

To this she replied evasively, but with becoming modesty, throwing the blame on the men. Mr. Dudley treated this for what it was worth, saying that he did not not doubt if some wizard could by incantation gather together the men she had refused they would prove [illegible] more numerous than fi[illegible] in the lake on [illegible] they were riding. To this Miss Rathbone smilingly demurred and declared that she had never had an offer.

"Nonsense!" exclaimed the gentleman. "Do you suppose that I am stupid enough to believe that a woman of your attractive personality has never received a proposal? I have no doubt that you have received hundreds of them."

"Well, how are you going to prove your assertion? A man refused by a woman will not tell about it."

"There is only one who will do that," said Dudley after some moments of silence. "A man who has once been refused and afterward accepted would be proud of his final success and would not be averse to letting it be known."

"I don't see how that helps the matter so long as I remain as I am."

"Right you are," replied the other. "Nevertheless you may some day yield to one of your old flames. If you marry I shall ask your husband if he was not refused by you before his final acceptance."

"You are quite welcome to do that," replied Miss Rathbone, "but it seems to me rather improbable that you should have the opportunity since the companions of my youth who are living are married."

"So be it, but take care lest I prove my assertion."

In extreme youth the sexes mate, they know not why. In later life they know very well why. They feel the need of companionship and a home. A man cannot make a home without a woman, and an old maid's home is at best cheerless. Mr. Dudley was looking for a wife just as eagerly as Miss Rathbone was looking for a husband. He proposed to her, and she accepted him.

"And now," he said, "I can prove to you that you maligned the men when you said that it was their fault that you had not married. I have found a man who is willing to admit that he has been refused by you."

"Indeed!" said the lady, surprised. "And who may that be?"

"Myself."

Miss Rathbone's eyes opened very wide.

"Don't you remember a scene on the terrace at B. when a boy of twenty told a lass of eighteen that he loved her."

"Are you Ned Dudley?"

"I am."

There was a silence, at the end of which Miss Rathbone said:

"What a little fool I was in those days!"

"A fool to refuse me?"

"Yes; you and a legion of others."

By F. A. MITCHEL

In Andalusia, Spain, stands a ruin in which there are the remains of a tower that dates back to the beginning of the fifteenth century. At that time clocks began to be used, and this old tower was built to hold one of the then new devices for marking time. The timepiece that was set up in the top of this ancient fortress was cumbersome, as all mechanical contrivances are when they are first invented. There was a great deal of heavy iron and oaken supports, but these conduced to its long life.

For 300 years it struck the hour, but after the expiration of the third century of its being it got out of order and was not repaired. For half a century longer it remained in its perch, and those inhabiting the castle dared not go under it, fearing that at any time it might come down.

The last person to inhabit this Andalusian antiquity was one of the dukes of Veragua, a descendant of Columbus, the discoverer of America. It had been given him by one of the kings of Spain as a reward for the services of his distinguished ancestor. The clock had struck for the last time on the day the duke was born. It was the next day—so runs the legend—that it got out of order. A man was sent up to fix it, but returned without doing so, reporting that the damage had been done by one of the supports rotting away and letting down one side of the clock. Later the staircase leading up to it fell, and from that time the clock remained out of reach.

The duke lived to enter upon his eightieth year. During this long period the clock remained upon the tower, its heavy iron parts rusting away. Now and again a rotted landing or a piece of staircase would fall, but the iron parts of the clock remained entire. The minute hand finally rusted away and fell to the ground. It was longer than the tallest man. Persons gathered about it and wondered at its size and weight.

One night after the duke had entered upon his eightieth birthday those inhabiting the castle and those surrounding it were awakened by the deep toned stroke of a bell. To those within the castle walls the sound seemed to come from above; to those round about it seemed to come from different directions. One said from the east, another from the west, another from up on the heights above, another from the valley below. Every one listened for a second stroke. It came, and another and another, till there had been twelve wheezy clangs which seemed to come from the throat of some monster, such as one reads of in ancient lore.

Then when there came no more strokes every one in the castle turned out into the court, and there was a babel of voices discussing from whence the sounds could have come. An old man, whose youth had been passed in superstitious times, ventured to assert that either angel or devil had resuscitated the old clock and some momentous event had been foretold. A younger person maintained that the sound had come from the sky and was a voice from heaven calling sinners to repentance. There were many theories, but it was generally believed that the sounds were from some ordinary cause and their importance had been magnified by the imagination.

The only person who did not come out to discuss the phenomenon was the duke. He was a bachelor, and, having no family to minister to him in his old age, no one knew whether or not he had heard the strokes of the bell or what interpretation he put upon them. The door of his chamber remained closed and all was quiet within. A woman who attended him, followed by some one who loved the old man, listened near the door, but, hearing nothing, told the others to go to bed. The duke had slept through the clanging, and it would be a shame to awaken him.

Within an hour after the stroke of midnight all were in bed and many were asleep. But some there were who could not dismiss from their minds an occurrence so strange that it surely must portend some calamity. A few sat up till dawn debating whether, if it were a warning, it came from angel or devil. When it was light enough to see clearly they went to the old tower and looked up. A support had given way during the night, and the clock was tilted on its side.

"I told you so," said one. "It was the clock that struck by being tilted."

"Fool!" replied another. "How could such tilting have caused twelve distinct strokes?"

"Have a care!" cried a third as a gust of wind swept through the ruin.

Scarcely had the last words been spoken when the old clock came tumbling down and lay a heap of rotted wood and rusty iron at the bottom.

All turned and went toward the speaker.

The duke's door had been opened, and by the pallor on his face it was known that something had happened. A surgeon was called, who declared that the old man had been dead some hours. Then it came to be believed that the old clock tolled his knell as he was dying as well as its own.

After the duke's death the inhabitants of the castle scattered. It was never again occupied and soon fell into complete ruin.

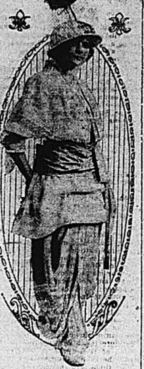
PRINTED CRAPES.

They Are Fashionable For Spring Costumes.



CRAPE AFTERNOON GOWN.

Never were the cottons more varied or beautiful than they are now, and there is an equal diversity in prices. Ratines and crapes are sharing favor, with a noticeable preference for the latter, and the long popular voiles are again in great demand. This is but natural, since these fabrics are ideal for draperies and the clinging effects that are again fashionable.

Printed effects are especially popular, and the flowered crapes are very dainty. In voiles the embroidered designs seem to be preferred, and many of the new ratines are in stripes, checks and plaids.

In the white crapes there are many beautiful fancy weaves. The jacquard and broche designs on crape grounds are new and pretty. White goods generally show the preference for rough surfaces. Ratine is largely used to produce this effect, and it is applied in broken checks or stripes and in conventional or floral designs.

Printed crape in bordered material was used for this very pretty spring gown. The skirt was very fully draped and cut in the front to give a glimpse of the flounce of lace. The long shoulder lines were imparted by means of the deep collar. The wide satin girdle was adjusted above the short tunic with clasp fastenings so that it was removable. The little hat with the ribbon crown was finished with a smart feather ornament.

MY PHOTO GIRL

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

Imagine yourself a man twenty years old, named Richard, in the springtime, when the little god of love is flitting about, bringing down young people here and there with his arrows. You put your hand in the pocket of your light overcoat, smelling of moth balls from the winter's packing, and draw out a large brown envelope, of which you have no remembrance, containing a photograph of the loveliest face of a young girl you have ever seen. And, to cap the climax, written across the lower part of the card are the words in ink, "To dearest Dick."

That was what happened to me on putting on for the first time since the autumn before a spring overcoat. Looking at the face before me, a smile perched on the lips between two dimples, a saucy look in the eyes, I exclaimed:

"Pretty enough to kiss."

After feasting my eyes for some time, drinking in at the same time the words, "To dearest Dick," I began to concern myself as to how the photograph came into my pocket. Taking off the overcoat, I examined it, casting a glance at the maker's tag sewed on the back of the neck. That solved the problem so far as the coat was concerned. The name was not that of my tailor. I was happy to observe, however, that it had been bought at a store in the city where I lived—happy because the nefarious design was born in my mind to rob, if possible, this other Dick of his sweetheart.

However, I was not a common thief and did not care to keep a coat I did not own. I took it to the tailor who made it, told him that I had probably exchanged it the autumn before in some coat room and asked him to find the owner. He succeeded in doing so, and an exchange of coats was made.

It was not long before, at a dance, who should appear on the floor executing the tango but the girl of the photograph. I must pause to say that she not only danced gracefully, but properly. Her partner was a handsome young man whom I assumed to be Dick, and he was Dick.

I spent half an hour in finding some one to introduce me to my photo girl and succeeded. I was and am still fond of dancing and invited her to dance. Before the evening was over I told her that I had her photograph, and after I had teased her for some time as to how I got it I gave her the story.

"I cannot understand," I added, "how 'dearest Dick' could have received back his overcoat without asking for the picture in the pocket."

"It wasn't complimentary, was it?"

"I should say not. It shall not pass out of my possession so easily. No one shall have it except yourself, and I will only surrender it to you on an unequivocal demand."

"Indeed!" she said—a very convenient word by which to say something that means nothing. Encouraged by not receiving an unequivocal demand, I proceeded:

"My name is Dick."

"Indeed!"

Not being stopped in this abrupt lovemaking to one I had not seen before that evening, I proceeded to describe my feelings on finding her photograph, using much the same language as I have used here. Suddenly I stopped in my encomiums, asking to be excused from a charge of flattery.

"You are perfectly excusable," she said. "Have you anything more of the same sort?"

I told her there was a lot more, but words were inadequate to express it. I asked about Dick, advancing as far as I dared toward a direct question as to whether or not she was engaged to him—since she had been called "Miss" I knew she was not married—but she gave me no satisfaction. I have noticed that a woman when a man gets on to the subject of love, so far as she is concerned, is quite willing to listen, but constitutionally opposed to talking. At any rate, when we parted this one had my secret, but I had not been honored with her confidence.

I asked permission to call upon her, and it was granted. After calling once or twice I asked her to go to the theater with me. She said she would refer the matter to Dick. "He is very easy with me," she said. "I expect he won't object."

"He must be a remarkable lover," I said, "to permit his fiancee to go out with men other than himself."

She vouchsafed no reply to this, but informed me later that Dick had consented to her going out with me, putting an accent on the "me" that led me to think I was not to be feared.

One evening when I called on my photo girl I found Dick sitting snuggled up to her on a sofa. They were looking over a book of pictures together. As I entered the room, without even rising she said unconcernedly:

"Dick, this is Mr. ——, who exchanged overcoats with you."

"I think it must have been my fault," I said. "I believe you didn't miss anything that was in your pockets, did you?"

"No; I didn't."

"The photograph I had taken about that time," said the girl.

"My sister is always giving me her photographs," remarked Dick, and he left the room.

"Humph!" I said. "Brother, eh?"

"Did I say he wasn't my brother?"

The Contents Of a Box

By EDITH V. ROSS

I was walking on a side street in St. Petersburg one afternoon when I met a man with a box on a wheelbarrow. As he passed me the wheel dropped from the sidewalk to the street, a distance of about twelve inches. From inside the box came a suppressed groan, as of some one who had been hurt or badly joggled by an unexpected fall. I knew some one was inside the box, and by the tone of the cry I surmised that it was a woman, a girl or a boy.

The man who pushed the barrow went on his way. Whether he had heard the sound from within I don't know. I think he had, for I saw him bite his lip as though displeased with himself at this carelessness. But he pretended that nothing was amiss and did not notice me proceeding with affected unconcern. I walked on a short distance, then turned and, curious for an explanation of the mystery, followed him.

On reaching a building containing government offices he opened a basement door and pushed his load inside, closing the door behind him. This shut me off so far as that means of entrance was concerned, but the building being a public one I could go in through the main door on the floor above. This I did, and after giving the man time to set down his burden I went down into the basement by an interior staircase. I saw the wheelbarrow pusher shoving his barrow out of the door through which he had entered. In the basement, standing against the wall, was the box that had been left there.

I stood some distance from it considering what I should do. I was born with a full measure of curiosity and desired to see the mystery unfold itself. To go to the box and tell whoever was inside that I had the secret of his or her being there would arrest the matter where it was, for the design, whatever it might be, would doubtless be thus forestalled. The only way I could hope to observe its development would be to hide in the basement overnight. Which of these two plans should I adopt?

Shortly after 6 I heard some one come down the stairs and lock up. Then, turning out all the lights except one in the hall, which he left burning low, he mounted the stairs, and I heard his footsteps die away above.

Nothing but the prospect of an adventure would have induced me to be thus locked up for all night. As it was I did not regret my action for a moment. I was sure that some one—I believed a woman—was in that box and during the night she would do something unusual. While waiting I tried to conjure up something she might do. But I confess I could think of nothing whatever.

I expected to have to wait till midnight or morning before a denouement, but when a clock outside struck in deep tones the hour of 9 the play began. I heard the squeak of turning screws. Either some one beside the person in the box was in the basement or a part of the box had been screwed on from the inside. When the screw turning stopped I heard the removal of wood. Whoever moved from the box must pass near me. I heard no step, but a figure flitted before me, and as it passed into the hall where the light was burning I saw that it was a young woman.

This naturally added spice to the adventure. Emerging from my hiding place, I followed on tiptoe. As I reached the hall I saw the figure turn from the topmost step into the upper hall. Still following, I tracked the woman through a corridor till she stopped before an office door with a glass panel, through which shone a light. I, being in darkness, was enabled to steal up near to the figure. I saw her look through the glass into the office.

She raised her arm above her head. The light struck something in her hand. Her other hand was on the doorknob. I dashed forward, but without sound, running on my toe tips, and caught her wrist just as she turned the doorknob and pulled the door slightly ajar. Suppressing a cry, she stood without motion except to turn her head and fix her eyes on me. We both stood silent, motionless. Through the glass I saw a man with his back to us working at a desk. The girl closed the door softly, and, still holding her wrist, I drew her to the main hall, where there was a light burning.

"Are you a spy?" she asked.

"No."

"One of the police?"

"No. I am a simple citizen of St. Petersburg. I have saved a life and have saved you from crime."

"You have prevented my breaking a link in the chain that holds the Russian people. What are you going to do with me?"

"Nothing. But you shall not go back there. Who is he?"

"The chief of police."

"Give me that glass ball you hold."

She did so, and, ringing the janitor's bell, when he came I told him that we had been locked in the building and wished to be let out. He unlocked the main door for us, and we departed.

The girl could not have been over eighteen years old.

The next day I informed the chief of police by an anonymous note that he had better not thereafter work nights alone in his office.

PROVIDENCE GREETS CREATION DRAMA

Running in Many Cities; 40,000 Attend.

CHURCH IS "A ROYAL DIADEM"

Pastor Russell Personally Conducted Opening Exhibitions—In Discourse He Outlined Divine Purpose In Calling the Church—"A Peculiar People"—"Not Many Rich"—"Not Many Learned"—"Not Many Noble"—Chiefly "the Poor of This World"—"Rich In Faith"—Heart Condition the Basis of Selection—Cutting, Polishing and Mounting the Jewels—God's Workmanship to Be Manifested—Lessons to Angels—Lessons to Mankind.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Providence, R. I., April 19.—Pastor Russell personally conducted the opening exhibitions of his now famous Photo-Drama of Creation at the Colonial Theatre here to-day.

It was given out that there is a chain of these Dramas now extending from coast to coast and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf. To-day's attendance was estimated at 40,000.

Pastor Russell's discourse was based on the text: "Thou shalt also be a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God." (Isaiah 62:3.) He said:

God has provided a salvation for the world in the next Age. But the call of this Gospel Age is something unique—separate and apart from the salvation of mankind. During this Age God has been gathering out of the world some of those who have a hearing of faith and a response of heart. These He calls His peculiar treasure, His jewels. In our text He declares that this class shall be a royal diadem in the hand of their God—not on His head, as if an added glory, but in His hand, representative of power. In His Power Jehovah will show forth the Church; and by thus manifesting what He has been able to do with the Church, He will show forth His own praises, in that He will reveal features of His glorious character which have never before been exhibited. What a blessed thing this will be for those who shall be the jewels and who will reflect the glory of the Infinite One who designed this diadem!

The permission of sin has given opportunity for God to develop His great Plan for the eradication of evil. He could easily have prevented Satan from bringing sin into the Universe. He did not, however, exercise His Power to restrain Satan; for He foresaw the glorious results which He will eventually accomplish through the permission of evil. For the same reason He did not interfere when Satan tempted our first parents, but permitted the whole race of mankind to be born into the world in an imperfect and sinful condition. He could have arranged otherwise, but He foresaw that He could work out still more glorious purposes by letting matters take their own course for a time.

The Bible declares that all transgression of the Divine Law is sin, and that all sin is punishable with the same penalty—death. Thus Adam's disobedience in eating the forbidden fruit brought upon him the curse of death, which by the laws of heredity he has transmitted to his posterity—the human race. (Romans 5:12, 19.) Although men may multiply the transgressions, they cannot increase the penalty; for the Divine Law has only one penalty for sin—death.

But Divine Mercy arranged for human redemption by providing that Jesus should pay the penalty for Adam's sin. This He did when He offered Himself and died, "the Just for the unjust." The unforfeited life of Jesus, as a corresponding price for the forfeited life of Adam, guaranteed the cancellation of Adam's penalty. Adam's deliverance will mean the deliverance of all humanity, the removal of the sentence for Original Sin from every member of Adam's race. Then the Messianic Kingdom will be inaugurated for the very purpose of helping mankind out of the sin and death conditions resulting from the fall of our first parents.

God could have associated with our Redeemer some of the angelic host to assist in blessing humanity during the thousand years of the Messianic Kingdom; but He purposed to select from amongst mankind some to be sharers with His Son in the great work of uplifting the world from sin, degradation and death. For this reason a call went forth for a Church class—for those who would separate themselves from the world, take up their cross and follow Jesus. This class is to be a peculiar treasure; they are a people that will be privileged to show forth the praises of Him who hath called them out of darkness into His marvelous light.—1 Peter 2:9.

For nearly nineteen centuries God has been gathering this people from various nations, kindreds and tongues. "The Lord knoweth them that are His"; and He is giving needed assistance to each one who is sincere in heart and earnestly seeking to know God. These, the Apostle declares, are "a peculiar people, zealous of good works." Their good works are not the building of hospitals, asylums, schools and colleges, although they rejoice that the world has the inclination to do these things. The Church engages in the same kind of good works that our Lord engaged in at His First Advent. The Scriptures assert that He "went about doing good." In line with this statement is the Apostle's injunction that the Church "do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the Household of Faith."—Galatians 6:10.

The Household of Faith includes all who are trusting in the precious blood of Christ for their redemption. These the Church will serve on every occasion. The greatest possible good that can be done will be that of serving them with the Truth. The Glad Tidings of great joy which shall be to all people is the very best Message that can be brought to any one—not only speaking peace through the blood of Jesus, but also inspiring the glorious hope of joint-heirship with Christ in the Messianic Kingdom. The Bible tells us that the time is coming when all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped. That time is during the next Age. Meantime, God is doing a wonderful work. He is gathering here and there the saintly ones—those who have an ear to hear His call. Of this class our Lord said, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear."

In gathering this special class, God is looking, not at the outward appearance, but at the heart. He desires those whose hearts are right. This does not mean, as once we thought, that all whom God does not select, or elect, are to be thrown to devils and roasted to all eternity. What a change comes over everything when we realize that God is not premeditating evil against even those who may be His enemies through wicked works, but is merely calling out a class now which He will use later to assist the Redeemer in blessing all the families of the earth!—Galatians 3:16, 29.

The Scriptures declare that in choosing this special class, the Church, God is calling "not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble," but "the poor of this world, rich in faith"—those whom the world would consider the mean things, the weak, the ignoble. The Bible tells us that the rich have plenty to satisfy their hearts and therefore do not feel their need.

It is the same with the intellectual. They rather look down upon the average human being, and say that poor people do not know any better than to believe the story of the fall of man and all the rest of the Bible stories. Thus in what they think is wisdom they ignore the Word of God, in which His whole Plan for man's recovery from degradation, sin and death is shown as connected with the story of Adam and Eve, their fall and the redemption effected by the death of Jesus on Calvary. Whoever leaves out this part of the Bible loses the connecting link, and cannot perceive the Plan of God for man's salvation. Therefore the wise according to the course of this world cannot understand the Divine Program.

The Bible says that not many noble are called. One may be poor and uneducated, and yet have a very noble mind. This class know that they are morally above the average. Therefore they often have a self-satisfied feeling which does not permit them to recognize that they are sinners. And so they are not ready to see that they and all other human beings need a Saviour.

Those whom God has accepted and forgiven through the blood of His Son, our Redeemer, are no longer under the former sentence of sin. These still have weaknesses of the flesh and are striving against them, although they may never be as successful as some other persons who were better born. But the Heavenly Father knows to what extent each is striving against sin, seeking to put down the old nature. Others may misjudge us; but He knows us.

Of this class the Apostle Paul says, "It is God that worketh in you both to will and to do His good pleasure." He has given us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these working in us, showing us the course to take and the result of faithfulness, we may gradually attain the Divine nature. This is the consummation, and comes to us by Divine Power—"changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." Whether we shall be granted that glorious change depends upon the zeal with which we love righteousness, and hate iniquity, and seek to do the will of God.

No matter how mean this class may have been according to nature, the transforming work of the Holy Spirit goes on in their hearts; and they become noble characters. Although they may never be able to control their flesh so that they will seem as noble as some of the world, yet the nobility of heart is what God is looking for. If in the heart He sees true nobility—loyalty to Him, to righteousness, to truth, to the brethren—then they have the evidence that they are His, and that His providences are working together for their good.

In some respects the Lord's work in this class resembles that of a lapidary. The lapidary will not pick up cobble stones or ordinary pieces of quartz and put them on the wheel for polishing, although these stones lie about everywhere. But a real jewel he puts on the wheel. So it is with the Lord's jewels. If you as His child find that the cutting process goes on in your life, it is because the Lord loves you; and all the trials and difficulties that He sees best to bring upon you are purposed to prepare you to be a jewel for mounting in His glorious diadem.

When God accepts any one and begets him with the Holy Spirit, that one is a jewel in the rough, and needs cutting and polishing. Each needs the skill of the great Master Workman in order to be properly shaped and prepared to show forth the glory of God. Just as a diamond properly cut will radiate the glories of the sunlight, so God's jewels will show forth His praises. After each is cut and polished he is laid aside until the great Lapidary is ready to mount the jewels. This is the First Resurrection. Then all these jewels will be mounted in fine gold—symbolic of the Divine nature—and placed in the glorious diadem which is to be in the hand of our God.

Since the experiences through which the Church has been passing throughout the Gospel Age are all working out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, let us take them thankfully, joyfully, gladly, realizing that our Heavenly Father knows better than we do what we need; and that He has promised that His grace will be sufficient, that He will not permit us to be tempted above what we are able to bear, but will with the temptation provide a way of escape.

This is the message that we would leave with you to-day—that the Church is in the Lord's hands, and that He is preparing each individual member to be a jewel in His royal Diadem. When this piece of workmanship is finished, He will show it to the angels as the basis of one of the greatest lessons they have ever had. The angels who remained loyal to God have never known sin in the sense of experiencing it personally. They have always been holy, happy, obedient to Him. They have seen how the redemption of mankind manifests God's Love; and His willingness to exalt those of mankind who are obedient to Him now will be a further lesson to them.

In that Day, when they shall see how the Lord's blessing has eventually brought the Church to glory, the angels of God will all rejoice, even though the Church will be on a still higher plane than they—far above angels, principalities and powers, and Joint-heir with her Lord. The angels are in full harmony with God, and therefore will be ready to sing praises, as the Scriptures set forth, saying, "At the name of Jesus every knee shall bow, of things in Heaven and things in earth." When the Bride shall be glorified with her Bridegroom, all the angelic hosts will bow the knee; for the Church will be on the highest plane of existence, associated with her Lord. Whoever of the angelic hosts are loyal to the Father and to the Son will also be loyal to the Bride, the Lamb's Wife, in that glorious Kingdom.

The Psalmist foretells that "of Zion it shall be said, This and that man was born in her; and the Highest Himself shall establish her." (Psalm 87:5.) Zion represents the Kingdom in glory. The Church in her glorified condition will be Zion, and every faithful saint of God will be born in her. According to the flesh, the Lord's people were begotten and born; according to the Spirit they have been begotten again. But until they experience their change from earthly to Heavenly nature they are not born again. This second birth, the spirit birth, is the First Resurrection. We have the begetting of the Spirit now, but the process is not yet completed; when it is, we shall be born again. Then the record will be made that this one and that one was born in her, born in Zion.

In due time the world will get the record. Then they will get the explanation of what they cannot now understand. They will perceive that the Church class were once blinded like the rest of mankind, but that they had their eyes opened in advance of the others, and were loyal to what God showed them and were blessed. Then they will reason that if God would do this for the Church, He will be willing also to bless their own efforts—though not in the same way that He has blessed the Church.

The Bible clearly indicates that our Heavenly Father purposes to make known to the world just who they are that have made their calling and election sure to a place in the Body of Christ. As the world of mankind come to realize that the peculiar people—whom they could not understand, even though they recognized that these were honest and faithful to the principles of righteousness—were the Body of Christ in the flesh, they will think, The same gracious Heavenly Father that rewarded the Church, and took them to the Heavenly plane, is now dealing with us through them, in Messiah's glorious Kingdom; and He will give us the blessings which He has promised us—restitution to human perfection, if we are willing and obedient to His instructions. Then the world will thank God for His wonderful Plan of salvation.

For nearly nineteen centuries the work of sealing and preparing the jewel class has been in progress. Now the Scriptures indicate that the time has come for the mounting of these cut and polished jewels. The end of the Gospel Age is upon us. Hence if we would be amongst the acceptable jewels we have need to display great diligence and to cooperate with the great Lapidary, that the shaping and polishing of our hearts, our wills, may be perfected quickly; and that we may be ready to be placed in that Royal Diadem which shall eternally reflect the glory of the One who designed the great Plan of the Ages, to the praise of His great and holy name.

Tons of Stamps Used.

The official storehouse of stamps in Britain is not the General Postoffice, as might be surmised, but Somerset House. Here several strong-rooms, in various parts of the building, are entirely used for stocking postal stamps. Often the value of the stamps held at Somerset House is nearly ten million pounds—the limit value of the stamps which the law allows the Controller to stock at one time. A special stamp staff is employed to deal with the five-ton weight of stamps which are despatched daily, an amount which is not easily imagined in figures.

Young Artist—Well, my dear, I just got $10 for that drawing I made in an hour last night.

His Practical Wife—Oh, Gerald! Do you realize that $10 an hour means $60 a day, or, not counting Sundays, about $20,000 a year?

Herald Telegraph: "In face of the present depression, therefore, it is refreshing to read an address such as that delivered before the American Statistical Association, in Boston by Mr. Frederick L. Hoffman, of Newark, N.J., in which the claim was set up that there never was a golden age on this continent equal to the golden age of the present. Mr. Hoffman found nothing but hopefulness from a review of the social and economic progress of the United States during the past 75 years. He thinks that country is but on the threshold of good times, and that its prosperity will be so marked that within 56 years its population will have grown to 200 millions." Within fifty years the United States will not be in it with Canada as to population.

Most of us think we know a lot of people that his satanic majesty doesn't have to waste time running after.

SAFETY OF AMERICANS IS NOW IMPERILED

Rioting Has Broken Out in Mexico City and There Have Been Uprisings in Many Border Towns--The War Spirit is Spreading Like Wildfire Throughout the Country

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Special—The most acute phases of the Mexican situation today were the evidences of uprisings and a growing war spirit along the Mexican border. The blowing up of the American Consulate and the burning of other American buildings at Nuevo Laredo, followed by an exchange of shots between the Mexican Federal troops and the United States patrol, were regarded here tonight as only the beginning of scenes of violence in Northern Mexico.

From Mexico City word reached the State Department last night that rioting was going on, and the spirit of unrest and resentment is rapidly growing. From other parts of Mexico also came reports of a rapidly developing war spirit, and no attempt was made here to-night to conceal the fact that alarm is felt for many of the Americans who have not yet left the country.

With these developments steadily pushing the United States toward an open declaration of war, steps were taken today by at least one European power to make known its willingness to act in the capacity of mediator. It was understood that the French ambassador informed Secretary Bryan in a most formal way that if there was any disposition to resort to mediation, France would be glad to take the initiative. There were indications in despatches from Madrid that King Alfonso of Spain, also was disposed to offer his good offices in the present crisis.

In regard to any suggestion of mediation, however, the Wilson Administration is again confronted with the fundamental objection that it might involve a recognition of the Huerta Government. There were no indication today of any encouragement in this direction from the United States. The impression is growing that President Wilson will be satisfied now at nothing less than complete reparation by Huerta, and that this cannot be brought about through the intervention of any third party.

In the meantime President Wilson is insisting on his technical interpretation of existing conditions. He maintains that no state war exists between this Government and Mexico, and that what has been done thus far is by way of reprisal. Furthermore, there were indications last night that this will continue to be the President's contention until he is forced by a declaration of war on the part of Huerta or by some aggressive act by the dictator to take another stand.

The belief is growing in Washington that Huerta is not going to take the initiative in the matter of formally declaring war, but will continue to harry the United States forces and commit depredations on American property in Mexico until he has forced President Wilson into a declaration. The Mexican dictator is clever enough to realize the advantage it will give him in the eyes of the world to have the United States with its tremendous military power take the initiative in an open war declaration against a weak and bleeding Mexico.

A KINGSTON MAN'S SUDDEN DEATH

Wife Found Him Lying on Floor in Dying Condition

KINGSTON, April 24.—Mr. John Massie, 67 Lower Alfred street, was discovered by his wife, lying on the floor of the kitchen at his residence shortly after six o'clock this morning. Seeing his condition, his wife hastily summoned medical aid but he had passed away before anything could be done for him. He had been in ill health for some time, but had conscientiously attended his duties in the Kingston Hosiery Mill as chief warehouse man.

The late Mr. Massie was in his 41st year and was born and brought up in this city. He was an Anglican in religion and a member of the local Foresters. There are left to survive his loss his sorrowing widow and two young daughters at home. He was a well known citizen and all spoke of him as a very industrious man.

NAVIGATION OPEN ON RIVER ST. LAWRENCE

MONTREAL, April 24.—Navigation in the river St. Lawrence opened this morning when the ferries made their first trips. Ten ocean liners are now on their way to Montreal, opening the summer Atlantic service. The first boat to arrive here will likely be the Teutonic, which was to-day battling hard to get into the St. Lawrence in the teeth of a hurricane and blinding snow storm off Cape Race. The Lachine canal is also ready for lake boats.

PLEA FOR PROTECTION OF THE WILD BIRDS

TORONTO, April 24.—At a meeting of the Canadian Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals held last night at the Moose Club House, 559 Sherbourne street, Miss Marshall Saunders, who has long been interested in humane work and who has written a number of well known books about animals made a strong appeal for the protection of wild birds in the city. Other speakers were M. R. C. Craven, who spoke on vivisection; Mrs. M. Mackay and Mr. Louise Heyd. The president, Mis Durie, who occupied the chair, announced that a down-town office of the society at 26 Adelaide street had just been opened, and is under the management of Mr James C. Richardson, organizing secretary of the society.

EMBARGO RESTORATION A MILITARY MEASURE.

Washington, April 25—Special—The embargo in force today against arms and ammunition all along the Mexican border was a military measure taken by the War Department. It was declared as a part of the operations of the army and navy, and no action by the State Department was involved. By this means the technical re-establishment of the legal embargo, which it was thought might have embarrassed the Administration in its attitude toward the Constitutionalists in Northern Mexico, was avoided. The embargo will be enforced by the entire military organization on the border and under military orders to customs authorities.

PROTESTANT IS BURIED BY FORCE

Relatives and Friends Prevented Protestant Ceremony

(Montreal Mail)

The following signed statement from the Rev. H. Joliat tells of the body of a life long Protestant buried by force in a Roman Catholic cemetery.

"Mr. Hormidas Lafond, an old French Protestant of the Presbyterian Church, Belle-Rivere, whose death occurred on Tuesday, the 21st inst., was yesterday afternoon buried in the Roman Catholic cemetery at Ste. Scholastique. Mr. Lafond had been a Protestant for over twenty years, and was at his death, a member in full communion of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. He had been an active member in church work being treasurer of the Board of Management in his congregation.

"A brother from Montreal, Mr. J. T. Lafond, had made full preliminary arrangements for the burial to take place in the Belle-Rivere Church cemetery, where deceased had himself chosen and fenced a plot. But, when the Rev. J. E. Boucher of St. Hyacinthe, and Rev. H. Joliat of St. John's Church Montreal came to perform the funeral service, some of his relatives armed with a legal advice fromed by M. J. A. Ethier, K.C., and member of parliament for Two Mountains, came in a body and forbade the undertaker to remove the body from the residence, stating that as all his relatives were Roman Catholics, they were entitled to bury him in their own cemetery.

"Mr. Moise Menard, translator in the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, and a former pastor of the Church remonstrated with the people there assembled, stating among other facts, that as the deceased was a member in good standing with his church at the moment of his death, he was entitled to a Protestant burial, and that doing othwise was a crying injustice.

"But in spite of this remonstrance some of the unruly spirits in that great crowd swarmed to the door of the death chamber. In the face of such bitter opposition, and wishing to avoid a hand to hand conflict, the pastors, all the Protestants present, and a few Roman Catholics, quietly withdrew. The body was buried in unconsecrated grounds.

"Is there any kind of redress? Does the British law uphold such a course of action?"

DEATH OF MOUNTEAGLE TOWNSHIP PIONEER

The Bancroft Times in its issue of this week has the following reference to the death of the oldest inhabitant of this county and no doubt the oldest person in this section of the country;

To-day we chronicle the death of Geo. Thompson of Monteagle, who departed this life last Saturday night at 11 o'clock. Mr. Thompson had been ailing nearly all winter, and considering his advanced age, 107 years had he lived to next May, weathered the battle of life bravely. The deceased resided many years in the county of Renfrew, being one of the first hotelkeepers in the village of Douglas. Later on he removed to Monteagle, where he has since resided. His remains were interred at Eganville.

WHERE IS VILLA? AMERICANS ASK

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Reported movements of Mexican troops in the neighborhood of Juarez here yesterday developed the fact that the State and War departments are anxious to secure information as to the whereabouts of General Panche Villa and his force of Constitutionalists. Villa was last heard from in the neighborhood of Torreon, but American authorities have lost track of his movements.

NINE WOMEN FOR KINGSTON PENITENTIARY

Expected to Arrive From Edmonton in a Few Days

KINGSTON, April 24.—The population of Portsmouth penitentiary will be increased in a day or two by the arrival from the Edmonton penitentiary of no fewer than nine women who have been confined there for various degrees of crime, ranging from murder down. The women's department of the Edmonton institution has been closed, and hence the transfer of the women to Portsmouth. This will practically double the number of the women inmates, inasmuch as there are only ten in Portsmouth now, and will make the largest number of women ever imprisoned here.

One young girl who had been confined in Edmonton and who, it was expected would have been brought here, was almost at the last moment turned over to the nuns. This little girl—a foreigner—was little more than a child, being but 13 years old. She had murdered another child by striking her over the head with a shovel.

In this connection it is worth recording that the penitentiary year, which closed March 31, showed on that day no fewer than 511 prisoners at Portsmouth, while the average for the year was 499. The present number is exactly 504.

HUERTA CALLED A HIDEOUS VILLAIN

Such is the description of Huerta in an article contributed by William Bayard Hale, former investigator for President Wilson in Northern Mexico, to the forthcoming World's Work. Of the assassination of President Madero, Mr Hale says:

"Indeed, it would surely have been impossible for tragic romance to have imagined a character so hideously villainously as Victoriona Huerta's or a career so completely justifying the refusal to recognize him.

"Other Powers made no scruple of giving the assassin and usurper immediate recognition. Very well; the United States is not a follower of other Powers. It is, it has been from the beginning of its history, the moral leader of the world. It is the mere fact that great Powers have no conscience—but the United States has a conscience."

Discussing intervention in Mexico Dr. Hale says:

"An American army would have no physical difficulty in getting back out of Mexico; nobody would use it up before it got away; the difficulty would be that greed and a false sense of national honor would do their utmost to keep us permanently in occupation. We do not want Mexico. Especially we do not want her because we do want the goodwill of the rest of Latin America."

READY TO WHIP MILITANTS

LONDON April 25.—(Special.)—The Liberty and Property Defence League which among other things is a sort of Pinkerton detective agency, advertises its readiness to supply suitable guardians "armed with cat-o'-nine-tails and other effective weapons" for the protection of property against militant Suffragettes.

Reporters asked several officials of the Women's Social and Political Union to express their opinion in regard to the advertisement but they refused to do so.

GUARDING PANAMA CANAL

PANAMA, April 25.—(Special.)—A guard of 460 soldiers of the Tenth Infantry was placed on the locks at both ends of the canal last night. There is no present danger of an attack being made, but Governor Goethals wants to be prepared for an emergency.

The largest ship in the United States navy could use the canal today.

HOW MANY SOAPS CAN YOU NAME OFF-HAND?

This is not a new story, but it is worth repeating.

A friend went to a large soap manufacturer and said to him: "See here, you are spending a fortune in advertising. Why do you waste your money "

"How many soaps can you name " asked the soap manufacturer.

The friend studied and named six—all advertised brands.

"That's the answer," replied the soap manufacturer. Out of the hundreds of soaps made, you can name only six, and mine heads the list.

"I CAN'T AFFORD NOT TO ADVERTISE."

That soap manufacturer was a large user of space in the daily newspapers. He died the other day leaving an immense fortune and a name known from one end of the country to the other.

CLEAN-UP DAY IS THE FIRST OF MAY.

Next Friday will be May, Day, Moving Day and Clean-up Day—a triple bill for the enjoyment of the people of this city. It may be difficult for some families to participate heartily in a thorough clean-up of external premises while the front lawns are more or less covered with articles of furniture in process of transfer to or from other quarters, but in their wisdom the City Council might declare May 1 as the official, annual occasion when citizens should not only be asked, but expected, to clean up their outdoor premises, front, back and sides, in workmanlike shape, lock, stock and barrel. And it's necessary, too.

HELD ON CHARGE OF ROBBING MAILS

Former Employe of Post Office Appropriated Registered Letters.

TORONTO, April 25—As he stepped to the platform of a train for New York City, Charles Edwards, 285 George street, was placed under arrest last night by Union Station Constable Holmes on a charge of robbing the mails. He was taken to Court Street station and appeared in the Police Court this morning.

According to the police, the accused was formely employed as a mail driver for Charles and Yonge streets branch post-office. On Thursday, for reasons unknown, he was discharged. Yesterday afternoon he is alleged to have entered the post-office and to have stolen a bag of registered letters. The employes at the office were unaware of his dismissal, and, believing he was taking the mail to his wagon, did not stop him.

He took the bag to a Yonge street hotel and entering the lavatory opened it and extracted the registered letters.

FREE SCHOOL BOOKS FOR P.E.I. SCHOOLS

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., April 24—(Special.)—The government bill to provide cheap school books has the general approval of the residents of Prince Edward Island. The bill will enable parents throughout the Province to obtain school books of a better quality at lower prices. It empowers the Board of Education to purchase text books, and books for schools and school libraries, stationary furniture school supplies, equipment and apparatus for use in schools, and to sell and dispose of them as well as to make regulations for such purchases. The money required for the purpose is to be paid out of the Provincial Treasury, and all sums received from the sale and disposal of books is to form part of the revenues of the Province. An annual return of all monies expended and received under the provision of the Act and with details, showing the books and supplies on hand at the date of return, is to be made by the Superintendent of Education and is to form part of his annual report.

PARADE OF ULSTER VOLUNTEERS

BELFAST, April 25.—(Special.)—A test mobilization of the Ulster volunteers in Belfast tonight filled many nervous citizens with apprehension. The parade of nearly 30,000 men created great excitement and many rumors. It was recalled that the last general mobilization took place on Thursday, March 19th, a date which coincided with the great plot. This, however, was a mere coincidence. The men were summoned on very short notice and were also instructed not to carry arms, but despite this fact extraordinary rumors were afloat concerning an intended raid on the post-office. Another rumor was that the heaviest consignment of war material was to be landed since its importation was banned.

ON WAY TO TORONTO RUINED BY THE WAR

Oil Wells Near Tampico Were Fired --Sent Family Here Ahead

ST. JOHN, N.B., April 24.—Harvey Wilson, an Australian by birth, and for some time British army officer here, is on his way to Toronto, from Mexico. He said he was going there to start life anew; that he owned extensive oil wells near Tampico, but they had been fired during the war of the Federals and Constitutionalists and out of $90,000 he had left but a ticket to Toronto, his grip and $5. He sent his wife and children to Toronto some time ago.

WHERE DO YOU EXPECT TO BE WHEN THE PLUMS FALL?

Booster Period Offers Candidates Opportunity to Secure Votes to Win--Begin Turning in Subscriptions Now--Subs Will Never Count For So Many Votes Again as During the Booster Period

A word to the wise is sufficient! Do your level best now, especially while the "booster" vote offer is good and thereby gain thousands of extra votes for The Intelligencer's grand prize, the touring car.

Only four more days left to get in your finishing touches and be a winner of thousands of extra votes. If you want to win you can do so on the votes that are allowed for subscriptions now. 50,000 votes for every yearly subscription! Endeavor to secure many of them and win the automobile, for it is just as easy to win it as it would be to win one of the minor prizes. If you belong to the touring car class, get in line, put on the high-speed clutch and sail in ahead. It's up to you. Secure as many "booster" votes as possible.

Nominations are still in order, in fact the winner may yet be named at any time, so get all those promises now before some candidate who has not been making much noise gets in the race and goes to the front by leaps and bounds. Also remember that the time to do all this hustling is now and that delays may prove to be a repetition of the tortoise and hare story. The consistent workers are the ones that win in a contest of this kind.

Take no chances and secure every possible subscription before 10 p. m. on Wednesday, April 29th. Pluck and determination will show by fighting up to the clang of the bell and may bring you support from entirely unexpected sources. Many persons can be seen and interviewed in a day. Many subscriptions can be taken if the contestants have the co-operation of their friends.

The contest department of The Intelligencer is open each evening from 7 to 8 o'clock. Phone 36.

BOY'S LIFE WAS SAVED BY UNUSUAL OPERATION

Surgeons at Royal Victoria Hospital, for Second Time in History of the Institution, Successfully Operate on Youth Who Was Slowly Dying of Pericarditis

MONTREAL, April 24.—Death was approaching a nineteen-year-old boy last night when the scalpels of surgeons penetrated to his heart in a most unusual operation and saved his life. As the boy, Bruce Moffatt, of 240 Delisle street, felt his strength returning at the conclusion of the operation he spoke up from the operating table with the words, "I'm feeling good." He is now lying at the Royal Victoria hospital with a tube attached to his heart and there is every hope that the single operation will have done away forever with the pericarditis from which he suffered.

Was Strangling to Death

Moffatt was strangling to death with the disease, when he was rushed to the hospital at 9 o'clock. The veins stood out on his neck as he drew in air with all the strength of his lungs and unconsciousness was expected to take place at any moment. Pericarditis is a disease that contracts the heart, preventing breathing, and when it reaches the acute stage brings on death slowly, but almos too quickly for medical aid to prevent.

Details of his condition had been forwarded to the hospital by telephone. As the ambulance was dashing through the streets at top speed with him, the operating table was being prepared, while the two specialists and a physician were holding a conference. They made ready, with all speed, for an operation that has only been performed once before in the Royal Victoria hospital. It was successful then, being performed by the late Dr. Bell.

Victim Watched Operation

So weak was the boy when laid on the table that it was impossible to administer ether, and a local anaesthetic was injected into his body, about the heart. In consequence he was able to watch the surgeons cutting into his breast. With rapid strokes of the scalpels, the skin and flesh was cut through until the distended heart was bared. Then with the incision into the pericardium, the fluid secretion that had been stopping the heart from beating flowed out and the boy felt relief at once. A tube was inserted to drain the chamber in which the fluid had been, and as it passed away in five minutes the heart resumed its normal beat, the smaller veins relaxed and the boy spoke. The duration of the operation was two hours.

Disease is an Unusual One

In the case of pericarditis a fluid of the same nature as tears accumulates beneath the pericardium and the heart, the pericardium being a membrane enclosing the heart proper. As the fluid is secreted, having no outlet, it distends the pericardium, and at the same time contracts the heart. With the gradual contraction of the heart there is increased difficulty in its beating and strangulation follows. The only possible relief is to draw off the the secretion and to do that it is necessary to cut through the pericardium without endangering the heart.

EVERY NEURALGIC HEADACHE CURED! USE "NERVILINE"—IT WON T FAIL

RUB ON NERVILINE

There may be a thousand pains; yet excepting sciatica, neuralgia is the worst. Most remedies are not strong enough or penetrating enough to relieve neuralgia. You know everything you have tried has failed to give even momentary relief, and you have decided that neuralgia must be borne forever.

Do not make this mistake—try NERVILINE.

Apply it to the sore spot. Notice the glow that spreads deeper and wider as Nerviline's curative power is carried further and further into the tissue. How quickly the pain is soothed! How rapidly it lessens! In a little while you have forgotten the pain—it has actually gone.

Neuralgia gives Nerviline an opportunity of demonstrating its superiority over all other pain remedies. Not magic, as you might imagine after you have used it—simple the application of scientific knowledge to the relief of pain.

Nerviline is a great outcome of modern medical ideas. You cannot afford to be without it, because pain comes quickly and comes to us all. Guaranteed to cure the aches and pains of the whole family. Large bottles, 50 cents, trial size, 25 cents; at druggists, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston Canada.

STROUD'S The Store For Quality

MAKING GOOD STOCK.

The stock pot or saucepan must be scrupulously clean.

A dime's worth of bones and any trimmings of meat, one pound of vegetables to one gallon of water, are generally allowed for soup for eight persons.

The vegetables must be added after the bones have been boiled for two or three hours and all scum has been removed.

The vegetables should be simmered until they are cooked, and no longer.

The seasonings should be added carefully, it being better to season too little than too highly.

Never allow the stock to cool in the pan in which it is cooked. The liquid should be poured off at once through a colander into an earthenware bowl.

When cold the fat should be removed. Never leave the fat caked on the surface. This hastens the stock turning sour and does not preserve it, as some cooks erroneously imagine.

EGG ECONOMY.

Clever Ways of Eliminating Them From the Menu.

Because of the high price of eggs we must often try to get along without so many.

Try this way of mixing the old time flannel cakes.

Take a pint of sour milk and, if very thick, add a little cold water. Stir in it half a teaspoonful of baking soda or saleratus, stirring well; then add flour a little at a time, not forgetting a pinch of salt.

With the last of the flour stir in a teaspoonful of baking powder. The batter should be smooth and not too thick.

Waffle batter can be made the same way, with the addition of about one-fourth cupful of melted butter.

Homemade noodles are much better than bought ones and are easy to make. The following rule will make enough for a family of four:

Break two eggs without separating into a half pint of flour, add a little salt, mix with the fingers, adding flour enough to keep from sticking until you can work it into a ball. Separate in two parts, flour your molding board and roll out thin as paper. Lay on a clean cloth to dry, turning occasionally. They should not be too dry, or they will break in cutting. Lay them together, fold in half and then roll and cut with a sharp knife, separating the slices and tossing them about to lighten them.

Have soup stock boiling and drop into it the noodles with one hand, stirring with the other. Let boil for fifteen minutes. A little parsley added at the last is a great improvement.

JAPANESE PAPERS.

The Latest Fad In Decorations For Walls.

It has long been the custom to decry large patterned papers for the walls of dining rooms and drawing rooms. To begin with, they are considered fatal to the effect of pictures hung against them. The taste has been in favor of papering neutral in tint and unobtrusive in design. In truth, no picture can stand a large figured wall behind it. If people will have long branches and birds with big plumages sweeping across their walls they must give up the idea of seeing pictures there at the same time.

One cannot say how it will be with respect to the pictures, but it is certain that in what concerns the papering itself a complete renovation of taste is going forward. Whole landscapes, and on a big scale, are being thrown on walls, and in this China and Japan are the inspiring sources. Sometimes the whole side of the room shows you mandarins and pagodas intermixed with aggressive specimens of the flora of the celestial empire. Sometimes Chinamen, almost life size, are there also.

The note that comes from Japan is more somber—more in accordance with European taste. And it is not only the note that comes from Japan, but the material itself with which walls are now being covered. It is called Japanese papering, but it is in truth a composition more resembling leather. It is thick, presents the effect of leather and is generally of a rich hue, blending the sheen of copper, bronze and gold. Adorning walls with such lustrous metallic hues has been described as "gilding the bars of one's cage," the cage being the room.

A LOCAL MAN'S REMINISCENCE

I remember the first theatre in Toronto. It was the old Lyceum, owned and managed by John Nickerson. It was a very cheap and ugly wooden building. Mr. Nickerson had three charming daughters: Charlotte, Virginia and Isabella. These girls, with an elderly lady and a very handsome young English actor, constituted the troupe. Occasionally stars would visit the city. Charlotte was the bright particular star. Well educated, beautiful, witty, she proved a great attraction. She was wooed and won by a newspaper man of much ability, a Mr. Morrison. The young English actor was named Marlow. Mrs. Morrison and Mr. Marlow played a one act comedy called "The Morning Call." Marlow was a perfect type of an English gentleman. Never over acting, no bluster or swagger; poor fellow, he fell dead on the stage in a Boston theatre. He married Virginia Nickerson. John Nickerson had a stentorian voice, and he took all the strong parts; a very large man, he was indeed the 'heavy' tragedian. We had some roaring farces similar to "Box and Cox." William Donidge was a great star. I recollect him in the "Octoroon." This play had a great vogue. Denman Thompson, (recently deceased) played in the "Octoroon" long before he made his fortune in "The Old Homestead." In the days of the gold excitement in North Hastings, when the city swarmed with miners and speculators, and you could not walk up Front street without being stopped by men who wanted you to make a fortune by purchasing stock in mines in Madoc, Den Thompson appeared upon the scene. He was thought to be connected with a tough gang, capable of all sorts of crimes, but it was undoubtedly an error. He was very genial and humorous, and a capital actor. The Holman troupe, with the lovely Sallie Holman as the star, travelled for many years through Ontario. Their forte was comic opera. Sallie was a beautiful girl; I well recollect her and her sister in the opera of "Gerfola." Their mother managed everything—took the tickets, played the piano, and was the mistress of the robes. The greatest actor who visited Belleville in those days was Charles B. Fechter. He played "Ruy Blas" in the old theatre above the Bank of Commerce. I saw the great Sothern in his wonderful impersonation of "Dundriare." He afterwards appeared in "The Hornets' Nest." Sothern was much opposed to his son becoming an actor. The instinct was too strong, and I had the pleasure of hearing the son in "Macbeth" a few weeks ago. We had Kean playing Shakesperean characters for a number of years. A gentleman, who had been a minister in Chicago, named Milne, appeared here in the "Fool's Revenge" and in "Othello." Charlotte Thompson gave one performance, "The Two Orphans." A charming little French actress appeared here for several seasons. One of her best characters was in the play of "The Romance of a Poor Young Man." She could not speak English fluently, and her peculiar English was fascinating. A beautiful young girl named Fanny Reeves, married Eugene McDowell. The bride was given away by Sir Hugh Allan. They played in Belleville many times. Those fine plays, Rosedale and Shangreen were much appreciated. I have scarcely seen a more lovely woman than Fanny Reeves. Unfortunately they went to the West Indies, and their trip was financially a failure. McDowell became an imbecile and died in an asylum. Louis Morrison gave several representations of "Faust", and "Louis the eleventh" Morrison travelled in his private car, which burned up, causing him a great loss of all of his costumes, jewellery, etc. I had the pleasure of hearing Mansfield five times, although he never appeared in Belleville. Mansfield's "Shylock" differed from Sir Forbes Robertson's "Shylock" greatly. Mansfield portrayed him as a very old man, his head and hands trembling with the palsy. He did not exhibit the terrible, fierce passion and malignity of Robertson's rendition. Mansfield was a wonder. Whether he played "Richard the Third," "Shylock" or "Don Carlos," he captivated and enthralled his audiences. Robert Mantel played many times in Belleville. "The Revols" and "The Corsican Brothers." Mansefild stands very nearly at the head of his profession today. I think of celebrated actors I have seen who have all crossed the boundary, and whose names are seldom mentioned. I think how ephemeral was their glory. Lawrence Barrett, John McCullough, Joseph Jefferson, Florence Emmett, Toole, Henry Irvine, Buckstone, and a host of others, including Sothern, Fechter and Mansefild. I heard Mr. Sandwell at the Ladies' Canadian Club. We should not depend upon the United States for actors or plays. Several of the most famous actresses of today are Canadians, such as Miss Anglin and May Irwin. We have so greatly enjoyed the visits of Martin Harvey and Lawrence Irving that we hope very soon to have some celebrated English actors visit Belleville.

Yours truly,
J. J. B. FLINT.

LAUNDRY HINTS.

A little white sugar in hot water, say two lumps to a basinful, is a sufficient stiffening for delicate laces.

Use a mixture of gasoline and flour when cleaning delicate fabrics—laces ribbons, plumes, etc. Dip the articles into the mixture and rub them thoroughly.

Torn lace can be repaired by first placing a piece of paper under the hole and then stitching on the machine back and forth until the hole is completely filled. Very fine thread should be used and the paper carefully picked out after the material is removed from the machine.

Flour For China.

All the flour mills in the West continue to make extensive shipments of flour to Hong Kong and other Oriental points. This indicates the favor in which western Canadian flour is held in these countries. The Medicine Hat mills are shipping considerable quantities to San Francisco and other United States coast points through having the advantage of a short rail haul over the large milling centres of the United States.

Wireless Baffled By Sun.

In wireless signalling at Newcastle, N.B., it has been found that stations that can reach a ship 1,000 or 2,000 miles at night cannot reach 200 or 300 feet in the daytime. This is supposed to be caused by the electrification of the ether by the sun's rays, which presumably makes it more difficult for the artificially created waves to travel through the ether.

OUR ADJUNCT THEATRE DISCUSSED BY CRITIC

"Our Adjunct Theatre" was the subject of an address delivered yesterday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. building by Mr. B. K. Sandwell, dramatic critic for the Montreal Herald. The address was given under the auspices of the Ladies' Canadian Club of this city and the members turned out in large numbers. Mrs. J. F. Wills occupied the chair, and in a few well chosen remarks introduced the speaker.

Mr. Sandwell in his opening remarks referred to the fact that his subject was by no means of a political nature although the word adjunct divided the population of Canada a year or so ago. In speaking directly to the subject the speaker said that in the realm in which a vast and ever increasing number of Canadians acquire a large part of their ideas and opinions, the Dominion of Canada is almost absolutely dependent upon the adjacent Republic. We are permitted to build our own theatres, but we have nothing to say, whatever, about the performances which shall be given in them. The shows which are to be performed in our theatres are booked for us by a group of gentlemen, or to be perfectly accurate, two groups of gentlemen in the city of New York. To these gentlemen the Canadian cities are in the same position as the American cities and must be used to keep the shows going long enough to repay the cost of production. It does not matter whether those shows have any special appeal for the people of Canada or not. English players and companies have repeatedly toured South Africa, Austria and other countries, without the assistance of American money or American enterprise. Canada is much nearer to England and could, he believed, successfully bid for occasional visits from the best artists in England even if the United States did not exist. Most of the American plays, the speaker contended, were not very good plays, but no doubt are improving. In concluding his address, Mr. Sandwell said:

"I have not much time, either, to discuss with you the means by which we may in time emancipate ourselves from our position as a theatrical adjunct of the neighboring republic. That is a secondary matter; when once Canada awakens to the fact that the present situation is an anomaly, she will not be long in taking steps to amend it. There are two chief methods for bringing about our theatrical declaration of independence — two methods, belonging respectively to the two different systems of theatrical organization—centralized and local. Under the centralized system we must continue for some time to depend upon a producing centre outside of Canada, for we are not a very populous or wealthy country. Under that system we can, if we like, make London our centre to a much greater degree than New York. The centralized system has been the only system in operation on this continent or in England for a decade and more; but there is now arising both in England and in the United States another system, a much older system come to life again, which seems destined henceforth to share the field with the centralized system. This is the localized system, the system of strong permanent companies established in their own theatres in every city capable of supporting them and pro- they find that city wants. Canada has already seen, in the case of the Manchester and Dublin companies, something of the work that can be done by such organizations. The establishment of such companies in three or four of the leading Canadian cities would give a foundation for the true Canadian theatre such as it could not secure in any other way. I hope to see something done in both of these directions within a few years; and I think that I have said enough to convince you that any reasonable and intelligent movement in either direction is worthy of the support of Canadians. I do not suggest that you hand over your money without enquiry to anybody who says that he is founding a Canadian repertory theatre or is booking English companies for an all-Canadian tour. Even the best of gospels may have its false prophets as well as its true ones, and it takes certain very high qualifications to organize either a repertory theatre or a booking agency. But when the right man comes along, as he will in the near future, lend him a hand. We have allowed ourselves to get into a position which is not becoming to us, as a self-governing community and a member of the British sisterhood of nations. Let us get out of it, and see that the 49th parallel is re-established on the theatrical map of North America.

At the close of the address a hearty vote of thanks, proposed by Miss Guest and seconded by Mrs. Springer, was tendered to Mr. Sandwell. The singing of the National Anthem closed the meeting.

Famous British Admiral
Tells What Zam-Buk Did For Him
Many famous persons have testified to the great value of Zam-Buk, and amongst the most recent is Admiral Rodney M. Lloyd. Writing from the Royal Naval Club, Portsmouth, England, Admiral Lloyd says:
"I have found Zam-Buk most reliable for healing cuts and abrasions; while for the relief of skin irritation it is invaluable."
Another famous user of Zam-Buk is Mr. Frank Scudamore, the War Correspondent, who supplied Canadian papers with their dispatches during the Boer War. Mr. Scudamore says: "Some poisonous dye on my underclothing came in contact with a small ulcer on my leg and blood poisoning set in. Inflammation, pain and swelling followed. My medical man's treatment did not seem to do any good, as ulcer after ulcer broke out, until my left leg from knee to foot was one mass of sores. I had seventeen deep ulcers at one time. I could not put my foot to the ground and was really in a pitiful state. A friend advised Zam-Buk, and I applied this herbal balm. It was really wonderful how it soothed the pain and aching and gave me ease.
"I continued with it, leaving off all other treatment, and at the end of a week's treatment my leg was not like the same. A few boxes of Zam-Buk healed all the sores, and bit by bit new, healthy skin covered the places which had been so deeply pitted and scarred by ulceration and blood poison. The limb is now perfectly healthy."
Zam-Buk is a cure for piles, eczema, cold cracks or chaps, ulcers, ringworm, cuts, abscesses, burns, children's rashes and for all skin injuries and diseases. All druggists and stores sell at 50c box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto for price. Refuse imitations.

ROYAL HUMANE SOCIETY MEDAL FOR G.T.R. CONDUCTOR

The Royal Humane Society of Canada and the citizen of St. Hyacinthe combined this week to honor Mr. Austin Doyle, passenger train conductor on the Grand Trunk Railway. Mr. Doyle saved the life of a young woman at St. Hyacinthe Station on Dec. 9th last at a great risk to himself.

The train of which he had charge was bound for Montreal and was drawing into the St. Hyacinthe Station at a slow rate of speed when Miss Cecilia Beauregard attempted to cross the tracks and was struck by the locomotive. From a opposite direction a freight train was approaching and Miss Beauregard was thrown almost under its wheels. Conductor Doyle was on the space between the two tracks. When she attempted to rise a portion of the brake apparatus struck her and she was in danger of being fatally injured. The conductor sprang from the train, and, grasping Miss Beauregard held her in a safe position until the two trains drew clear.

Col. Bruce Campbell drew the attention of the Royal Humane Society to the conductor's action and the Society decided to present Mr. Doyle with its bronze medal. The presentation of the medal took place at St. Hyacinthe on Monday. Mr. P. Payan, the mayor of the town, made the formal presentation but Miss Beauregard was present and pinned the medal on to the conductor's uniform.

A CREDITABLE SHOWING

Despite the cry of "Blue Ruin," and financial stringency of the past year, Hon. Mr. White, in his budget speech, was able to present a statement which shows that the position of the Dominion was never better, and that the present finance minister has ably and skilfully brought the ship of state safely through a period of commercial difficulty. The revenue for the year was $163,000,000, and the expenditure $126,500,000, leaving a surplus of revenue over and above the amount required for expenditure upon current account of no less than $36,500,000.

During the past three years Mr. White has been able to announce the three largest surpluses in Canadian history.

For the year 1911-12 the surplus was $37,000,000.

For the year 1913-14 the surplus is $36,500,000.

This is a record of which Mr. White and the Conservative party may well be proud.

The capital expenditure for the year was $57,000,000. To meet this on revenue account there was a surplus of $36,500,000, leaving a debit balance of $20,500,000, from which there was deducted $1,500,000, representing investments made in sinking funds. The result will be that the net debt is increased by nineteen millions.

FULLY APPRECIATED

There is one thing in connection with the reduction which the Government has made in the duty on agricultural implements, which will be appreciated at its true value by the farmers of Canada, and it is this:—

If the reciprocity pact of 1911 had carried over the heads of the people the recent cut of 5 per cent. could not have been made. The reciprocity agreement provided for a reduction of only 2½ per cent., and if Canadians desired a further reduction they would be compelled to go begging to Washington, hat in hand, to get the permission of Americans to do so.

Time has splendidly vindicated the Conservative party in its great fight for our fiscal independence against those who would have made Canada an "adjunct of the United States." Ontario and Quebec a back yard for New England and New York, our West a field of exploitation for American trusts, and our workingmen the sweated slaves of those bloated barons of wealth who build for themselves ivory castles out of the skulls of their greed-slain victims.

Nervous Diseases In the Spring

CURED BY TONING THE BLOOD AND STRENGTHENING THE NERVES.

It is the opinion of the best medical authorities, after long observation, that nervous diseases are more common and more serious in the spring than at any other time of the year. Vital changes in the system, after long winter months may cause much more trouble than the familiar spring weakness from which most people suffer as the result of indoor life, in poorly ventilated and often overheated buildings. Official records prove that in April and May neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy and other forms of nervous troubles are at their worst and that then, more than any other time a blood-making, nerve-restoring tonic is needed.

The antiquated custom of taking purgatives in the spring is useless for the system really needs strengthening, while purgatives only gallop through the bowels, leaving you weaker. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine, for they actually make the new, rich, red blood that feeds the starved nerves and thus cure the many forms of nervous disorders. They cure also such other forms of spring troubles as headaches, poor appetite, weakness in the limbs, as well as remove unsightly pimples and eruptions. In fact they unfailingly bring new health and strength to weak, tired and depressed men, women and children.

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FRENCH SYMPATHY FOR THE MEXICANS?

PARIS, April 24.—With the departure of King George and Queen Mary of England after their official visit here today, the papers of Paris turn their attention to the American situation.

For four months the papers here have attacked President Wilson as a weakling because of the anarchy permitted to continue in Mexico. Now they have completely reversed.

Maurice de Waleffe, editor of the Paris Midi, today declared that the United States' lack of scruples was only redeemed by their hypocrisy.

"Wilson is morally responsible for the flow of blood in the civil war in Mexico," de Waleffe declares. "He pretends to be so sad over the few lives lost at Vera Cruz and is lightly preparing to sacrifice thousands of others for the sake of laying hands on the oil wells. Europe naturally disapproves. We will watch the assassination and robbery of the poor people in mutual horror."

Brantford Courier: "It is of the irony of fate that Wilson and Bryan, both well-known advocates of international peace, should be up against the Mexican embroglio."

ATTACKS ARE RENEWED

Expenditures Run Gauntlet of Time-Honored Objections.

String of Liberal Amendments Revamping Earlier Criticisms of Finances of the Province Are Answered and Voted Down In the Legislature—Sinclair Gets Reprimand for Attack on Dr. Seath.

TORONTO, April 25.—On the second reading of a bill to sanction the Government's appropriations in the Legislature yesterday the Opposition renewed its criticism of the finances of the province.

Liberal Whip Bowman said the sum of the estimates along with the statutory payments of last year would involve an expenditure of $22,000,000. Allowing for the cash balance of $2,380,000 carried over from last year and the balance available on the New Ontario loan, which, with the new loan of $8,000,000 authorized, along with the estimated receipts, would leave a shortage of three or three and one-half million dollars. The Government would soon face direct taxation.

Hon. Mr. Lucas replied that during the year ordinary revenue would exceed ordinary current expenditure and a surplus would be found at the end. The Government would never fear to go into public money markets for borrowing purposes. No class of people was suffering an undue burden and the masses were getting off lightly.

The finances of the Provincial University formed the subject of an amendment by Mr. Rowell when the education estimates were being considered. It expressed regret that the Government had failed to present proposals for the aid of the university.

Mr. Lucas replied that the grants to the University for the year would approximate $500,000 and the amendment was defeated.

An amendment offered by Mr. Sinclair, opposing the expenditure of $100,000 on Government House was also defeated.

John Seath, Superintendent of Education, recently published a letter that contained references to W. E. N. Sinclair, M.P.P., and as a result Mr. Sinclair asked in the House yesterday that either Dr. Seath be reprimanded by Hon. Dr. Pyne or called before the Bar of the House and dismissed.

Dr. James McQueen moved that the House "protest against this unfair and unjust attack by the Superintendent of Education upon one of the honorable members of this House in respect to his legitimate work as a member," and "that this House must hold the Minister of Education responsible for this breach of the privileges of the members of the House."

Dr. Pyne, in reply, said that he would not help to air old grudges in the House. He believed Mr. Sinclair should be censured for using his position to attack a man who could not answer him.

The Liberal motion lost.

The Sudbury district is asking the Ontario Government to extend the T. & N. O. line from Elk Lake to Sudbury via Gowganda if engineers approve the feasibility of such a project. A large deputation yesterday, led by Charles McCrea, M.P.P., of Sudbury, and supported by prominent Sudbury men, waited on the Cabinet and urged the extension of a necessity to the growing north. Shipments of a thousand tons of ore per day and a flourishing pulp wood business were some of the business the line would handle.

Hon. Mr. Hearst said that the matter was under investigation, but Government resources being limited, they could not promise to build the road, but if the reports justified it $275,000 would be placed to the building account this year.

CHARGES ANOTHER MAN.

Hans Schmidt Makes an Effort to Escape the Chair.

NEW YORK, April 25.—District Attorney Whitman yesterday received a letter from Hans Schmidt, the former priest, awaiting execution for the murder of Anna Aumuller, in which Schmidt charges another man with the crime. He declares that the Aumuller girl died as the result of a criminal operation performed by a man he named. He admitted that he had himself disposed of the body, and also admitted that he had shammed insanity during his trial.

Mr. Whitman said Schmidt also had written to Governor Glynn, begging that his sentence of death be commuted to life imprisonment. The district attorney, it is understood, placed little credence in Schmidt's new story.

PURITY

So that you may use less flour, we do what a home cook would do if she were in our place.

From every shipment of wheat delivered at our mills we take a ten pound sample. We grind this into flour. Bread is baked from the flour.

We find that some samples make more bread and better bread than others. So we keep the shipment from which the more and better bread comes. The others we sell.

You save money by using flour that bears this name. And you get better bread.

"RUN TO EARTH"

By the Author of
"Lady Audley's Secret," "Aurora Floyd," etc., etc.

"You can wait", he said to the hackney coachman; "I shall be here in about an hour."

The man drove away to refresh his horses at the nearest inn, and Reginald Eversleigh strode impatiently past the trim little servant-girl who opened the garden gate, and walked, unannounced, into the miniature hall.

Everything in and about Victor Carrington's abode was the perfection of neatness. The presence of poverty was visible, it is true, but poverty was made to wear its fairest shape. In the snug drawing-room to which Reginald Eversleigh was admitted all was bright and fresh. White muslin curtains shaded the French window; birds sang in gilded cages, of inexpensive quality, but elegant design; and tall glass vases of freshly cut flowers adorned tables and mantlepiece.

Sir Oswald's nephew looked contemptuously at this elegance of poverty. For him nothing but the splendor of wealth possessed any charm.

The surgeon came to him while he stood musing thus.

"Do you mind coming to my labratory?" he asked, after shaking hands with his unexpected visitor. "I can see that you have something of importance to say to me, and we shall be safer from interruption there."

"I shouldn't have come to this fag-end of Christendom if I hadn't wanted very much to see you, you may depend upon it, Carrington", answered Reginald, sulkily. "What on earth makes you live in such an out-of-the-way hole?"

"I am a student, and an out-of-the-way hole—as you are good enough to call it—suits my habits. Besides, the house is cheap and the rent suits my pocket."

"It looks like a doll's house", said Reginald, contemptuously.

"My mother likes to surround herself with birds and flowers", answered the surgeon; "and I like to indulge any fancy of my mother's.

The one tender sentiment of a dark and dangerous nature was this man's affection for his widowed mother.

He opened the door of an apartment at the back of the house, and entered, followed by Mr. Eversleigh.

Reginald stared in wonder at the chamber in which he found himself. The room had once been a kitchen, and was much larger than any room in the cottage. Here there was no attempt at either comfort or elegance. The bare, white-washed walls had no adornment but a deal shelf here and there, loaded with strange-looking phials and gallipots. Here all the elaborate paraphernalia of a chemist's labratory was visible. Here Reginald Eversleigh beheld stoves, retorts, alembics, distilling apparatus; all the strange machinery of that science which always seems dark and mysterious to the ignorant.

The visitor looked about him in utter bewilderment.

"Why, Victor," he exclaimed, "your room looks like the labratory of some alchymist of the Middle Ages—the sort of man people used to burn as a wizard."

"I am rather an enthusiastic student of my art", answered the surgeon.

The visitor's eyes wandered round the room in amazement. Suddenly they alighted on some object on the table near the stove. Carrington perceived the glance, and, with a hasty movement, very unusual to him, dropped his handkerchief upon the object.

The movement, rapid though it was, came too late, for Reginald Eversleigh had distinguished the nature of the object which the surgeon wished to conceal from him.

It was a mask of metal, with glass eyes.

"So you wear a mask when you are at work, eh, Carrington?" said Mr Eversleigh. "That looks as if you dabble in poisons."

"Half the agents employed in chemistry are poisonous", answered Victor, coolly.

"I hope there is no danger in the atmosphere of this room just now?"

"None whatever. Come, Reginald, I am sure you have bad news to tell me, or you would never have taken the trouble to come here."

"I have, and the worst news. My uncle has married this street ballad-singer."

"Good; then we must try to turn this marriage to account."

"How so?"

"By making it the means of bringing about a reconciliation. You will write a letter of congratulation to Sir Oswald—a generous letter—in which you will speak of your penitence, your affection, the anguish you have endured during this bitter period of enstrangement. You can venture to speak freely of these things now, you will say, for now that your honored uncle has found new ties you can no longer be suspected of any mercenary motive. You can now approach him boldy, you will say, for you have henceforth nothing to hope from him except his forgiveness. Then you will wind up with an earnest prayer for his happiness. And if I am not very much out in my reckoning of human nature, that letter will bring about a reconciliation. Do you understand my tactics?"

"I do. You are a wonderful fellow, Carrington."

"Don't say that until the day when you are restored to your old position as your uncle's heir. Then you may pay me any compliment you please."

"If ever that day arrives, you shall not find me ungrateful."

"I hope not; and now go back to town and write your letter. I want to see you invited to Raynham Castle to pay your respects to the bride."

"But why so?"

"I want to know what the bride is like. Our future plans will depend much upon her."

Before leaving Lorrimore Cottage, Reginald Eversleigh was introduced to his friend's mother, whom he had never before seen. She was very like her son. She had the same pale, sallow face, the same glittering black eyes. She was slim and tall, with a somewhat stately manner, and with little of the vivacity usual to countrywomen.

She looked at Mr. Eversleigh with a searching glance—a glance which was often repeated, as he stood for a few minutes talking to her. Nothing which interested her son was without interest for her; and she knew that this young man was his chief friend and companion.

Reginald Eversleigh went back to town in much better spirits than when he had left the West-end that morning. He lost no time in writing the letter suggested by his friend, and, as he was gifted with considerable powers of persuasion, the letter was a good one.

"I believe Carrington is right", he thought, as he sealed it: "and this letter will bring about a reconciliation. It will reach my uncle at a time when he will be intoxicated with his new position as the husband of a young and lovely bride; and he will be inclined to think kindly of me, and of all the world. Yes—the letter is decidedly a fine stroke of diplomacy."

His hopes did not deceive him. The reply came by return of post, and was even more favorable than his most sanguine expectations had led him to anticipate.

"Dear Reginald" wrote the baronet, "your generous and disinterested letter has touched me to the heart. Let the past be forgotten and forgiven. I do not doubt that you have suffered, as all men must suffer, from the evil deeds of their youth.

"You were no doubt surprised to receive the tidings of my marriage. I have consulted my heart alone in the choice which I have made, and I venture to hope that choice will secure the happines of my future existence. I am spending the first weeks of my married life amidst the lovely solitudes of North Wales. On the 24th of this month, Lady Eversleigh and I go ot Raynham, where we shall be glad to see you immediately on our arrival. Come to us, my dear boy; come to me, as if this unhappy estrangement had never arisen, and we will discuss your future together—Your affectionate uncle, Oswald Eversleigh. "Royal Hotel, Bannerdoon, N. W."

Nothing could be more satisfactory than this epistle. Reginald Eversleigh and Victor Carrington dined together that evening, and the baronet's letter was freely discussed between them.

"The ground lies all clear before you now", said the surgeon; "you will go to Raynham, make yourself as agreeable as possible to the bride, win your uncle's heart by an appearance of extreme remorse for the past, and most complete disinterestedness for the future, and leave all the rest to me."

"But how the deuce can you help me at Raynham?"

"Time alone can show. I have only one hint to give you at present. Don't be surprised if you meet me unexpectedly amongst the Yorkshire hills and wilds, and take care to follow suit with whatever cards you see me playing. Whatever I do will be done in your interest, depend upon it. Mind, by the bye, if you see me in the north, that I know nothing of your visit to Raynham. I shall be as much surprised to see you as you will be to see me."

"So be it; I'll fall into your plans. As your first move has been so wonderfully succesful, I shall be inclined to trust you implicitly in the future. I suppose you will want to be be paid rather stiffly by and bye, if you do succeed in getting me any portion of Sir Oswald's fortune?"

"Well, I shall ask for some reward, no doubt. I am a poor man, you know, and do not pretend to be disinterested or generous. However, we will discuss that question when we meet at Raynham."

On the 28th of July, Reginald Eversleigh presented himself at Raynham Castle. He had thought never to set foot upon that broad terrace again, never more to pass beneath the shadow of that grand archway; and a sense of triumph thrilled through his veins as he stood once again on the familiar threshold.

And yet his position in life was terribly changed since he had last stood there. He was no longer the acknowledged heir to whom all dependents paid deferential homage. He fancied that the old servants looked at him coldly, and that their greeting was the chilling welcome which is accorded to a poor relation. He had never done much to win affection or gratitude in the days of prosperity. It may be that he remembered this now and regretted it, not from any kindly impulse towards these people, but from a selfish annoyance at the chilling reception accorded him.

If you know someone who is troubled with head noises, or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand to them, and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferers perhaps from total deafness. Recent experiments have proved conclusively that catarrhal deafness, head noises, etc., were the direct cause of constitutional disease, and that salves, sprays, inhalers, etc., merely temoprise with the complaint, and seldom, if ever, effect a permanent cure. This being so, much time and money has been spent of late by a noted specialist in perfecting a pure, gentle, yet effective tonic that would quickly dispel all traces of the catarrhal poison from the system. The effective prescription which was eventually formulated, and which has aroused the belief that deafness will soon be extinct, is given below in understandable form, so that anyone can treat themselves in their own home at little expense.

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength), about 75c worth. Take this home, and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of moist or granulater sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

The first dose promptly ends the most distressing head noises, headache, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., while the hearing rapidly returns as the system is invigorated by the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell and mucus dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms that show the presence of catarrhal poison, and which are quickly overcome by this efficacious treatment. Nearly ninety per cent. of all ear troubles are directly caused by catarrh, therefore there are but few people whose hearing cannot be restored by this simple home treatment. Every person who is troubled with head noises, catarrhal deafness, or catarrh in any form, should give this prescription a trial. There is nothing better.

Important.—In ordering Parmint always specify that you want Double Strength; your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St. Montreal, P. Q. who make a specialty of it.

DOES YOUR STOMACH CONTAIN A GLASSFUL OF ACID?

96 OUT OF 100 DYSPEPTICS HAVE DANGEROUS ACID IN THEIR STOMACH WHICH MUST BE NEUTRALIZED IF GOOD HEALTH IS TO BE MAINTAINED.

If you held a teaspoonful of hydrochloric acid in your mouth for only a second you would not be surprised at its burning and inflaming all the tissues; yet an eminent specialist states that 96 out of 100 dyspeptics go about with a glassful or more of this powerful acid in their stomachs and then wonder what causes the burning and aching and why they suffer the discomfort after meals. To put wholesome food into an acid stomach only increases the discomfort, because the acid mixes with the fresh food and turns it sour, making a lot more acid. The acid condition causes food fermentation, which irritates, distends and inflames the tender stomach lining, and it is not surprising that specialists say acid stomachs are dangerous. This decidely dangerous and uncomfortable condition can be overcome either by following a strict diet or, and this is far easier and more quickly effective, by taking a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a quarter glassful of water after meals to neutralize the acidity. The latter course is much more satisfactory because it corrects the acidity and banishes discomfort without any need for diet,

BASE BALL JOTTINGS

(From Toronto News)

Outfielder Kippert, late of Cincinnati, was the big factor in the Royals win over Jersey. He made three hits, scored three runs and stole three bases.

Buffalo "horned" Baltimore 5 to 3 and broke the ice for their first victory. Beebe was too good for the Birds until the last two periods. Dunn used three pitchers and as many pinch hitters, but all in vein.

Tesreau pitched a strong game for New York, holding the Phillies to four hits in seven innings, and striking out nine men, five of his strikeouts coming in succession in the fourth and fifth innings. Schupp, a New York youngster, pitched the last two innings and was hit hard. Mike Donlin was presented with a floral horseshoe. New York made eleven hits.

Walter Johnson, the great, was hammered for ten hits by Boston, and lost his first home game 5 to 0. Rankin Johnson, a recruit, held the Senators to six hits.

Newark again won from the Hustles Schact holding the Ganzellites to three hits and winning 2 to 1. Hoff was always good. Tooley with two singles, a triple and two stolen bases was the winners' star. E. Zimmerman was also in the limelight with long doubles.

Joe Schultz is playing a bang up game at third for the Hustlers. He had a two-bagger yesterday and fielded faultlessly.

Nearly 20,000 people saw the Pirates wallop St. Louis, and score their seventh victory of the season at Pittsburg. Adams outpitched Hagerman.

With Mitchell opposing Cicotte, the Naps broke their long losing streak, beating league leaders 4 to 1. Wood a recruit in right for Cleveland made a singe and a triple.

Sweeney's triple with the bases full won from New York Yanks over the Athletics at Philadelphia 5 to 3. Bush held the Chance men to one hit in seven innings, and then "blew up." Cole was batted out in two innings, but Schultz who succeeded him, was invincible.

PITCHER GAW HAS BEEN SUSPENDED BY KELLY

New York, April 24—Pitcher George Gaw did not accompany the Toronto team to this city tonight for the series with Jersey City and New York. Manager Kelly reflected he could go to his home in Boston to make up his mind whether he preferred to pitch for the Leafs or study dentistry. Gaw had been making daily trips between this city and Boston to attend a college of dentistry. He has failed utterly to get into condition. His dilatery tactics have caused him to be warned several times by Kelly, but apparently he took no heed to the warnings. There are still nine pitchers with the Toronto team.

A straight right to the point of the jaw ended the contest after two minutes and forty seconds' fighting in the fourth round. Flynn was knocked down several times in earlier rounds, and took the count twice before receiving the knockout blow in the fourth.

ENORMOUS DEMAND FOR "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

1,152,000 Boxes Sold Last Year.

Six of These Fruit Liver Tablets for Every Man, Woman and Child in the Dominion.

In seven short years, "Fruit-a-tives" has become the most famous and the most widely used medicine in Canada that has ever been introduced to the people of the Dominion. Even those who take "Fruit-a-tives" regularly and recommend these famous fruit juice tablets to their friends, probably have no idea of the enormous number of "Fruit-a-tives" that are being used by those wishing to regain their health.

Last year, over eight thousand gross boxes of "Fruit-a-tives" were sold. As there are one hundred, forty four boxes in a gross, this means that over one million one hundred thousand boxes were sold in 1912. And this year, this number will be still further increased.

This means a box of "Fruit-a-tives" for every six persons in Canada, or six tablets for every man, woman and child in the country.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold in every section of the Dominion. On the rugged Atlantic coast, throughout the Maritime Provinces, among the French in Quebec and the English in Ontario, all over the great Prairie Provinces and on the shores of the Pacific, "Fruit-a-tives" is the best selling medicine in stock.

This is true because "Fruit-a-tives" gives results. For chronic Constipation, Indigestion and Stomach Trouble—for bad Blood, Skin Eruptions and Eczema—for Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago—for Kidney, Bladder and Urinary Troubles—"Fruit-a-tives" cures when nothing else will.

In the head office in Ottawa, are hundreds of letters and photographs from grateful men and women who have been cured of sickness and suffering by "Fruit-a-tives." Many of these letters and photographs have been published by permission and have induced other sufferers to try "Fruit-a-tives." This is one of the factors in the demand for "Fruit-a-tives," which is now sold in every city, town, hamlet and cross roads store.

TO REPAY DEPOSITORS OF FARMER'S BANK

Government to Grant $1,200,000 to Losers by Defunct Institution

Hon. W. T. White Announces Resolution to Make Good Government's Responsibility Arising Out of Certificate Granted by Hon. W. S. Fielding—High Ocean Rates Can Be Cured Through Subsidies.

OTTAWA, April 25.—Depositors in the Farmers' Bank who lost their money are going to have it refunded by the Government. Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, has given notice that he will move the following resolution:

"Resolved, that it is expedient to provide that there may be paid out of the consolidated revenue fund of Canada a sum not exceeding $1,200,000, to be paid to persons who were creditors for money on deposit in the Farmers' Bank of Canada, the respective amounts standing to their credit in the books of the bank when the bank suspended payment."

This is the bank to which Hon. W. S. Fielding granted a certificate in spite of various warnings as to the dangerous character of the undertaking, hence the Government's responsibility.

The House spent the greater part of the day in committee of supply, steamship subsidies being under consideration.

The high rates charged by the North Atlantic combine were again brought to the Government by Dr. Steele (South Perth) and other Ontario Conservatives. Mr. Burnham (Peterboro) said that the regulation of ocean freight rates might be a difficult problem for the Government to grapple with, but if the Government were unable to cope with it they should stand aside and let some other Government take the job.

When the House got into committee of the whole on the estimates of the Trade and Commerce Department, Mr. Foster was asked as to applications for subsidies by steamship lines about to engage in the coastal service of Canada via the Panama Canal.

The Minister said in reply that many such applications had been received, but none had been taken up. Possibly some assistance would be given to a line from Liverpool to Vancouver, stopping at Halifax.

Dr. Steele (Perth) declared that the present rates charged by the North Atlantic combine were most discouraging to agriculture. The Government should at once notify the combine that it would no longer tolerate the extortionate rates. No doubt it would be a hard matter to control the rates, as so many foreign boats were doing business on the North Atlantic.

Mr. Foster pointed out that if the companies refused to reduce rates, all the Government had to do was to cut off their subsidies and they would quickly accede to the demands of the country.

Mr. Morphy (North Perth) drew the attention of the committee to the fact that Canada had endeavored to increase her trade with Newfoundland. He believed that colony could use much of our food product. He also advocated taking Newfoundland into confederation, and said that the Government should make overtures to the Newfoundland authorities with a view to bringing it about.

OLD CITY DESTROYED.

Federal Troops Put Torch and Dynamite to Nuevo Laredo.

LAREDO, Texas, April 25.—The United States consulate, municipal building, shops, market building, roundhouses and station of the national railways of Mexico, custom house, Banco National, Concordia Theatre, barracks of Mexico Federals, Laredo flour mills, electric light plant and a number of other buildings in all parts of Nuevo Laredo reduced to a mass of ruins, tell the destructive work done by the Mexican Federal soldiers upon their departure from Nuevo Laredo yesterday afternoon at two o'clock upon special trains.

The quaint old Mexican city was destroyed rather than let it remain as it was to be possibly occupied by American soldiery if they crossed the river. The best and most costly buildings of the town were reduced to ashes when the torch was applied to them yesterday afternoon. Before setting fire to the adjoining buildings, the United States Consulate, recently vacated by Consul Garrett, was blown to atoms by dynamite.

As the train pulled out with the Mexican soldiers, some of them poured a volley into the American guards on the banks of the American side, and the fire was promptly responded.

Then several Mexicans appeared and opened fire across the river on the same guards and most of the Mexicans were killed, but no American soldiers were injured.

Then two men attempted to blow up the international and railway bridges from the Mexican side and they were shot down by American sharpshooters.

NUDE STATUARY IS LEGAL.

Montreal Judge Declines to Put the Ban on Venus.

MONTREAL, April 25.—The city cannot be deprived of statues of nude women, because certain police officials believe them to be offensive. This decision was arrived at by Judge Bazin when he found David Rubin, art dealer, not guilty of the charge of exhibiting indecent statuary by selling reproductions of Venus and other celebrated works.

The police argued that there was Biblical injunctions against a display of nudity. The defence called William Brymner, president of the Canadian Royal Academy, and Dr. J. D. Logan, art editor of The Herald and Telegraph, to testify to the artistic qualification of the reproductions, but the judge said their evidence was not required, as the fact that the originals were on exhibition in the great galleries of Europe was proof that they were not objectionable.

Lady Girouard Gets Divorce.

LONDON, April 25.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—In the divorce division yesterday, the undefended petition of Lady Girouard against her husband, Sir Edward Percy Girouard, for restitution of conjugal rights, was granted.

Sir Percy is a Montrealer, who achieved fame in military and railway engineering in Nigeria and East Africa. He has also a splendid campaign record. His wife is a daughter of the late Sir Richard Solomon, and they were married in 1903.

Smart Spring Fabrics.

Many smart looking worsted fabrics showing a crepe effect have been brought out this season and are selling readily in suits and skirts, according to the Dry Goods Economist. Gabardines are also meeting with considerable success. Black and white checks, together with novelty checks, promise to sell freely for early spring.

There seems to be a strong tendency to favor silks. Among the most desirable at present are the taffetas, moire, silk poplins, crape tussahs and novelty silks. In cotton manufacturers are using a number of the new imported velvets in corded weaves and in printed effects. These promise to grow in favor as the season advances, being well adapted for early spring wear.

As to colors, there is a tendency toward the brighter shades. Royal, copenhagen and dutch blues are particularly well favored for suits and are also being used in separate coats.

Volcanoes Threatening.

ROME, April 25.—The volcanoes Vesuvius and Etna are causing much anxiety in the Mediterranean. The rumblings of Vesuvius are now continuous and are accompanied by earth tremors and clatter, emitting cinders, sulphurous matter and an enormous mass of lava. Prof. Malladra, director of the Vesuvius Observatory, says the phenomena are exactly similar to those preceding the great eruption in 1906. Similar phenomena are observed at Mount Etna.

Farming on Shares.

There is in vogue in Ontario a system of land tenure which is practically unknown in England, that of renting on a share basis, says London "People." This arises mainly from the labor scarcity, and, in some cases, from the fact that young men leave their fathers' farms and go into cities to enter the professions. Consequently, it is that many a farmer is prepared to make an arrangement whereby the newcomer, if he is competent, is able to settle at once upon a thriving farm; have the use of implements, of stock, and share alike in the profits, he of course

YOUNG FANATICS MAY RULE CANADA

Quebec French Paper Attacks Demonstration by Irish Students

QUEBEC, April 24.—A bitter attack on the Irish Catholics of Canada is made by La Verite of Quebec in connection with the recent events at Ottawa College.

Speaking of "disgraceful demonstrations" of the Irish students, it says that it is really painful to think that these "young fanatics" will one day be the ruling class among the Irish Catholics of Canada. The prejudices against the French Catholics are not being dissipated, it contends, and in order to remedy this condition it suggests that the Irish students should take a course of lessons in the respective histories of Ireland and Canada.

"They will then learn," it says, "what Protestant England has done against Catholic Ireland to humiliate her, to ruin her, to persecute her with kicks and sword thrusts. On the other hand, a short course in the history of Canada will make these young Irishmen reflect on the generous treatment accorded by the French Canadians to the poor typhus-stricken exiles of Ireland who landed on the shores of our country and were received like brothers.

"The times are much changed. Certain sons forget too soon the debts of gratitude contracted by their fathers. Do we not see nowadays the Irish descendants of these unfortunates who were persecuted by English Orangism running to the Canadian Orangists to make war on the French language, the tongue of their benefactors and their saviours?"

In another part of the same issue, under the caption, "Little Contrasts," La Verite says: "In England the Irish Catholics are fighting against the Ulster Orangemen to obtain Home Rule. They have the sympathy of all French Canadians. In Canada, in Ontario, the Orange hordes and all the sectarians make war on the French language, and seek to oppress thousands of our compatriots. The majority of Irishmen, the militants, make common cause with our fanatical Orangemen, the brothers in arms of the persecutors of Ireland, the sworn enemies of Home Rule. Strange, yes, very strange!"

PRISONERS IN DANGER.

Four Americans May Be Executed By Mexicans.

VERA CRUZ, April 25.—Seven American prisoners of Mexican soldiers, are being held at Cordoba or Orizaba, on the line of the Mexican railway between here and the capital four of whom at least are threatened with execution, according to authentic information received here last night.

Four of the Americans were taken from a train on the Vera Cruz isthmus line at Tierra Blanca and further along at Motzolongo station, three other Americans and an Englishman were seized. Those captured at Tierra Blanca are W. A. Mangan, superintendent of the railroad, Engineer Elliott and Conductors Riley and Hart. At Motzolongo Edward Weunch, his son Sydney, A. M. Thomas and Mr. Boyd, a Britisher, were arrested by the Federals.

The belief that the Federals intended to execute at least four of the prisoners was gained from the conversation of the soldiers who captured them which was overheard by passengers on the train. The prisoners were taken to Cordoba, and, it is believed, later, were transferred to Orizaba, a point nearer the capital.

Eighteen Americans are still in Tierra Blanca, among them J. O. Cock, chief engineer of the Isthmus Railway; J. O. Schneider, J. D. Longston, C. D. Harrison and wife and children, and Mr. and Mrs. George McComber.

An indirect report received here yesterday from Mexico City, said that a mob attempted to burn the terminal of the Mexican railway but was prevented by President Huerta's troops.

O'Shaughnessy at Vera Cruz.

VERA CRUZ, April 25.—Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the United States Charge d'Affaires at Mexico, arrievd her last night.

He was accompanied by Gen. Corona and Col. Braniff, who were appointed as his escort by President Huerta as a special courtesy to the retiring charge d'affaires.

FEARS RISING AT PANAMA.

Col. G. W. Goethals Places the Canal Zone On a War Footing.

PANAMA, April 25.—Col. Geo. W. Goethals, Governor of Panama Canal zone, yesterday issued orders placing the canal zone on a strictly war footing. He instructed Major Gerhardt, commanding the 10th Infantry, to send two companies of infantry to patrol the Gatun locks, and one each for duty at the Miraflores and Pedro Miguel locks. The soldiers were given 100 rounds of ammunition each, and will camp near the locks.

The operating machinery of all the locks will be securely locked and the keys placed in the possession of Col. Goethals.

It is understood that coast artillery companies will be distributed among the fortifications on Flamencol and Culebra islands, at the Pacific end of the canal, and also at Toro Point and other forts at the Atlantic end.

The action of Col. Goethals is believed to have been the result of anti-American sentiment contained in the fly sheets, which were making their appearance in the streets of Panama, and also expressed editorially in TRUCE IN STRIKE.

Five Days War In Colorado Cost at Least 60 Lives.

DENVER, Colo., April 25.—At the end of the most dramatic but probably the least bloody day of the five-day industrial war in Colorado, a truce was declared last night which may temporarily check the atrocities in the southern Colorado coal fields, which have startled the world for the very magnitude of their horrors.

The events of the week have paralyzed the State of Colorado. The cost in lives is not under 60; the property loss exceeds the $1,000,000 mark. Business of every kind is at a standstill.

The truce was formed late yesterday in Denver. When it was arranged the state militia was marching upon Aguilar, where the strikers were lined up more than one thousand strong to meet their attack.

Acting Governor Fitzgerald and Horace Hawkins, attorney for the miners, made the agreement. The state promises that the soldiers will not fire unless they are fire upon. Hawkins has communicated with the strike leaders at Aguilar, Walsenberg, Trinidad and Ludlow asking that they respect the agreement for a cessation of hostilities for two days.

Whether these steps taken at so late an hour will avail is doubtful. The miners, lined up to avenge what they term the "massacre of their women and children" at Ludlow by the militia, are sullen and defiant. And almost to a man the people of the state of Colorado sympathize strongly with them.

If the truce holds there will be no firing to-night. If the strikers ignore it or if the soldiers violate it no one can estimate what the result will be.

CONSTABLE ARRESTED.

York County Officer Charged With Perjury In Trial.

TORONTO, April 25.—After the conclusion of the Davis-Wettlaufer breach of promise suit in the County Court last evening, in which Miss Davis got a verdict for $7,000, James McMullen, county constable in York County, was placed under arrest by Detective Montgomery on a charge of perjury. McMullen was taken to No. 1 police station, where he spent an hour in the cells, after which he was released on $2,000 bail, furnished by James McCormick, Grosvenor street. The warrant was sworn out by J. L. Wettlaufer yesterday afternoon, and the charge is in connection with certain letters written to the morality department, which when produced in the recent trial McMullen denied having written.

Operated On the Heart.

MONTREAL, April 25—Death was approaching a nineteen-year-old boy on Thursday night when the surgeons penetrated to his heart in an almost unprecedented operation and saved his life. As the boy, Bruce Moffatt, of 240 Delisle street, felt his strength returning he spoke up from the operating table, saying: "I'm feeling good."

He is now lying at the hospital with a tube attached to his heart and there is every hope that the operation will have done away for

Other leading staples, too, all showed a setback—corn 3-8c to 3-4c, oats a shade to 1-4c and provisions 5c to 20c.

ALBERT COLLEGE FINANCES

To the Editor of The Globe:—Reporters cannot give full reports of all they might wish to. This sometimes leads to a mistaken impression. Such is the fact of your report of the meeting of the "Albert" old boys and girls of Toronto and vicinity held on Friday night in Bathurst Street Church.

I did not say, as the reporter quoted me, that "Albert College must close or get $100,000." The part of the address the reporter did not put in is: "Forgive me, friends of Albert for even intimating the possibility of Albert College closing. It cannot close. The excellent work that it is doing in its eleven different departments—the absolute need of such an institution in the Province—will cause not only its old students and friends, but all who are looking, as so many are, for investments for God to say it must go on and go on under the very best auspices."

In the meantime such time as I could spare from my duties at college I have in six months raised almost one-quarter of the $100,000. The response has been most encouraging. Many, some of whom never saw Albert College, have said to me: "Yes, Mr. Baker, if you are doing that kind of work and are helping young men and women in that way I will give you $1,000. The work it is doing makes it imperative it must go on."

May I add that the object of the meeting of the old boys and girls and their friends on Friday evening was for good-fellowship and also to organize an alumni for Toronto and vicinity. The speeches, the spirit of the meeting, made it clear that the Albert College for which "three Sydney farmers" mortgaged their farms shall not only go on, but go on under auspices that these men never dreamed of when they made the sacrifice for its erection. The spirit of these men is in the church to-day. Sincerely yours. E. N. BAKER.

Italy's Piuma Grass.

Piuma grass, used in Italy for the manufacture of brooms for sweeping highly polished floors, is a product of swampy regions, particularly in southeastern Lombardy, southern Venetia and northern Emilia, in which sections it is said to grow abundantly. Mantua, Lombardy, is the center of the trade in piuma grass. Peasants around Mantua gather it during the first three weeks in September, about two weeks before it begins to blossom.

Self Pity.

Self pity, morally, mentally and physically, tends to depress and weaken the victim, to render him ineffective and impractical. The person who is chronically sorry for himself becomes a nuisance. He thinks the world owes him something, and his one ambition in life is to collect the debt.—Woman's World.

OUR WEALTHIEST PEOPLE.

Blackfeet Indians of Alberta Lead In Per Capita Riches.

It will be rather startling to many to be told that a tribe of aboriginal Indians, now resident in Canada, are the wealthiest people in the Dominion, and that their per capita wealth is only $3,000 less than that of the richest people in the world.

The Blackfeet are all resident in Southern Alberta living on the reserves provided for them at the time treaty was made with them many years ago. There are three bands, Bloods, Blackfeet, and Peigans, and they are the least civilized of all the Indians in Canada. In the last five years, however, competent Indian agents and farm instructors have induced the red men to till ground and occupy themselves with other industrial work, and the result has been that the wealth of the tribe has been considerably increased.

A careful survey of the reports of the agents shows that the total wealth of the Blackfeet Indians, including an average yearly income, is $10,987,250. This divided among the 2,329 bucks, squaws, and papooses on the three reserves means an average of $4,675. It is well known that squaws are not allowed any share in the earnings of the Indians, and that the wealth is held by bucks over the age of 16 or 20 years. If the wealth of the Blackfeet nation were divided among the males of over 20 years of age the per capita wealth of each would be $16,445. Indian families, as a rule, are large. Ten is not considered many for a teepee. But if we should allow seven to a family and give the wealth of the family to the head of the house, he would be the possessor of some $32,725.

Fortunately this great wealth is held in land, implements, fencing, buildings, live stock, etc., so that the Indian cannot squander his immense wealth. The tribe has increased by four during the last year.

The only rivals of the Blackfeet in the matter of wealth are the Osage Indians in Kansas. Their per capita wealth is $7,612, held in much the same way as the Blackfeet.

Help Badly Wanted.

A new record in applications for Ontario farm help when more than a thousand requests for farm hands were sent in during the one day to the Ontario British Immigration Office of the Dominion Government at the Toronto Union Station.

The Government has perfected an organization of a hundred agents, giving several to every county in the province and also placing an agent in every town in Ontario. The object of this organization is to learn the needs of the farmers, place the new arrivals with them when they come, and, most important of all, keep in touch with the newcomer after he is placed with a farmer. Should he for some reason not get along well with the farmer with whom he is placed the immigrant is not to be allowed to drift into the cities as has been the case in other years, but instead will be placed with another farmer.

OFFICIALS OPTIMISTIC

Villa's Assurance of Friendliness Brings Hope to U. S.

Troops Are Being Moved However With All Despatch to the Border to Protect U. S. Frontier — Federals at Nuevo Laredo Fire Into Laredo, Texas — Trade at Vera Cruz Will Be Allowed to Pass.

WASHINGTON, April 25. — While the attention of the American Government, for the most part yesterday was concentrated on restoring order at Vera Cruz and expediting the departure of Americans from all parts of Mexico, a watchful eye was trained on the transcontinental boundary between Mexico and United States for any signs of hostilities from the Mexican Constitutionalists.

President Wilson and his Cabinet had a long meeting, after which optimism was conspicuously apparent both in their demeanor and in formal discussion of the situation.

There was no particular development to which feelings of hopefulness that the real war would be averted could be traced, but General Villa's friendly pronouncement, it was admitted, had impressed many officials here with the possibility that the Constitutionalists after all would remain neutral while the American Government sought reparation from Huerta.

Other officials were not so sanguine, and the army moved with precision and swiftness to protect the American boundary and reinforce the expeditionary force of marines and bluejackets at Vera Cruz.

Conferences at the State Department between Secretary Bryan and representatives of the Mexican Constitutionalists resulted in the despatch to Gen. Carranza of a telegram by the latter, strongly advising him to remain neutral, and assuring him that the American Government intended to withdraw its forces from Mexico just as soon as satisfactroy reparation had been made for offences committed by Huerta. The advice given Carranza here was that by assuming a hostile attitude he would draw all Mexico into a war, Huerta would be perpetuated and the Constitutionalist cause lost in the melee.

Signs of uneasiness abroad because the United States, though not having declared a blockade or a state of war, is exercising jurisdiction at Vera Cruz between measures "short of war" and actual war, began to be apparent yesterday. Cabinet officials said no attempt would be made to interfere with the regular channels of commerce anywhere, cargoes being allowed to land at all ports. Munitions of war alone will be held at Vera Cruz if landed, provisions and other commercial supplies not being detained.

The sporadic outbreak at Nuevo Laredo, Mex., where the evacuating Federals burned the town and fired across the American border was not unexpected, but it was significantly pointed out by officials here that the American troops returned the fire merely in defence of the international line and did not become the aggressors. Both the military and naval forces are operating under this principle, defending themselves from attack, but taking no offensive move without instructions from Washington.

Congress still talked about Mexico. Senator Lodge read a long telegram from many prominent persons urging an enquiry into the Mexican situation before war was declared. Representative Fitzgerald, chairman of the House committee on appropriations, asked the President if he wanted "any war appropriations," and Mr. Wilson said "not as yet."

Secretary Garrison is practically without funds for the particular movements of the army now being made, but he is drawing on the future. It is a violation of law for the War Department to incur any obligation without authorization by Congress, but Mr. Garrison smilingly said he had "faced jail" several times in the last few days on this account. Leaders in Congress have assured him they would back him up in the present emergency. The President has hesitated to approve any request for an emergency appropriation by the War Department for fear it might be interpreted as a forerunner of war.

Mr. Wilson will affix his signature probably to-day to the volunteer army bill, providing the machinery for raising a volunteer army force in any time of emergency. The possibility that the militia might be needed at this time led to an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States for decision of a pending case to remove legal obstacles in the use of the militia for volunteer service. Estimates by army officers as to the number of men the President might call for in case of war range from fifty to one hundred thousand, but not a syllable has come from the White House as to this point.

Seventeen Americans Killed.

WASHINGTON, April 25. — The first official list of Mexican casualties at Vera Cruz was cabled to the Navy Department last night by Read Admiral Fletcher. It placed the dead at 126 and the wounded at 195.

The American casualties are given as 17 killed and 75 wounded.

Premier's Straight Denial.

ST. JOHN, N.B., April 25. — In a statement to The Standard (Conservative) Premier Flemming says in regard to the Dugal charges in the Legislature:

"I do not fear an investigation, for I have never received one dollar nor the equivalent of a dollar, directly or indirectly from any limit holder in the Province of New Brunswick since I have been Minister of Lands and Mines."

There must have been at least 50 per cent. exaggeration in the stories of the battle of Torreon or this new series of battles at San Pedro would have been possible so soon.

RICH GIRL IS NOW TIRED OF NURSING

BOSTON, Mass., April 24.—Miss Helen Cudahy, daughter of Patrick Cudahy, Chicago meat packer, is going to quit nursing at the end of her probationary period of three months hence. She began nursing because she believed she could aid suffering humanity. She found, she said, in actual hospital practise that three-fourths of her time was taken up in dusting, sweeping, making beds and "just houseold drudgery."

Miss Cudahy's determination to quit came a few days ago, when, after the weekly inspection, she was set at work cleaning the linen closet.

HAVELOCK HAS APPEALED

At a special meeting of the town council it was unanimously decided to appeal against the decision of Justice Kelly in entering a judgment of $725 and costs against the municipality in the Robinson gravel pit case. Peck, Kerr and McElderry, the solicitors for the town, have consequently been instructed to file the appeal. The case will now come up for a hearing before the Court of Appeal.—Marmora Herald.

IN ROMANTIC CHAMBLY

OLD FRENCH FORT HAS SEEN HISTORY IN THE MAKING.

Ancient Citadel That Overlooks Chambly Basin, Twenty Miles From Montreal, Was Built In 1665 When La Salle Started on His Explorations—Has Been Base of Supplies on Several Occasions.

In one of the letters that Jacques Cartier wrote home in 1535 he referred to the Valley of Chambly as the most beautiful, fertile and romantic that anyone could wish to see. He referred to the Isle of Orleans as the Isle of Bacchus, owing to the luxuriant growth of grapes there.

If Chambly was romantic in 1535, what must it be to-day, with three hundred and seventy-nine years of a nation's rise and dominance huddling on its back? says Margaret Bell in The Toronto Globe.

What stories it could tell of tempestuous times when the French flag flew over Canada, and all France suffered under the sway of Catherine of Navarre? Stories of the meeting of Cartier with the Iroquois and the opening of the great trade in furs. And of a later day, when Champlain, with his new allies, the Algonquins, was obliged to carry his boat above the rapids of Chambly Basin before proceeding to the lake which later was to bear his name. Tempestuous times indeed! But the waters of Chambly Basin laved the shores just the same as they do today. Only there were no private piers built from private gardens fragrant with rose and lilac bushes. Rather were there darts whizzing about and arrowheads of flint. Today the motorist, blase in prosperity, is obliged to stop and ask: What means the crumbling stone fort which stands up from the Basin some twenty odd miles from Montreal? The Tri-color and the Union Jack fly side by side, and the fort gives evidence of the days when the same two flags were not so friendly.

Evidence of warfare and strife, of bloodshed and tortuous times. For the stones which once made the fort worthy of the name are beginning to fall away and leave great gaps. Fort Chambly was built round about 1665, when La Salle undertook to explore the Ohio and Illinois rivers. Many things happened during the two years he was away on his trip of exploration. Many things which caused him to explain on his return that "that was the unhappiest spot in Canada." Chambly, from its very situation, was bound to play a trump or two in the making of history. From the time when painted hands of savages stole along the Richelieu, and the French, bent on conquest, received the same savage tribes for allies; from the days when Burgoyne led his valiant English troops against the citizens of New England — from those turbulant times until to-day, when tourists invade the luxuriant Valley of Chambly, the quiet looking village has been adding round after round to complete the cycle of history.

Chambly was only one of a line of forts built from Sorel to Lake Champlain for points of defence. They were called the key to Canada from the New England side, for the route of the New Englanders was from the Hudson to Lake George by way of portage. From George to Lake Champlain, from there to the Richelieu, and on to Sorel.

Although these forts had no part in the actual war—actual fighting might be more exact—still it was through them that the fighting could take place. They were the troop despatchers, the larders of supplies for the troops, the general lookouts across the great field of battle.

At the time of Vaudreuil, the great blunderer; Bigot, the chief of the corrupt, and Montcalm, the gentleman and soldier, Chambly writhed at the war raging all around. When the great Montcalm and the great Wolfe, conquered and conqueror, gave up their lives after seven minutes' actual warfare, Chambly, the hallowed spot which now stands pensive and tranquil, had had its share in the horror of defeat. Then it was that it came under the sway of a new power.

On June 1, 1777, the head of that new power in Canada personally paid a visit to the troops stationed there. Sir Guy Carleton's name still remains on a bit of parchment in the old fort. A new power usually introduces reforms.

Four years after that June Chambly was rebuilt and made stronger. An eminent engineer and soldier came over with ten thousand Hessian troops. These brave Hessians knew they might never return to their homes, for they were sailing into a revolution. They never did return. And they did not die victorious. Their brave leader, Riedesel, was obliged to surrender at the battle of Saratoga.

More warfare. New leaders. Lord Durham inspected the fort, found new recruits and added more supplies. The Americans were wily, and bethought themselves how they could gain greater knowledge of Canadian locations. They invited the French to join them against the English. But the French, always loyal, treated the invitation as an insult. This probably more than anything else welded the friendship of the French people. The war of 1812 needs no comment. But English and French were ready to fight together against the foe which had crept in from the south. Crept in by the waterway route, of which Chambly was one of the forts.

The Papineau rebellion of 1837, the year the beloved Victoria came to the throne, and the Fenian raids, twenty-nine years later, caused activity in the fort. But the peaceful years of later times have made the fort the rendezvous for tourists, historians, and everyone interested in the new country called Canada.

NORWAY IN CANADA

Camrose is a fair sized town situated in Central Alberta on the Canadian Pacific Railway line, and is generally speaking a Norwegian town. Its first name was Bakken, named after a Norwegian who first owned land upon which the town is built. Mr. Bakken came here from the United States like many others to get a farmstead. He looked round for a long time, because an old fortune teller had once told him that he would get a quarter section of land where a river cut off one of the corners, and where he could find plenty of coal and wood, and that on this quarter a town would be located. After having looked around for a long time, Bakken came out from Wetaskiwin and found a quarter which in every respect covered the fortune teller's description. He settled down here, and while his friends laughed at him he stayed by it as the only settler in that vicinity. When the Canadian Pacific Railway was built the station was located on his land, and when the town was surveyed he became a very rich man. He is now dead. To-day Camrose as above mentioned is the centre for the three railways, but it has retained its Norwegian stamp. Looking over map of Camrose one will find that the streets have Norwegian names, such as Christiana Avenue, Bjovorsen Street, Ibsen Street, Bakken Street, Paulsen Street, Dahl Street, Christine Street, and of sub-divisions there are many with Norwegian names, such as Bakken addition, Dahl Addition, Gula Addition, etc. This is not the only evidence of the Norwegian Influence. In looking over the Voter's list for this year's election, it is found that out of the 378 votes cast in the town of Camrose, 225 were Norwegians, and taking all of the Camrose district, it is found that out of 1400 votes, 975 are Norwegians.

Among the Norwegian business men may be mentioned Albert Sanders, Druggist, Gulbrand & Ole Hoyne, contractors and builders, E. Stotvold, real estate, and N. Culliksen, real estate, Evenson, barber, A. Venoboo, real estate, Moyhro & Murray, Merchants, Peter Borud, Jeweller, also Thorlief Iversen, who is President of the Ski Association, President Home to Norway Association, Secretary for the Mindegave Committe, etc .etc

A good many more could be mentioned but the above will suffice as a demonstration of what has been accomplished by people who came to the country absolutely empty handed, and who are now in comfortable circumstances. The above is just mentioned as a striking proof of the ability of the Norwegian race to progress, and also as a proof of the wonderful fertility of our adopted country, and I feel safe in saying that all who have settled here, have in three years time become well to do, and are continually adding to their material welfare.

The 7th of June at Camrose

In the last years the Norwegians in the vicinity of Camrose have gathered in that city on the 5th of June to celebrate the great political change that took place in Norway on the 7th of June, 1905.

The 7th of June celebration in Camrose commences with organ music in the Norwegian Church in the morning. The brass band serenades all arriving trains, and at 10.30 services are held in the Church. After the service the delegates gather to luncheon at the college. In the meantime all places of business have closed their doors. At 2 o'clock the crowd gathers at the college campus where the parade is lined up, from which place it passes through the principle streets of the town, and finally the procession ends at the Exhibition grounds. At this place the speeches are made, and the balance of the day is spent enjoying the different sports.

As a rule it is one of the most prominent Norwegians who delivers the oration of the day and speeches are also made by the Mayor of the town. The sports consist of baseball, footballs, boys races, horse races, etc. The festivities are in the evening closed with a piano concert.

During the summer months a large numbers of picnics are held at different places. Any profits from these picnics are donated to the Norwegian College or other worthy institutions.

Pretty Hill, a Norwegian settlement 12 miles north east of Camrose is a favorite picnic place. There is always a great gathering there of Norwegians from all over the district. We drive from Camrose in the morning in smiling Sunny Alberta weather, and come to Pretty Hill at lunch time. The menu as a rule consists of the following:

Kalvesteg.
Ludefish.
Rommegrod.
Surmelkstinger.
Lefse.
Gammelost.
Myseat.
Fenaknog.
Spegepolse.
Spegesild.

and also a good many more national dishes. During and after the luncheon the band plays, and when the luncheon is over the program commences.

To begin with, there are speeches and singing and then the sport commences. At this time the sport is more of a Norwegian character, with the exception of baseball. In the evening the dinner is served, and our countrymen must be admired for their willingness to participate in everything of that kind. This is also evident in the winter when the ski sport commences. The attendance at the ski sport is so great that one is surprised where all the people come from. Last winter there were 2400 gathered at the ski sports in Camrose, and about 4000 in Edmonton, and the interest in the sport is every increasing. The absence of great hills in our country makes it necessary to build timber scaffolds for ski runners to get a start, but these scaffolds serve the purpose as well as the steep hills in Norway. The damand for skis is so great that it has been necessary to establish a ski factory at Camrose, and we also have a school where Canadians and others are taught the sport. This year the National Ski Association of Western Canada will have its yearly sports at Edmonton, where ski runners from all parts of Canada will participate, and the competition will be greater than ever. The Edmonton Ski Club have for that reason built a ski jump 92 feet high, and have improved a steep hill so that we have good reasons to believe that jumps as high as 120 or 125 feet will be made. The world's record is now 152 feet.

Asker Settlement.

Asker is, as the name indicates, a genuine Norwegian settlement, situated between Poncka and Bashaw, and those who settled there about 18 years ago, found some of the best land in all Alberta. Whenever you go in this district, you will fine well tilled fields and large substantial buildings. Standing in front of Mr. Henry Krofting's house, you can see for miles around, and you can from this place count 75 Norwegian settlers who all come from Asker in Norway, so it is not surprising that they have given it the name of Asker. In this colony you will find Carl Paulson, born at Gisle Stanlengen, near Velder, in Asker, in 1851 and who came to Wisconsin in 1872 He left Norway with the steamship Haraldr Haarfargre, and had one of these voyages a man never forgets. Mr. Paulson lived in Wisconsin until 1890 and then came to Wetaskiwin and continued as a blacksmith, and took a homestead in 1898. He is now owner of several sections of land and operates a large stock farm, and has always the largest crops of anyone in that district. His nearest neighbor is Christan Hoibak from Velden, in Asker, Norway, and these families who were neighbors in the whole country are now neighbors in Canada. Hoibak is also one of these industrious men who is prospering in this country. Hoibak this year had oats that went 104 bushels to the acre, and wheat 43 bushels to the acre. From the hill-side of Paulson's living house, one sees the farms belonging to Messrs Krefting, Aas, Wettre, Gisle, Hoibeg and a large number of other well known farmers, and a good many of these people descend from some of the best families in Norway.

Old Mrs. Thea Krefting showed me pictures, which date back to the year 1600, of some of her ancestors. These pictures have been kept in the Krefting family ever since that time, and many attempts have been made by relatives in the old country to secure these in connection with the family history, but the old lady and her relatives here treasure them so highly that they have refused to part with them. She has had the paintings photographed and copies sent to Norway.

This colony has also another interesting old lady named Mrs. Aas. She was past 70 when she without company, left Asker, Norway for Asker, Canada. A few weeks ago when I together with Rev. Fostvedt came driving by her place she came out to the road and handed a parcel to the preacher, saying "Here is a present for you, because you were the first Norwegian I met in Canada." It was a handsome pair of mittens. I asked my friend about it and he told me that it was just four years ago that he met her at the station of Ponoka and that she had come all the way from Norway alone, and had asked for directions to the Asker settlement in Al- considered, the Asker settlement in Alberta is the largest and best and most Norwegian settlement with beautiful homes and the best of soil.

DARING BASEBALL PLAY.

Three Stolen Bases and a Run on a Scratch Infield Hit.

"The greatest baseball play I ever saw," says a writer in the American Magazine, "occurred in a game between the Philadelphia Athletics and the Detroit Tigers in Shibe park, Philadelphia, June, 1912.

"Ty Cobb, his first time up, hit a nasty grounder toward the first base. The ball had a deceptive bound and Stuffy McInnes had some trouble reaching for it and keeping hold of the ball when he got it. But he managed to scramble over and touch first just as Ty raced over the bag. Connie Mack's loyal rooters declared the Georgia Peach out by a mile, but the umpire had ideas of his own and Tyrus rested safely on the initial sack.

"The unexepected usually happens when this star swatsman is running bases, and on this occasion he did not disappoint his admirers. After the pitcher had thrown the ball Ty, having a fairly good lead, decided to amble along down to second, figuring, no doubt, that Lapp (the Athletic catcher) would be taken off his guard and throw wild. To try for second after a catcher of Lapp's ability has the ball requires nerve of a high order. He is usually there with the perfect peg, but the sight of Cobb jogging along was too much for him and Cobb saw Barry crouched in front of the base waiting as if to receive the ball, so, gathering speed, he made one of his bent leg slides and landed behind the bag. Then seeing that the ball had gone to center field, he started for third base at top speed. Some one, I think it was Collins, made a beautiful throw to 'Home Run' Baker, who stabbed Cobb with the ball as that well known gentleman was in the act of sliding head first for the third haven of rest.

"The crowd groaned when the umpire motioned Cobb safe at third. While admiring his nervy exhibition the fans really wanted the dangerous fellow disposed of, and he had reached third by the closest kind of a margin.

"Ty slapped the dust from his togs and, as usual, ran several feet up the path toward home each time the pitcher started to wind up. The batter had now gathered two strikes, and with the next wind up Cobb raced for the plate at full speed, sliding with great force against Lapp, who was waiting for him with the ball. But the throw had been a little too high, and the catcher was taken off his feet before he could touch the daring base runner.

"Cobb therefore stole three bases after having reached first by a lucky scratch hit and made the first run of the game before the next batter up had hit the ball."

Hotel Room Keys.

A locksmith employed in one of New York's largest hotels explained the lock system of the house, saying that there were 1,500 rooms in the hotel with individual keys, each of which will open only the lock it was made for. The "master key," however, will open or lock all of the doors in the hotel, and the "emergency key," besides doing this, will lock a door so that no other key will open it. The "master key" and the key made especially for any one of the doors are useless after the "emergency key" has locked the door. With it a man may be locked in or out of his room, and if so he will remain locked in or out until the "emergency key" is used again. It sets a lock so that no other key can turn it.—New York Times.

"What's the cause?"

"The service, of course. Let me show you: 'Hello, exchange, hello! Why don't you answer? I want Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Julia Brown. What number? No. 62 Tanglefoot street. Number? I just told you. Oh, that? You mean her telephone number? Why, it's—there, you've gone and put it all out of my head. I'll have to look in the book. Dear, dear, the book is upstairs! Well, I never in all my life saw such service!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Prize Welsh Bull.

Wales produces bulls other than those found in cattle shows. A north Wales correspondent, says the Western Mail, calls upon the parish councils to hold meetings of protest. We hereby warn all pens against shouldering or flooding this column.

Her Greatest Trial.

A lady, whose husband was the champion snorer of the community in which they resided, confided to a female friend the following painful intelligence:

Classes in Russia.

There is no upper middle class in Russia. A family is either of the peasantry—although this term has now a very wide inclusion—or of the aristocracy. And at court no one has precedence according to inherited rank, only according to official position in the government.

What He Made of It.

First Physician—Can you make anything out of the patient's trouble? Second Physician—I think if we manage right we can make about $500 apiece out of it.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Cynical Sympathy.

She (sentimental)—Three years I was engaged to him—three beautiful, happy years—then it was all over. He (sympathetically)—Oh, I suppose you married him then.—Fliegende Blaetter.

PEACE.

Him only shall peace find
Who plans no more, and long hath ceased to sue,
Existent only in the flawless mind,
Accounting nothing as his due:

Whose soul hath set aside
Desire and hope; who lives no more in fee,
But looks far forth, and casts his spirit wide
On Nature and Eternity:

Who sees this glorious earth—
An open radiance, a script sublime—
Regarding in her elemental mirth
Not now, nor yesterday, but time:

To whom the marvellous sun,
The daedal spectacle of earth and sky,
In endless forms and beauty never done
The night's slow-moving majesty:

Life's never-flagging tale,
An infinite pursuit, a vast employ,
In lonely brightness far removed from bale,
Bring wonder and sufficient joy.

This is to live in truth,
To plant against the passion's dark control
The spirit's birthright of immortal youth,

Woman's World

Mrs. Chu and the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

MRS. TING CHI CHU.

The Chinese government has contributed very generously to make its exhibit at the Panama-Pacific exposition a success. One of the republic's cleverest young statesman has been appointed to the post of commissioner to the exposition. This gentleman is the Hon. Ting Chi Chu, who is counselor to the ministry of industry and commerce in China. Mr. Chu, although only twenty-seven years of age, is well qualified for his task. He was born in Shanghai and attended the Peiyang university when Wu Ting Fang, Chinese minister to this country, was president. Later he graduated from Harvard university.

Recently Mr. Chu was married to clever little Miss Pinga Hu, one of the bright students from the orient who graduated from Wellesley university in the class of 1913. She is intensely interested in the success of the Chinese exhibit and will advise and assist her husband in regard to the exhibit of woman's work.

Chinese women do wonderful work in many lines. Their embroideries are exquisite. The new China is distinctly progressive, and its women are taking a place in the industrial, artistic and professional work that may surprise many occidental people.

The Chinese government has ordered the governors of provinces to co-operate with the central exposition bureau that he may be able to make a suitable display of the progress and wealth of the country. The young commissioner and his wife will have facilities never before available for making China as it is known to the occidental world.

Mrs. Chu is the delegate from China to the international child's welfare congress, which convenes in Washington in April under the auspices of the National Congress of Mothers, Parents and Teachers' association.

HOUSEKEEPING NOTES.

Tiny Tips That Will Lighten the Daily Tasks.

To keep a chimney free from soot sprinkle a little saltpeter over the fire occasionally.

To sift ashes without raising dust sprinkle them with water or let them get wet with rain before sifting.

When buying shoes to get comfortably fitting shoes buy them in the afternoon, when the exercise of the day has spread the muscles of the feet to their largest extent.

Scrubbing brushes will last twice as long if they are put to dry with the bristles downward. If turned the other way the water soaks into the wood and rots the bristles.

To prevent stockings from being torn by the clips of stocking suspenders try doubling the stocking down before placing the clip in them, and you will find they will never tear.

When a tag comes off a bootlace a little black sealing wax carefully pressed round the end of the lace and shaped to a point makes a quite serviceable new one and lasts a long time.

To keep the ironing sheet free from creases pin it on to the board with drawing pins. These hold it securely, prevent risk of it suddenly tucking up and can easily be removed when desired.

When winding a skein of wool put two flatirons on the table a sufficient distance apart to allow of wool being stretched tightly over them. They will answer as well as any one holding the skein.

After washing white muslin, handkerchiefs, etc., soak them for a short time in clear water in which a tablespoonful of borax has been dissolved. This takes away the odor of soap, slightly stiffens them and makes them beautifully white. A tablespoonful to a gallon of water is the right quantity.

Two Cases of Circumstantial Evidence

By SARAH BAXTER

Judge Erskine of the criminal court was dispensing justice to the unfortunate when a request came over the telephone that he come home immediately. Realizing that something momentous had happened in his household, he adjourned the court and left for his residence. On reaching it he found his daughter, a girl of twenty, in charge of a policeman.

"I'm only obeying orders, judge," said the man, who recognized the judge.

"What does this mean?"

"We don't know," sobbed the prisoner. "Some one reported to Hammerstein & Co. that they would find goods stolen from their dry goods store between the mattresses of my bed. A man came here representing himself as a water inspector and found those things."

"Don't cry, Lulu; it will be all right."

Though the judge reassured his daughter, he could not reassure himself. He did not doubt that some one had laid a trap for him, but remembered that all are supposed to be equal before the law, and unless he could prove a conspiracy there was trouble ahead. He cast a glance at some laces in the hands of a man in plain clothes, then went with his daughter to court, where, having furnished bail, he took her home. Then he repaired to the office of the head of the firm of Hammerstein & Co.

All Mr. Hammerstein knew about the matter was that they had received an anonymous note informing them where certain of their stolen goods were to be found, and they had sent a detective to the address. He had secured entrance as a water inspector and found the articles. The judge went away much depressed. The offer of Mr. Hammerstein to refrain from prosecuting the case did not relieve the former because the state would surely prosecute anyway, and, even if the case was not tried, the stain would remain. Judge Erskine believed that some criminal whom he had sentenced had taken this method of revenge.

Judge Erskine:

Sir—A few weeks ago you sentenced Edna MacAlpine to state prison on a charge of shoplifting at Hammerstein's. While she was shopping there a thief who feared to be caught with the stolen goods on her, noticing a bag lying on the counter, put the goods in it. A few minutes later one of the store detectives arrested Edna MacAlpine, to whom the bag belonged. I know this, but I can't prove it. Can't you secure a pardon for Edna MacAlpine?

Here was the explanation. Some person in the interest of one whom the judge had sentenced, either guilty or not, had undertaken to force him to intercede with the governor for a pardon. There was no signature to the note, nothing by which to trace the writer. The fact that it did not refer to the case against his own daughter did not change the judge's opinion. He believed that if he secured a pardon for Edna MacAlpine he would receive an exoneration for his daughter. At any rate, it was the only way that suggested itself to free his daughter from the charge.

Judge Erskine went at once to the governor and represented the case to him. There was no evidence that he could consider to prove that Edna MacAlpine had been wrongfully convicted; but, being a practical man, he put the same interpretation as the judge on the connection between Miss Erskine's arrest and the letter her father had received. A pardon requires a good deal of delay, but this one, after much labor and the cutting of a good deal of red tape, was finally worked through, and Edna MacAlpine was released.

The very evening the prisoner was returned to her home a woman called on Judge Erskine and said to him:

"I am the sister of Edna MacAlpine, who is as innocent of the charge on which you sentenced her to prison as your daughter is of a like offense. I took the laces found in her possession and went to your house on various pretexts till I gained admission to her room, where, when not observed, I placed them between the mattresses of her bed. I then informed Hammerstein & Co. of their being there. My last act in obtaining justice for my sister was to write you the note you received asking for her pardon. I dared not refer in the note to your daughter's case or sign my name lest you accuse me of conspiracy, and you might have proved me guilty. In any event this course would have destroyed my chances for obtaining the pardon. Now that my sister is free you are welcome to prosecute me for conspiracy or any other crime."

The judge listened to this confession with intense anxiety. "You have convinced me of your sister's innocence of the crime for which I sentenced her, for were she guilty she would not have inspired the devotion of so splendid a woman."

The judge went to a desk, wrote out a bond of indemnity and the confession she had made. He asked her to sign the latter, and when she had done so he handed her the former, to which he had attached his own signature. Then he called his daughter into the room.

"Why, you're the book agent," said Miss Erskine.

"I am, and I called as other characters, though only as the book agent did I show my real face."

Culinary Notes

Nourishing Drinks.

Premature old age is often caused by not knowing how and when to take food. This extreme is as bad as that which loads the body with waste, causing food poisoning, but in the main, especially among women, the rasped nerves and the tired drawn lines in the face show the marks of a poorly balanced nutrition.

The following are a few recipes prepared and of a practical nature for making nutritious food drinks:

Egg and Milk.—Put a fresh egg and a glass of milk in a shaker. Shake thoroughly, sweeten and flavor to taste. This may be taken hot or cold.

Orange Tea.—Peel and take off all of the white skin from an orange. Put a slice in each cup and pour over it a light colored hot tea. A very refreshing drink.

Sentimental Punch.—For a hot beverage, melt six teaspoonfuls of grated chocolate in a saucepan. Add to it quickly six cupfuls of boiling milk. When the chocolate is thoroughly dissolved add a tablespoonful of sherry, a teaspoonful of vanilla extract and two tablespoonfuls of good clear coffee. Sweeten to taste and serve hot, with some whipped cream if desired.

Oatmeal Nectar.—Put four ounces of oatmeal into a porcelain kettle, add six ounces of white sugar and a lemon sliced thin. Mix with a little cold water; then pour on one gallon of boiling water. When served hot or cold it is a nourishing and refreshing drink.

The Sunday Dinner.

Why Sunday should be sacred to a midday dinner and the balance of the day devoted to digestion is not evident. It does seem rather unnatural that so much must be sacrificed to mere feeding, when it is possible to have a good hot meal that will not require more than a half hour in its preparation.

If it must be a roast, a loin of veal, a leg of pork or a pair of chickens will be just as good if they are roasted on Saturday and set away in the dripping pan and given the last half hour in a good hot oven on the day of serving. A steak needs but little time and loin chops are better than the average leg of lamb.

Potatoes, if boiled for twenty minutes in their skins, can be finished in the oven during the same half hour, or cold boiled ones can be browned in the pan with the heating roast. If chops are the choice, the frying of the potatoes in deep fat is a matter of a few minutes.

Spaghetti, with cheese or tomato sauce, is a good substitute for potatoes, and the browning can be done in a few minutes. Any of the green vegetables can be boiled the day before, drained and reheated with butter. Cauliflower or onions can be rejuvenated with their cream dressing, and those vegetables that require long cooking can safely be simmering while the housekeeper is at church.

Herb Window Garden.

A few helps to the housekeeper in the shape of garnishes for various foods are acceptable when green things are at such a premium.

A pot of sprouting chives can be kept green on the kitchen window sill for weeks and with little care will grow nicely.

Pots of parsley grow well in cold weather, if started in a warm place. A box of parsley could easily be grown in a sunny sheltered window, and proves invaluable to the housekeeper.

A pot or two of mint, which grows so easily, is also a good hint for garnishing. These are only a few of the herbs that can be grown on the kitchen window sill.

It would really be a kindness to the cook to start some of these pretty green plants growing in her kitchen as many cooks neglect to beautify the foods by decorating, simply because they do not have the materials at hand.

The Milk Bottle.

Many people, after ordering their milk from a good dairy, think that is all that there is to be done toward securing sweet, pure milk, but the way the milk bottle is cleansed and the way the bottle is put away afterward also have much to do with the problem of good milk.

The milk bottle has ample time to be contaminated with every known kind of germ before it is delivered, and so the safest way to cleanse bottles of these germs is by putting the bottle under the faucet and giving it a good bath before it is opened.

The cap and mouth of the bottle are thus thoroughly cleansed and may then be dried with a clean towel. It is much safer not to put the old pasteboard cap on the bottle again; for ten chances to one before the setting sun it will be found missing, and, besides, it soon becomes soiled with much handling.

A Starch Wrinkle.

If when making boiled starch a piece of soap is left in it it will be found during the ironing process that not only will the iron slip along easily, but a beautiful glossy effect will be produced.

AGONY ON OPERATING TABLE

Did Not Remove Stone In Bladder GIN PILLS Passed it.

JOLIETTE, P. Q. CANADA.

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone In The Bladder. He decided on an operation and was assisted by another doctor. They said the calculus was larger than a bean and too hard to crush and they could not take it out.

I returned home suffering greatly and did not know what to do but was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS. I bought a box and found relief from the pain at once. I took a second and third box of GIN PILLS after which I went back to the specialist. He told me the calculus was reduced in size, still he could not relieve me of it although he tried for two and a half hours.

I returned home again and continued to take GIN PILLS as they reduced the pain very much, but I did not expect that they would relieve me of the stone but to my great joy, I passed the stone on October 3rd., and am now a well man and very happy.

I am sending the stone in to you so that you can see for yourself what a great work GIN PILLS did for me. GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did so much for me, I will recommend them all the rest of my life."

J. ALBERT LESSARD.

What glorious news to those who are almost going insane from the pain of Stone In The Bladder! Here is ease and comfort! Here is relief! Here is a certain means of getting rid of the stone without being cut to pieces by the knives of a surgeon. GIN PILLS dissolve Stone or Gravel in Kidneys or Bladder because GIN PILLS are the greatest solvent for uric acid the world has ever known.

If your trouble is like Mr. Lessard's, follow his example and take GIN PILLS. Money refunded if they fail to give relief. At all dealers, 50c a box—6 for $2.50. Sample free if you write us, mentioning this paper.

Drama Dedicated to Public by President of the I. B. S. A., Pastor Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle.

LAND APPEARS.

WHOEVER will may now, without money and without price, see and hear the panorama and the story of man's life on earth. He may learn through the medium of his eyes and his ears how "through all the ages one increasing purpose runs."

The moving picture film, beginning with the far-off days when chaos lay on the waters, is depicting for us how God called the earth into being from the void and how He has upheld it and sustained it and carried it onward and upward toward its divinely appointed goal. All this is done while machinery, reproducing synchronously the tones of the human voice, helps in entertaining, enlightening and instructing the auditor.

All this is being accomplished and will be accomplished by the marvelous photo-drama of "Creation," produced by the International Bible Students Association. This body of earnest and active supporters and disseminators of God's Word is planning to place in many large cities the photo-drama, which tells in interesting, easily understandable picture and word the story of the earth's creation, progress and development.

"DID YE THIS IN MY NAME?"

"READING BIBLE FORBIDDEN."

First Production In New York.

A start was made in New York City, where a large theater building was opened to the public, free of charge. Then followed Cincinnati, St. Louis, Cleveland, Toledo, Boston, Indianapolis, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Men, women and children are thronging to hear and see the story of their ancestors and themselves. Before them pass the pictures which tell how the earth began and how it has struggled and is struggling upward to the light. They sit entranced, for, as the drama of dramas unfolds, the voice of the hidden, mechanical lecturer, speaking in tones of eloquence and might, explains clearly each picture.

Scenes Staged In Holy Land.

The preparation of the films used in the exhibitions has involved a considerable expense and activities conducted in all parts of the world. The cameras have been carried into the Holy Land, and there on the Mount of Olives and in Jerusalem have been found the backgrounds for re-enacted tragedies. Nature has not changed the face of the land of Palestine much for so many centuries, and the houses and the customs and dress are much as they were before the Christian era.

COLLEGES TEACHING HIGHER CRITICISM

The Ordeals of the Martyrs.

Some of the most graphic representations of the films have to do with the early struggles of the Christian Church. Many stereopticon slides are also introduced, bearing reproductions of famous paintings.

The International Bible Students Association operates under a British charter and has offices at Lancaster Gate W., London. Its American headquarters are at No. 17 Hicks street, Brooklyn. The association is supported by voluntary contributions. It has a large staff of lecturers, and its activities extend to all the principal cities of the United States and Europe. The object of the association is, through various means, to encourage Bible study, and in the moving picture exhibitions it hopes to be especially helpful in this regard. The fact that all meetings are free and no collections taken affords sufficient evidence to prove that the work is not actuated by mercenary motives.

Have you seen this Car?

THE man with $1,650 to invest in a car cannot find a more substantial proposition than the McLaughlin-Buick Model "3."

We say "substantial." What other word could describe the quality that makes a car just as comfortable, easy-riding and reliable after a few thousand miles travel as it was when new?

Model "3" at $1650 has more life in it than a good many higher priced cars. We can show you why.

In the first place, it has the McLaughlin-Buick unit power plant—proven to stand up under years of service—full 32 h.p. for very low fuel cost. Such a motor will be a smooth-running machine when many another is ready for the scrap heap.

The body has wide U-shaped doors. It rides easy on extra long springs fitted with rebound snubbers. The wheels are large (35 x 4). This car will not jolt you or the machinery. It keeps its good appearance.

Model "3" has electric lights all 'round, canopy light under cowl, and extension trouble lamp. It is equipped with Gray & Davis Electric Starter, clear vision built-in windshield, mohair top with dust hood, besides the usual accessories, tools, etc.

CARE OF CLOCKS.

Cheap Ones May Be Successfully Cleaned at Home.

THE METHOD IS VERY SIMPLE

Experts, However, Frown Upon Any Tinkering With a Valuable Timepiece, Which Should Be Taken at Once to the Professional Mender.

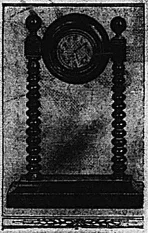
There is no more important piece of furniture in the house than the clock. On its condition depends not only the peace but the welfare of the household. To its faithful hands the wage earners look for warning as to the hours when they must leave home for office or shop; on them the housewife depends for information as to when it is time to arise, when to prepare meals or keep her various engagements. When the clock goes wrong there is not only weeping and lamenting, but dire disaster unless the timepiece is speedily put to rights.

In many households, where the little metal alarm clock is the chief mentor, the procedure usually is to discard the clock when it proves unreliable. It is certainly hardly worth while to take the more inexpensive ones to the clockmaker for repairs. The charge would be almost as much as for a new clock. So the defective clock goes into the ash can or rubbish heap and a new one takes its place.

On the back of clocks one finds an apparatus that regulates the movement, fast or slow, but when no manipulation of this will make the clock go as it should an oil bath will sometimes put it into good running order again.

To administer this bath take a vessel sufficiently large to hold the clock. Place the clock on the bottom of the vessel and pour over it enough kerosene to cover the timepiece. Shake the clock about in the oil from time to time, as this will serve to dislodge particles of dust or dirt.

The clock may be left in the oil overnight or for twenty-four hours if it is very dirty. Then take it out, set it somewhere that the oil may drain off, and when it no longer drips rub it off, and after winding and setting very likely it will go as well as ever.



NEW BOUDOIR CLOCK.

A valuable clock should always be taken to a clock mender at once. Home methods of repairing are not to be thought of in such cases.

A clock should never be moved from one position. If it does not go when it is first placed in a position probably it is set unevenly. An unevenness of a fraction of an inch may cause a clock to vary several minutes from the right time each day or may cause it to fail to go altogether. Start it in a good position and leave it there as long as possible.

If a clock stops and it is not run down or wound too tight or set on an uneven surface send for a clockmaker. It may need oiling, but oiling is something which only an expert should be allowed to do. It may need cleaning, and this, too, should be done by an expert.

Be careful about winding clocks. Wind them always at the same time and never wind them too tight. Find out just how many full turns of the key it takes to wind the clock to the proper point and always stop with that number of turns.

The care of the clocks must be left entirely in one person's hands. It ruins clocks if they are constantly tinkered with, and it is much easier for one person to set the clock than for two persons to keep track of it.

A clockmaker says that the hands of the clock should never be turned backward. If it is necessary to set the clock, push the hands forward, as there are some very delicate screws that the backward pushing is likely to disturb.

If the clock strikes, always wait, when setting the clock, with the hand just after each hour for the clock to strike for that hour, and wait at the half hours, too, if the clock strikes every thirty minutes.

Don't let the clock run down. Wind it regularly every twelve or twenty-four hours or thirty-six hours, or seven days or every stated time when it needs winding.

Attractive timepieces are a boon. The one illustrated here is a colonial design fashioned in mahogany. It makes a pleasing gift and is suitable for the library or boudoir. Colonial styles being so popular, it makes a welcome addition to the list of furnishings.

A NEW MATRIMONIAL SOCIETY

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Between the mountains of India and Persia there is a tribe among whom the women choose their husbands. When a single woman wishes to marry a man she sends a servant to his house to pin a handkerchief to his hat as an intimation of her desire. Unless he can show that he is too poor to purchase her at the price her father requires he is obliged to marry her.

Until the organization of the Arlington club for men there was no superfluity of spinsters over bachelors in a certain American town, but from then on marriages began to fall off. One of the most popular married women called the maidens together and organized an association for the advancement of matrimony based on the Indian-Persian plan. The first young lady to secure a husband by the method was invited to state before the association how it had worked in her case. She arose and said:

"Mrs. President, I had long admired Mr. George Luddington, who had paid me some attention, and had it not been for the organization of the Arlington club I believe he would have asked me to be his wife. But that pestiferous institution reduced him from an incipient lover to a vacillating hanger on. Soon after the adoption of the plan which we are associated to carry out I worked Mr. Luddington's initials on a fine cambric handkerchief and, calling a messenger, told him to take it to the club at the hour I knew Mr. Luddington dined there, obtain access to the coat room and pin it to his hat.

"The messenger had no difficulty in executing his commission. I did not know for some time that Mr. Luddington knew from whom the token came. I have since learned that he knew very well, and the action he took in the matter was intended to frighten me off. A few evenings after receiving the handkerchief he called on me, and I saw at a glance that he was or pretended to be very irate.

"'What do you suppose has happened to me?' he asked brusquely.

"'I can't imagine,' I replied meekly.

"'An association has been formed in this town—so I understand—to drive us bachelors into matrimony. If a girl wishes to marry a man she sends some one to pin a handkerchief to his hat. Did you ever hear of such immodest impudence?'

"'Never in my life.'

"You must excuse me, ladies, for my weakness, but he frightened me out of my wits.

"'Who do you suppose this person is?' he growled.

"'I can't imagine,' I replied.

"'Don't you think her very unmaidenly?' he asked in a less threatening tone, for my agreeing with him rendered him less severe to me.

"'I certainly do. I wonder how she could have had the face to do it!'

"I shrank into a corner of a sofa, as far away from him as I could get. He sat down on the other end and looked at me kind of puzzled. He knew I had sent him the handkerchief and couldn't understand how I could condemn myself for doing it. He looked very terrible, but not quite so terrible as when he first came. Then he began a system of torture to find out what it all meant.

"'The handkerchief,' he said, 'was very dainty, though the initials were badly worked. They looked as if they had been executed by some one with fingers so big that they were only fitted to work with a skewer.'

"At this I said nothing. I dared not speak for fear of betraying a tremolo in my voice.

"'If a girl,' he went on, 'had sent me a gift without an immodest intention I should have been deeply impressed with it. Quite likely I would have been affected to the point of making love to her and proposing marriage.'"

This statement was received with cries of "No!" "Don't you believe it!" "They all talk that way, but they don't propose!" When the commotion subsided the speaker went on with her recital:

"'But for a girl deliberately to tell a man she wants him to marry her, thus usurping his privilege, there's nothing she could do to so effectually turn him'—

"He got no further. I was full to the top of my throat. I made several convulsive gulps and burst into a torrent of tears.

"I don't know what he was doing for a few moments, for I held my handkerchief to my face. I heard nothing, but presently felt his arm around my waist. Then he drew my head down on his breast.

"'If the fool killer comes this way,' he said, with his lips pressed against my cheek, 'he'll yank me out, certain sure. Don't cry, little girl. Dear little girl, forgive me! I've loved you ever since'"—

Again there were cries of unbelief, "Oh, bosh!" "What a whopper!" and such like expressions of disapproval, whereupon the speaker indignantly turned her back on the assembly and with her nose in the air marched out of the room.

"Ladies," said the president severely, "I'm astonished at you. This so-

POSES FOR CHARITY'S SAKE.

Entertainment and Instruction For Children—A Game That Tests the Memory—Some Facts About the Blustering Month of March.

It has long been the custom among the rich people of New York to provide ways and means for raising funds to help the needy. Every winter they give balls, dances, theatrical entertainments, etc., with this worthy purpose in view. Recently a series of tableaux were given in which children took the leading parts. Some of the little folks were dressed and posed to represent noted paintings, while others posed as famous individuals. One of the best of these was the impersonation of George Villiers, first Duke of Buckingham, a famous courtier of the reign of Charles I. Master Walter Maynard portrayed this character, and those who have ever seen a picture of that old time gentleman will agree that Master Maynard made a pretty looking duke.

Cost Still Goes Up.

The Dominion Department of Labor's index number of wholesale prices rose slightly in March, standing at 136.7, as compared with 136.1 in February and 136.0 in March, 1913. The more important increase occurred in grains and fodder, animals and meats, especially in poultry, canned salmon, apples, beans, potatoes, oatmeal, flour, beef hides and muskrat skins. Important decreases occurred in eggs, jute, brass and lead, and in some grades of pine. In retail prices beef, veal, bacon, flour, beans, prunes and potatoes were upward, while there was a general decline in eggs, and butter showed a downward tendency.

CHILDREN'S ROOMS

Youngsters Should Be Given Resonable Freedom In Them.

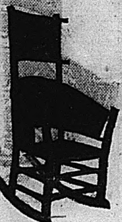
A CHARMING NURSERY HINT.

Miniature Furniture In Cane and Similar Materials Is Attractive and Has No Hard Corners to Hurt Chubby Limbs.

Lucky the child who has a playroom that does not have to be cleared up, says House and Garden. In such a playroom was recently seen laid out on the dull red carpet a miniature railroad, bridges, switches, roundhouses, yards and all, including sand for roads and walks.

Suppose this had to be cleared up when its owner had finished his game—would he not become discouraged soon when his handiwork must be demolished each day? In this cheerful room the corner beyond the railroad was screened off with a "playhouse screen" representing a substantial brick house, with a real screen door on hinges and windows daintily curtained.

The windows of the playroom were shaded by curtains bought in Germany—a suggestion which any one may easily carry out. The curtains are thick enough to hide disorder from neighborly eyes. They are made of German linen, natural color, and the animals and birds are of turkey red stitched on by chain stitch machine. The line at the bottom is machine chain stitched. These curtains have been washed many times and are still as fresh and strong as when new. Unbleached muslin would be just as effective and wear as well. The only real furniture in the room is a piano. The wall has paper of a warm brown tint with pastoral scenes as a frieze.



SPLINT CHAIR.

There are ventilators in the windows, a plan every mother should follow for both sleeping room and play room.

A plan to utilize a mantel or mock mantel in a child's room is carried out in this same house. White, unglazed tiles are set around the chimney opening, with a border of nursery rhyme tiles at the top and sides. These tiles are made in dainty colorings, with pictures of nursery favorites and rhymes. In the openings a small blackboard is set, the edge finished with a narrow molding tile and a wider curved tile at the bottom, to hold chalk and eraser. The children have made splendid use of this mantel arrangement not only for the regular uses of a blackboard, but in copying the dainty pictures on the tiles. A mock mantel could also be arranged for the child's room by setting the tiling and blackboard in the wall.

There are twenty designs in the nursery tiles, size 6 by 6. Work of this sort is best done by a professional tile setter, who will charge about 50 cents each set in place.

Nowadays fine furniture and artistic wall paper go far in beautifying any room. A full purse is needed if one wishes to put oneself in the hands of an interior decorator. But there are rooms where a little ingenuity and taste are sufficient to convert them from dull, uninteresting places to bright and cheerful abodes. This is especially true of a child's room.

One such is in a small second story back bedroom of the conventional city house. It has only one window, yet the walls are so cheerful that the occupant, a girl of ten, needs nothing else to fill her heart and mind with pretty thoughts and bright ideas.

To produce this successful room her mother used plenty of paste and many large highly colored pictures, posters and panel pictures. These she cut out and pasted artistically on the walls.

This room proved a delight to the little ten-year-old girl. Each picture became a playmate, a companion, a visitor to her, and nightly her mother sat at the foot of her bed, before kissing her good night, and told her stories about the picture children, imbuing them with life and interest.

One day sickness assailed the little maid, and then the room became a double pride and pleasure.

Miniature furniture which is a faithful representation of styles for adults may be purchased in the shops. Cane or splint furniture is light, may be easily carried about and has no rough edges on which the children may hurt themselves. Shown here is a splint rocker, part of a set which makes ideal furniture for a nursery playroom or children's bedroom. It is in sizes to suit the little folks.

Most of us think we know a lot of people that his satanic majesty doesn't have

WHEN BOILING FISH.

Thoroughly cleanse the fish and rub it with vinegar or lemon juice. This whitens the fish and makes it firm.

Add salt and a little vinegar to the water in which the fish is boiled.

Allow the water to boil for three minutes after the fish is put in and then simmer very gently until the fish is cooked.

The time allowed for the cooking of fish is ten minutes to every pound and ten minutes over. Common sense must be brought to bear with regard to thickness of the fish, when a fork or skewer should be used to test the fish, for as soon as the flesh parts easily from the bone it is ready.

Dish the fish at once. Never allow it to remain soaking in the water after it is ready, or it will become "woolly."

If there is not a fish kettle at hand the fish should be placed on a dish and tied in a cloth. The stock, if not too salt, should be used in the making of the sauce.

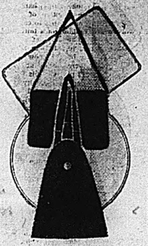
CHIC HAND BAGS.

Many Novelties In Bags For Wear With Elaborate Costumes.

With one of the coquettish, short jacketed spring suits made of silken stuff draped upward to reveal high heeled, buttoned boots, clipped off in the sleeves to display gloves of embroidered silk and trimmed fetchingly with tassels, sash bows and frills of lace, a fine seal leather hand bag with leather handles and a square frame would be quite out of the picture. The elaborate tailored suit of the moment demands a dressy hand bag, just as it demands the soft, graceful gloves and the coquettish buttoned boot.

Department stores, specialty shops and even jewelers are showing a greater assortment of bags and reticules than previous seasons have disclosed. There is no limit to the number which can be utilized in the fashionable wardrobe, for they are as varied as the gowns themselves and chosen to match or suit this and that costume.

Just now small silk or velvet opera bags, with gorgeous mountings or with rich embroidery, are carried to the opera or evening musicale. Some of the latest opera bags are made of silk with embroidery sections mounted over pieces of pasteboard.



LEATHER HAND BAGS.

A combination of silver or gold thread embroidery with beads is even richer on a background of chiffon velvet. The peacock colorings are beautiful and easy to carry out with iridescent beads.

Fine dull jet beads closely sewn together on black silk make very handsome mourning reticules, which are used a great deal in place of leather bags.

Leather novelties for spring include many attractive and convenient hand bags for women. The envelope bag of leather and the long silk or leather bag, with a tiny watch set into the side, are convenient and attractive. The little watch may be consulted by the busy shopper without the trouble of taking out her own watch from underneath her wrap.

Cheap Salad Dressing.

When eggs are expensive and salads so essential in the average home, one should know of different salad dressings which lose none of their fine flavor if eggs are not included.

One may use olive oil or butter for the purpose. It should be boiled with red pepper and celery seed, then strained and to it added the desired amount of salt, sugar and mustard, with a fourth teaspoonful of cornstarch to a small quantity of dressing to give it the smooth effect obtained with eggs.

Beat this with an egg beater, add a very small quantity of vinegar and, when possible, the least bit of whipped cream. The secret of an exceptionally delicious mayonnaise is the vinegar used. It is spiced and sweetened with brown sugar and strained for use. It gives that flavor over which one is certain to wonder "What can it be?" and yet cannot discover.

Pronounced KEPH-AL-DOLE

At last the victims of these torturing complaints—men and women whose lives are long-drawn-out agony—may look with hope, confidence—certainty—to pain's most glad departure.

In Kephaldol is offered, for the first time, a remedy which not only has medical endorsement for its efficacy in all cases of RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, and SCIATICA, but is also guaranteed to be a perfectly safe pain-killer, containing nothing to injure the heart or any other bodily organ.

Kephaldol is prompt and reliable, causes no intestinal irritation, and has none of the characteristic after-effects of quinine and phenacetin. Kephaldol brings, indeed, untold blessing to pain-wracked humanity; joy of perfect life again to those who, perhaps for many years, have dragged through a tormented existence. Kephaldol is prescribed and praised by doctors, and gratefully appreciated by suffers.

MR. JOS. WOOD, Derby Road, Mareday, Eng. tells of his remarkable recovery. His own words are:—"I have been off work three years and six months, and nothing I could get did me any good. I was suffering from Lumbago and Sciatic Rheumatism. Had six weeks in the hospital, but the doctor said he could do no more for me.

"I got some Kephaldol on Friday. On the morning of Wednesday I had no pain and no painful joints. I felt a new man, and have had no return of it.

"One of my workmates was off work 12 months. After taking Kephaldol he tells me he has now no pain. Another who had been laid up 11 weeks is also free from pain now. Every day I am asked for the name of the stuff that has sent me to work again. Kephaldol is now taken for three or four miles around here." 15

KING MAKES BIG GIFTS TO CHARITY

PARIS, April 25.—Their Majesties King George and Queen Mary yesterday put in another busy day and were everywhere received with immense popular enthusiasm, especially at the race course at Auteuil, where society and the masses gathered in their thousands to witness the "sports of kings" and do honor to King George and his Consort and cheer for the entente cordiale.

In the morning Their Majesties visited the British hospital and the British art exhibition in company with President and Madam Poincare, and the two rules and their wives exchanged gifts.

Last night the King and Queen dined as the guests of the French Premier and the French Foreign Minister at the Quai d'Orsay.

Their Majesties will be in London again this evening.

STARTS FORCE TO WIN WIDOW

SOUTH WEYMOUTH, Mass., April 25.—Proof that the fires of love can burn hotly even though the swain be ninety-six years old will be demonstrated at Pocotow, when William McNabb opens a tiny blacksmith shop on Union street, where, without even an apprentice, he will start to accumulate money enough to win the heart of a widow of seventy-three.

The widow is Mrs. Alice Clarke, of Worcester, Mass., who answered an advertisement in a matrimonial publication inserted by McNabb, who said he had decided that every man should marry.

GOES INSANE ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

MEDICINE HAT, Alta., April 25.—The trial of Alex. Anderson, on the charge of killing his wife last June, ended abruptly late last night, when Justice Scott asked the jury to retire and bring in a finding as to the present state of the prisoner's mind.

The verdict, arrived at after eight minutes' consideration, was that the man is insane, and, therefore, his trial was declared illegal. The prisoner was turned over to the police to be held until such time as he is sane enough to stand trial.

The abrupt ending of the trial proved a sensation. Interest in the case was great, as Anderson, found guilty of murder last November, was to have been hanged in February, but was granted a new trial.

The halt in the case late last night, during the hearing of medical testimony for the defence, which was strongly to the effect that the prisoner was at present insane. He is a paraloiac of the worst type, said physicians who examined him. One doctor declared the prisoner was sane when he is said to have killed his wife with a hammer, but was now insane.

SUES TOWN FOR DEATH OF SON

STRATHROY, Ont., April 25.—Herbert Scott is suing the town of Strathroy for ten thousand dollars for the death of his seven-year-old son, whose funeral takes place today. Scott's statement is that the city's sewer frequently overflowed, and flooded his cellar last autumn, and the resultant dampness caused rheumatic paraysis of which the child died.

TO PERMIT AMERICANS TO LEAVE MEXICO CITY

President Huerta Has Reversed His Former Decision to Hold Them as Hostages

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Special—Definite information was received at the State Department this morning that Huerta had reversed his intention of holding Americans as hostages and was permitting them to leave Mexico City for Vera Cruz.

The re-establishment of communication between Vera Cruz and Mexico City was reported to-day. All day yesterday this Government was cut off completely from the Mexican capital, and this circumstance added greatly to the alarm felt for the safety of Americans. Early this morning, however, the wire facilities were again re-established.

Not only were the conditions in Mexico City reported more favorable, with refugees leaving freely on every train, but also the situation along the border was more quiet.

The news in regard to Huerta's reversal of his decision to hold Americans as hostages reached the State Department this morning through the British Embassy. The British Ambassador had received word from the representative of Britain in Mexico City that Huerta's reprisals were due to his belief that Mexican non-combatants were being held in Vera Cruz. The State Department officials heard of this yesterday and immediately took steps to assure Huerta that he was mistaken. The United States acted through both the British and Brazilian representatives in Mexico City. As a result Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, notified Secretary Bryan to-day that the dictator had ordered that facilities be given for the departure of Americans from the capital.

Secretary Bryan was greatly elated by the news and immediately issued the following statement:

"The British Ambassador has informed us that he has received a message from Mexico City to the effect that the misunderstanding here on Huerta's part has cleared up. A trainload of Mexicans has arrived from Vera Cruz at Mexico City. A trainload of Americans was being collected in Mexico City to go to Vera Cruz when the message was being sent.

P.E.I. BUSINESS MEN INCORPORATE

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I. April 26.—(Special.)—An epoch is made in the financial history of the Province by the incorporation of the P.E. Island Trust Company. In the past a great part of the money of Prince Edward Island has been sent abroad and much of it has been sunk in enterprises that have failed while many persons who would not place their savings outside the Province had to place them in banks at such low rates of interest as three per cent. while farmers and others who had to borrow temporary loans for farm and other kinds of financial needs, no matter how large their property had to pay from eight to six per cent. interest. The new company is composed of the most substantial and responsible men of business and capital in the Island, who have formed themselves into the new company with the avowed object of keeping the local money at home and so retain the profits derived from its use, and pay a higher rate of interest than three per cent. while making loans at a lower rate than six, seven and eight per cent. This company will afford a reliable means of mutual financial cooperation among the islanders, and at the same time it will be in competition to some extent with the banks and so obliged to give the public, as "best possible."

GIRL FOUND DEAD IN BOARDING HOUSE

GUELPH, April 27.—Special—Mary Chrysler, a young lady student of Macdonald Institute, was found dead on her bed at her boarding house, 20 Park Avenue, shortly after 1 o'colck on Saturday afternoon. The young lady was in her customary good health the day before and had spent the evening at the residence of a friend on Forbes avenue. She got up rather late on Saturday, and after washing her hair, took a dose of Epsom salts and went to her room. Her landlady, Mrs. Hubels saw her there shortly afterwards and she was apparently all right but when she knocked on the door to call her for dinner there was no response, and on going into the room [illegible] was horrified to find the girl fully dressed, lying dead. The police were at once notified and Dr. Savage opened an inquest in the evening, which after viewing the body adjourned until Monday afternoon.

Miss Chrysler had been a student at Macdonald Institute for only two weeks. She came from Petrolea. Her parents are both dead and she was a ward of Dr. Fairbanks, of that place.

MAY INCREASE AID TO NEWFOUNDLAND

OTTAWA, April 25.—Mr. Macdonald, of Pictou, today suggested that Parliament should vote a larger sum than the $10,000 proposed by the Prime Minister for the relief of sufferers, by the loss of the Newfoundland sealing vessels. He said that it now seemed certain that the steamer Southern Cross had been lost with all hands, and that the effects of the disaster were more widespread than was at first thought. Toronto, he said, had granted $5,000, and other Canadian cities would doubtless make appropriations.

Mr. Foster said that the question would receive further consideration by the Government. The disaster was one which appealed to the sympathies of all Canadians. It was now known to be of much greater magnitude than had been at first supposed.

NEITHER TANGO OR AUTO

LONDON, April 7.—(Special.)—There is one place where the tango is yet unknown, and that is Monrovia, the capital of Liberia, according to Reed Paige Clark, the receiver of general customs there, who is now on six months leave of absence, and who will sail for the United States on April 3. Rag-time and the movies, however, flourish there, Mr. Clark says, but there is not an automobile in the whole of Liberia; in fact, there are no wheeled vehicles at all, as there are no roads and no railroads.

GOT GLASSES BACK BUT WAS HE STUNG?

Lost in Seed He Shipped Away and Found in High-Priced Seed He Bought Afterwards

VESPER, Wis., April 25.—An enterprising framer her recovered in a prising farmer has recovered in a tacles, but he is at a loss whether to feel himself lucky and proclaim the merits of his clover seed, or to rail at what he thinks dishonesty on the part of some seed dealers.

He decided that his clover crop would be improved if he made a change in seed. So he sacked his seed and disposed of it to a dealer for a small price. Soon the farmer missed his glasses.

Later he sent to a well-known seed house and paid a big price for a much advertised variety.

THE ARMING OF THE ULSTERITES

(Intelligencer Special)

LONDON, April 27.—The arming of Ulsterites has had the peculiar effect of decreasing the likelihood of a collision between the regular soldiers and volunteers. Of many privates quietly interviewed at Curragh and Newbridge today, only one talked of firing over the volunteers' heads. "If I were told to fire, I would obey, but without intent," he said.

On the other hand, a Suffolk private said: "We dislike the idea of attacking the Ulsterites, but, now they are armed we would go against them with good heart, if necessary." An artillery man said: "Their real weakness is lack of field guns. Some of ours carry miles, each shell holding several shots." Men are practically unanimous in declaring their willingness to put down what they say now is a rebellion, since the Larne affair.

TO CULTIVATE OYSTERS IN N. B.

ST. JOHN N.B., April 27.—(Special.) An agreement has been made with [illegible] companies by the Provincial Government, who will cultivate oysters [illegible] an extensive scale on the shores of Westmoreland County. The Shediac Oyster Company has secured a term of twenty [illegible] of 6,920 acres at Shemogue for [illegible] years. The companies must expend $5,000 each for [illegible] years in planting and cultivating oysters, and pay 25 cents per barrel on all oysters sold. After January 1, 1920, the minium royalty to be paid by them shall not be less than $2,000 a year, and 25 acres of their area must be made productive annually for the first seven years. The Canadian Oyster Company Limited which has 15,000 acres at Bale Verte, must spend $10,000 per year for the first seven years and make at least 100 acres productive each year for the first seven years, and pay a royalty after January 1, to be not less than $5,000 a year.

WRECKED BY THE POLITICAL SITUATION

DUBLIN, April 27.—(Special.)—The Dublin social season has been practically wrecked by the political situation. Important members of society, unless they are officially obliged to do so, do not attend the drawing-rooms. No balls have been given by Lady Iveagh or Lady Paget, who usually set the pace for the Dublin gayeties. The dances and dinners are all informal in order that the Unionists can ignore their political opponents. Except for one charity ball which was attended by the Earl and Countess of Aberdeen and the viceregal staff, none of the dances expected last week were given, and it is intended that the proposed entertainments by Lieut.-Gen. Sir Arthur and Lady Paget at the Royal Hospital shall be put off.

CAN UNLOAD CARGO EXCEPT AMMUNITION

VERA CRUZ, April 27.—Special—The German Ypiranga will be permitted to unload all her cargo except 10,000 Winchester rifles, forty machine guns and a million rounds of ammunition, which were consigned to Huerta. These will be returned to Hamburg.

It is believed here that the ammunition and the arms were bought originally in New York, shipped to Odessa, and thence through Europe to Hamburg, where they were placed on board the Ypiranga. The object was to elude the United States authorities that might seek to trace the shipment of arms and ammunition from that country.

MOVE TO ADMIT WOMEN TO BRITISH BAR.

London, April 27—Special—Politicians of all parties, including Sir John Simon, the Attorney-General, and Viscount Haldane, the Lord Chancellor, have given their support to a movement to admit women to practice as lawyers. The only opposition now comes from the Incorporated Law Society, the chartered body of solicitors. The question will be put to a test in Parliament during the present session if the Government can find time.

SMUGGLES IN MALE INFANT

Baroness Needed a Child so as to Inherit Fortune

VIENNA, April 25.—Baroness Zois, of Graz, Styria, was arrested a few days ago on a charge of smuggling a male infant into her husband's home and passing it off as her own child. The baroness had two daughters fifteen years ago, but she had no son, and the family was not therefore, entitled to inherit an entailed estate belonging to an unmarried cousin of Baron Zois.

Fearing that she would never have a son, the baroness is alleged to have planned to buy an heir from a cook at a price of $200 and to have paid a nurse $100 for arranging matters. Immediately afterwards the baroness attempted to get possession of part of the money set aside for the education of the heir of the house of Zois and thus attracted attention to herself.

It is said that promissory notes to the cook and the nurse were discovered and that the baroness attempted to commit suicide by throwing herself from a window on her arrest, but was prevented.

SEND WIRELESS TO U.S. WAR FRONT

Is Largest Outfit Ever Constructed for Army in Field

NEW YORK, April 25.—A powerful wireless outfit, said to be the largest ever constructed for use of an army in the field, is packed and ready for shipment at Bedlow's island. Orders are expected from Washington to forward the outfit to Vera Cruz.

The set was constructed by signal corps men, and was originally intended for use in Alaska. It has a steel mast two hundred feet high and five feet in diameter at its base.

Its estimated radius is from 2,500 to 3,000 miles, and if set up at Vera Cruz it will be able to hold communication with the great aerial station at Arlington, Va.

SAVES A CROWD FROM HUGE LION

PORTLAND, Ore., April 25.—While a circus parade was proceeding through the heart of the business district here to-day, the bolt on the door of a lion's cage snapped and the door swung open. With a roar a huge lion leaped for the opening. The crowd surged back in terror. The animal was half out of the cage when Patrolman Chas. Muston sprang forward, smashed it on the nose with his helmet, drove it back, held his arm in the grooves of the cage in place of the broken bolt until he could produce his handcuffs and finally snapped the cuffs on the door and casement bar.

FLOODS IN LONDON CAUSED BY RAIN

Storm Sewers Were Unable to Carry Away the Downpour

LONDON, Ont., April 27.—Special—A tremendously heavy rain storm which visited the city yesterday resulted in flood conditions in many sections, the sewers being unable to carry off the water. The storm was not of long duration, but the official record shows that 1.80 inches of rain fell. Many cellars were flooded, and in some parts the streets were several feet under water. The worst conditions prevailed in the western portion of the city, which is low lying. Even in the business section it was found necessary to lay planks across the gutter to allow pedestrians to board the street cars.

INDEPENDENT ODFELLOWS ATTEND DIVINE SERVICE

A Large Turnout of Local Members and Visiting Brethern--Daughters of Rebekah Participate in the Service--Appropriate Sermon by E.C. Currie of John St. Church

To commemorate the anniversary of the founding of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the members of Belleville Lodge No. 81, and Mizpah Lodge, No. 127, of this city, accompanied by the Patriarchs Militant in uniform, yesterday morning attended divine service at John Street Presbyterian Church. Although they did not parade, many of the members of Quintena Lodge of Rebekahs were in attendance at the service. A number of the members of Trenton Lodge, accompanied by the citizens' band of that town, participated in the turnout. Considering the fact that the weather was disagreeable, a large number of the members of the local lodge were in attendance. Headed by the I. O. O. F. band of this city, the brethren proceeded to the church, which was well filled. The Pastor, Rev. E. C. Currie, officiated, and his discourse was most appropriate for the occasion. After the usual devotional exercises, [illegible] reverend gentleman delivered [illegible] mon, of which the following [illegible] opsis:

The text was found [illegible] II Chron. xxix:27—"When th[illegible] offering began the song [illegible] the Lord began also."

In this [illegible] we have a brief account of [illegible] great reformation instituted [illegible] Hezekiah, who marked a return [illegible] the sins of his apostate father [illegible] Ahaz. But the most arresting thing in the text is the mention of sacrifice and song in the same breath.

There is at least the suggestion of a seeming relationship. When once attention is called to it we see the union everywhere: (1) in the home, (2) in the best fiction, (3) in the lives of the world's missionaries and benefactors, (4) in our own lives, when we have resolutely put ourselves in the background and have sacrificed our own pleasure or advantage in the interest of some one else. We have found that "when the sacrificing began the song of the Lord began also."

The recurrence of this seeming relation has led us to the discovery of it as indissoluble. It is impossible for the selfish to be happy. Let there be no sacrifice and there will be no song. But the day one begins to look for others, the nature that had no song becomes jubilant with music. "There is that which scattereth and yet increaseth." There is that which foregoes personal privilege but enlarges the joy. There is that which sacrifices passion to principle and becomes possessed of the song. The lesson is clear. We are all in quest of happiness and here is the cue. With some it is made the end. But we cannot have it by aiming at it directly. The world is on the wrong scent after it. It is belie[illegible]ed to be found in having and getting, while it is only to be found [illegible] it.

There is another reas[illegible] that men would seem to be nece[illegible]sacrifices and should find pleasure [illegible] of tasks. It in the actual fulfi[illegible] to the finer ac- is a means and [illegible] nurse, the mecomplishment [illegible]cher, the fraternity chanic. th[illegible] that all self denial and man will [illegible] a musical accompaniment. servi[illegible]eads us to the example of life sacrifice which we have in Jesus Christ. "He went about doing good." "He made Himself of no reputation." And if we copy Him who "pleased not Himself," "who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister," this bit of old world history shall record our experience": when the sacrifice began the song began also." But to live in this world and do nothing for one's own spiritual self, or for one's fellowmen, or for God—this is the tragedy of life. We shall not thus

Barter life for pottage,
And Esau-like our Father's blessing
miss,
Then wash with fruitless tears a faded

In the course of his remarks the minister expressed his pleasure in addressing the order in view of the fact that they had not lost the brotherhood idea, and had won for themselves the reputation of being a distinctively Christian institution whose charity has operated along the lines laid down by our blessed Lord. He also said: "When I remember the Samaritan acts which have distinguished the order, and the pure religion and undefiled before God the Father, and the visitation of the fatherless and widows in the affliction, and the deeds of loving ministry and service for the brethren—when I recall these things I am not surprised to read of the growth of the order, nor to learn of rejoicing in the court, and gladness abounding in the hearts of your members."

GET GUARDIANS FROM MILITANTS

LONDON, April 25.—The Liberty and Property Defence League which among other things is a sort of Pinkerton detective agency advertises its readiness to supply suitable guardians "armed with cat o' nine tails and other effective weapons" for the protection of property against militant suffragettes. Reporters asked several officials of the Women's Social and Political Union to express their opinion in regard to the advertisement but they refused to do so.

HERALD EDITOR REFUSED TO GIVE AUTHOR'S NAME

HALIFAX N.S., April 24—The feature of the proceeding in the committee of inquiry into the alleged breach of privilege of the House of Assembly tonight was the refusal of W. R. McCurdy, the news editor of the Herald, to divulge the name of the correspondent who wrote the article complained of by the House. The refusal will be reported to the House of Assembly to be further dealt with by that body. Mr. McCurdy declined on the ground that it would be a violation of newspaper ethics to give the name.

MEXICANS TO FIGHT FOR GERMAN ARMS.

Vera Cruz, April 26.—A demand has been made on the German Legation in Mexico City to surrender the arms imported for the protection of the German residents there, according to information reaching here. Admiral Von Hintze, the German Minister, replied: "If you get the arms you will have to fight for them."

The Mexican Federal officer who had come to demand the arms then retired with the 200 men he had brought with him to enforce the demand.

WAITS TO GET KEG OF BEER

FORT LEAVENWORTH, April 25.—Soldiers stationed here are waiting for Merritt lake to be drained when they will take a dash for the bed of the lake to hunt for a keg of beer accidentally lost fifteen years ago by a party of fishermen when their boat capsized.

An old sergeant of the Fifth Cavalry here is authority for the statement that the beer was dropped in the lake. He was here at the time.

The lake is being drained to enable workmen to build a retaining wall and clean the bottom, after which the surroundings will be made into a park. This, however, has nothing to do with the soldiers as they are anxious to obtain the keg of beer. Some are planning to pitch a tent near the lake when it is about emptied so as to be on hand for the "keg party."

In addition to the keg of beer in the lake several wagon loads of fish will be removed and given away, to say nothing of the hundreds of turtles.

REFUGEES ARRIVE.

Big Party of Americans Suffered Ill-Treatment From Mexicans.

GALVESTON, April 27.—Driven out of Mexico by armed mobs, insulted, taunted and sometimes shot and otherwise tortured, 2,654 Americans have arrived here within the last 24 hours, all glad to escape with their lives, which they had all but despaired of. One United States battleship, two United States colliers and three other steamers were necessary to bring this number of refugees to Galveston. All of the vessels brought word that other steamers were behind them in the Gulf, and officials here are expecting and preparing to care for fully 4,000 refugees before the end of the week. Many of those who escaped from the neighboring republic suffered insults and indignities. They say that several were shot at or carried away by an armed mob of Mexicans and some few were shot and tortured. Many women and children are in the party.

All of the refugees are being held for five days in quarantine. In the meantime food and clothing are being sent to them and a camping ground being prepared. Individual stories of losses of property and hardship are countless. Many of those on board the vessels now anchored in the Galveston roads are without any funds whatever or any method of obtaining money. Many are barely clothed.

The Tampico situation has continued so serious, according to a wireless message reaching here yesterday, that two torpedo boats Saturday were sent up the Panuco river from Tampico to get Americans. Refugees arriving here from Tampico yesterday said they were saved from rioting Mexicans early Wednesday morning by German sailors.

THE RING.

CHALLENGES THE WORLD

PARIS April 26.—Inspired, perhaps, by her countrymen's valor within the prize ring, a young French woman named Marthe Carpentier, who has gained some renown in the gymnasium where she attends a class has issued a challenge to box any woman of her weight for the championship of France. She does not claim to be related to Georges Carpentier, the French champion, though bearing the same name.

As to her fighting weight, La Belle Marthe is somewhat undecided, and with true feminine caprice, she reserves the right to weigh whatever she likes when she enters the ring. The high-spirited young lady is not to be tied down by such a material matter as the difference of a few pounds and ounces.

Asked how a possible opponent might know at what weight she would be expected to enter the ring, Marthe replied that any such possible opponent would be allowed the privilege of looking her over at any time before hand, from which said opponent could draw her own conclusions as to the required weight.

This amusing challenge is sure to provoke much mirth in the French capital when it becomes generally known. At the same time gives expression to the tremendous boom boxing is enjoying among the French.

What all poetry and prose suffers if read by a discordant voice, all music suffers through rendering by a strident, harsh, unmusical piano. HAS BELLEVILLE MONEY TO BURN?

The Paving Question is of Vital Importance

Your city has in years past spent thousands of dollars for broken stone to macadamize Front and Bridge streets, until now you have a magnificent foundation—equal to any concrete—on which to lay a Bitulithic Pavement.

Is there any good, sound or valid reason why this material should not be used instead of being wasted when a responsible contractor gives a ten year guarantee for Bitulithic Pavement laid on top of it?

Bitulithic is higher in price because it actually costs more than any of the so-called asphalt concrete imitations that are now offered as substitutes at a low price. As with every other good article, imitators wish to profit by the good name Bitulithic has built up during the last 13 years. Hence their offer of "something just as good" as Bitulithic.

BELLEVILLE CANNOT AFFORD TO EXPERIMENT. If you need a physician you do not ask a paving man to prescribe for you nor a man without experience in medicine, nor can you afford to risk employing inexperienced men to experiment with your main streets, as, if they fail in their experiment, it will put back paving in Belleville for many years.

We have had 25 years experience in laying pavements in 45 cities in the United States and Canada and we know how. Our Bitulithic pavements laid in Toronto on macadam foundation ten years ago are in splendid condition and have withstood heavy traffic, with, except in few cases, but very slight repairs. We are a Canadian Company, and with the exception of our Bitumen, we buy all materials in Canada and use all local labor.

Interested salesmen tell you that Trinidad Asphalt is the best. The city of Toronto maintains an expensive laboratory to test all asphalts, and they say, after tests with all kinds of asphalts extending over 12 years, that "Acme" asphalt, which we use in our Bitulithic pavements is the best asphalt used in Toronto. This is an unbiased opinion given by a city which has no axe to grind.

Bitulithic is no experiment. It has stood the test and is today laid on the main business streets of such cities as Brantford, Berlin, Chatham, Halifax, Oshawa, Port Arthur, St. Catharines, and many other Canadian cities, and is giving satisfaction.

THE WARREN BITUMINOUS PAVING CO.,

103 Bay Street, Toronto.

WEDDING BELLS

CADMAN—LOTT.

A very pleasing event took place on Wed. morning, April 15th, 1914, at the Foxboro parsonage, when Miss Edith Lott of Sidney and Mr. William Cadman of Holloway, were quietly married. The ceremony was ably conducted by Rev. W. L. Brown. The bride looked beautiful in a taupe suit with cream waist and hat to match. After the nuptial knot was tied the wedding party, consisting of eight, left for Belleville, where they partook of a very tasty dinner prepared at the Kyle House. Amid showers of confetti Mr. and Mrs. Cadman left on the 1.40 train for Toronto. They will reside at Holloway, where Mr. Cadman conducts a very successful milling business. On Friday evening, April 24th, Mr. and Mrs. Cadman were invited to her father's home, where a number of her friends gathered to do her honor in the form of a variety shower. The following address was read by Grace Bell:

To Mrs. Wm. Cadman.

Dear Edith,—We a few of your many friends have come tonight to spend an evening with you in your old home. While we do not deplore the new ties you have assumed, we very much regret the severance of the old. A review of the past brings the remembrance of the many times you have aided in all the different branches of church work, always giving your best willing and generously. All that is past—you have left the old home and the old surroundings. You have married and gone to your husband's home. As the new duties and obligations present themselves, we know that you still will be governed by the same ideals. We have brought gifts and ask you to accept them as a more substantial expression of our love and esteem for you than mere words can convey. As you assign them to their various uses we trust you will be reminded of us all.

We greet you tonight with the kindest thoughts and best wishes for a happy future and hope both of you may long be spared to sustain and comfort each other. Many things will remind us of your former residence among us and rest assured the glad hand will always be extended whenever you come back to "the old home town."

Signed in behalf of Scott's neighborhood,

GRACE BELL.
BESSIE SCOTT.

After the address was read lunch was served and the evening spent in social chat and games, after which the party left for their several homes, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Cadman a life of prosperity and happiness.

PERFORMS DUTY BUT STEALS BAG

TORONTO April 25.—As he stepped to the platform of a train for New York city, Charles Edwards, 285 George street was placed under arrest last night by Union Station Constable Holmes on a charge of robbing the mails.

According to the police, the accused was formerly employed as a mail driver. Yesterday afternoon he is alleged to have entered the post office and to have stolen a bag of registered letters. The employees at the office were unaware of his dismissal, and, believing he was taking the mail to his wagon, did not stop him.

He took the bag to a Yonge street hotel and entering the lavatory opened it and extracted the registered letters.

BEAT THEIR MANAGER

SIMCOE, April 25.—The Black and Tan Concert Company, thirteen in number that has been touring this section of the Province, created a sensation in Port Rowan, when the troupe turned on the Manager, Lord E. Denton, because he said he had no money to pay their expenses. After mauling the big negro around and rolling him in the mud the troupe took a train for Simcoe.

Later Denton raised a disturbance in the hotel. Denton vigorously resisted arrest, and Chief Thompson used his handcuffs as a baton and beat the man into submission.

Denton pleaded guilty before Magistrate Buck to the charge of being drunk and disorderly and was let out on suspended sentence, on condition that he leave town on the first train.

DEATHS

LUSCOMBE—In Belleville on Saturday, April 25th, John Luscombe, aged 72 years 7 months.

The funeral will take place from his late residence, 84 Grier Street, on Wednesday, April 29th at 2.30 p.m. Services at the house at two o'clock. Interment, Belleville cemetery.

SUDDEN DEATH OF WELL KNOWN RESIDENT

On Saturday night death came suddenly to Mr. John Luscombe, a well known resident of the city who resided on Grier street. Deceased was preparing to retire when he fell upon a chair and immediately expired. Heart trouble was ascribed as the cause of death. In the year 1841 Mr. Luscombe was born at Bucklisly, Devonshire, England, and 30 years ago came to Belleville, where he had since lived. Until three years ago, when he was superannuated, deceased was employed as a car inspector on the G.T.R. here, and in this capacity was capable and trustworthy. Whilst in England deceased was for 21 years connected with the 20th regiment, and during that period was in active service in India, Japan and Africa. Of late years he had been on the retired list. Mr. Luscombe was a member of Moira Lodge A. F. & A. M., Moira Chapter, Oxford Lodge, Sons of England, and Canadian Order of Oddfellows. In religion he was a Baptist, being an elder of the city Baptist church. He was a man universally esteemed by all who knew him and his demise is regretted by a host of friends. In addition to the widow, five sons and three daughters survive. The sons are John, of Bellefontaine, Ohio; Alfred, of Mullingar, Sask.; Reuben of Newark, Ohio; and Walter and William of this city. The daughters are Mrs. B. Ainsworth of Allisonville, Mrs. Darlington and Miss Clara of Kingston. To those suddenly bereft will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of many friends.

CREATING A NUISANCE

Before Magistrate Masson to-day D. Stapley was charged with creating a nuisance in the Township of Thurlow by depositing refuse where it should not be deposited. It was proven his son and other members of the family were in reality the guilty parties and the case was dismissed after His Worship had given some timely advice. Mr. F. E. O'Flynn appeared for the township inspector, and Mr. F. White for the accused.

When Rheumatism Strikes the Heart It Kills—"Nerviline" the Cure

EFFECT OF NERVILINE ON CHRONIC CASES IS ALMOST MAGICAL

Exposure to wet or cold is apt to bring on an attack.

The muscles stiffen, the joints swell, and exertion brings on excruciating twinges.

Often the pain shifts from one part to another, and this is dangerous, as the heart is apt to be attacked. Death as a rule follows a heart attack.

This is a swift, lasting, and safe way to cure rheumatism. You can depend on Nerviline. It has the power, the penetrating force, the control over pain that is so essential to a rheumatic remedy.

The following letter is from Mr. E. G. Sautter, Port of Spain, Trinidad: "Last year I was severely troubled with rheumatism. I had it in my arms, shoulders and knees. The pain was at times excruciating and laid me up so that I couldn't work. I went to Smith Brothers' Drug Store and was advised by the manager to use 'Nerviline.' That was excellent advice. I used Nerviline as directed and was cured, completely cured of every trace of my old enemy."

Once you use Nerviline you'll realize it's different from all others—that it contains something that gets right "at" the pain the minute you rub it on. The large 50 cent family size is the most economical—get it to-day, or else the 25 cent trial size. Sold by dealers everywhere, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

COOMMERCE AND TRADE

A thorough and comprehensive review of the trade conditions of our Dominion has been placed before the country by Finance Minister W. T. White, expressing a most optimistic view of the future.

"So far as the financial stringencies are concerned, we may consider that the worst is over", he said. "From this time forward, until the culmination of the next economic cycle, we are, on the economic experience of the past, justified in looking for much more normal monetary conditions.

"Bankers and business men unite in the opinion that while it is a time for prudence and caution, it is also a time for confidence and courage. The strength of Canada lies in her vast natural resources. This is the rock upon which our prosperity is soundly based and founded. Any depression, generally speaking, can be but temporary in character until such time as normal money conditions, joined with business confidence, again restores the wonted activity of the nation."

The trade figures for the year did not give much evidence of hard times. The total trade for the year will be well over the record mark of 1913. For the eleven months of the year Mr. White said that the total trade was $1,038,051,469. One gratifying feature was the growth in exports, cutting down the adverse balance of trade which was a feature of Canadian commerce under the Laurier regime.

Mr. White pointed out that the stream of immigration still continues to flow towards the Dominion. For the whole fiscal year 1913-14 the total immigration will reach 390,000. According to the official figures, the capital and effects brought in by the immigrants would total $100,000,000.

Mr. White reviewed briefly real estate and speculation conditions in Canada, and took the following sound, sane and business-like view of conditions:

"There has been in real estate throughout Canada a long-expected set-back in values of speculative suburban properties. On the other hand the values of farm and central business and residential city properties are, generally speaking, not only being maintained, but will undoubtedly with the growth of the Dominion tend to appreciation. On the whole the readjustment which is going on in real estate conditions throughout Canada is recognized as inevitable and salutary. Commercial prospects for the immediate future seem to me to be encouraging. Conditions will, I think, gradually improve with returning confidence and easier money. By reason of the autumn conditions of last year, which permitted soil preparation on an unusual scale in all parts of the Dominion, the outlook for agricultural production this year is most favorable to increased production in those other great departments, our fisheries, forests and mines."

THE WOODBINE FIRE INQUEST

The coroner's inquest into the death of Mr. Charles E. Wilmot in the Woodbine Hotel fire ended, as so many inquests do, by the jury bringing in a verdict filled with words, but containing no meaning that need disturb anybody, no matter how great may have been his neglect or blame in connection with a catastrophe in which five lives were lost.

After weeks of investigation the jury asserts that the interior of the hotel was constructed of inflammable material. Everybody knew that. The jury declares that the use of such materials ought to be prohibited in building hotels. Everybody supposes that the use of such inflammable materials is, and has been, forbidden in the construction of hotels.

The inquest has cleared up nothing and has ended with an amiable verdict that annoys nobody.

The questions raised by the inquest are left unanswered, and the verdict of the jury but asserts facts that were self-evident before the enquiry began. The interior of the place was highly inflammable and utterly insecure against the risk of fire. But why did not the coroner's inquest ascertain where the blame rests for a wrongful condition that cost five human lives.

Was it the fault of the owners and builders? Did they skimp the work? Was it the fault of the Architect's Department? Did they consent to the putting up of such a flimsy hotel? Or was it the fault of the Board of Control? Did the Controllers step in and make themselves "good fellows" by releasing this hotel from being safe in case of fire?

Unless there is a direct case of murder committed by hand, little result ever comes from a coroner's inquest in Toronto. These enquiries often last for weeks and run up large bills of expense which the public pay. But, as a rule, they end in verdicts that establish nothing. Most of these verdicts simply mean: "It is too bad, and we hope nothing like it will happen again."—Toronto Star.

THE COLORADO HORROR

There is actually a worse war going on in Colorado than has been encountered in Mexico—a war more like the one the Mexicans have been fighting among themselves. As if the awful tragedy at Ludlow were not enough, it is reported that some thirty more people, mostly women and children, have been trapped in a mine which is on fire, with the entrance closed by dynamite blasts and the air supply cut off. The Ludlow victims were the wives and children of the strikers. These people are the wives and children of non-unionists. Whether the Ludlow tragedy was accidental or deliberate, there can be no doubt that this second tragedy is an intentional act of fiendish revenge.

The weak government of the State of Colorado appears to be almost paralyzed. Having no adequate force organized in the first place, it appears to lack either the authority or the energy to raise one. The situation is the most extraordinary that ever has occurred in a labor war on this continent.

An attorney for the operators says that the strikers began the trouble at Ludlow; that they prepared for it by digging pits to safeguard their women and children and then deliberately attacked the militiamen. A labor leader says that he does not know who fired first and he thinks that the tents were fired by explosive bullets. The awful fact appears undisputed, however, that the fighting was continued relentlessly after the peril of the women and children was realized. It is almost unbelievable that either militiamen or strikers would have done that. Considering the condition of the two countries, the Colorado atrocity is far below the human standard of Mexico.

"RUN TO EARTH"

By the Author of
"Lady Audley's Secret," "Aurora Floyd," etc., etc.

"If I ever win back what I have lost these pampered parasites shall suffer for their insolence", thought the young man, as he walked across the broad Gothic hall of the castle, escorted by the grave old butler.

But he hadn't any leisure to think about his uncle's servants. Another and far more important person occupied his mind, and that person was his uncle's bride.

"Lady Eversleigh is at home?" he asked, while crossing the hall.

In the centre of this room, by the side of a grand piano, from which she had just arisen, stood the new mistress of the castle. She was simply dressed in pale gray silk, relieved only by a scarlet ribbon twisted in the masses of her raven hair. Her beauty had the same effect upon Reginald Eversleigh which it exercised on almost all who looked at her for the first time. He was dazzled; bewildered, by the singular loveliness.

"And this divinity—this goddess of grace and beauty is my uncle's wife", he thought; "this is the street ballad singer whom he picked out of the gutter."

For some minutes the elegant and accomplished Reginald Eversleigh stood abashed before the calm presence of the nameless girl his uncle had married.

Sir Oswald welcomed his nephew with perfect cordiality. He was happy, and in the hour of his happiness he could cherish no unkind feeling towards the adopted son who had once been so dear to him. But while ready to open his arms to the repentant prodigal, his intentions with regard to the disposition of his wealth had undergone no change. He had arrived, calmly and deliberately, at a certain resolve, and he intended to adhere to that decision.

"You my think me harsh and severe", he said, gravely; "but the resolution which I announced to you in Arlington street cost me much thought and care. I believe that I have acted for the best. I think that my over-indulgence was the bane of your youth, Reginald, and that you would have been a better man had you been more roughly reared. Since you have left the army, I have heard no more of your follies; and I trust that you have at least struck out a better path for yourself, and separated yourself from all dangerous associates. But you must choose a new profession. You must not live an idle life on the small income which you receive from me. I only intended that annuity as a safeguard against poverty, not as a sufficient means of life. You must select a new career, Reginald; and whatever it may be, I will give you some help to smooth your pathway. Your first cousin, Douglas Dale, is studying for the law—would not that profession suit you?"

"I am at your hands, sir, and ready to obey you in everything."

"Well, think over what I have said; and if you choose to enter yourself as a student in the Temple, I will assist you with all necessary funds."

"My dear uncle, you are too good."

'I wish to serve you as far as I can with justice to others. And now, Reginald, we will speak no more of the past. What do you think of my wife?"

"She is the most beautiful creature I ever beheld."

"And she is as good and true as she is beautiful—a pearl of price, Reginald. I thank Providence for giving me so great a treasure."

"And this treasure will be possessor of Raynham Castle, I suppose", thought the young man, savagely.

"As I have been thoroughly candid with you, Reginald", he said, "I may as well tell you even more. I am at the age which some call the prime of life, and I feel all my old vigor. But death sometimes comes suddenly to men whose life seems as full of promise as mine seems to me now. I wish that when I die there may be no possible disappointments as to the disposal of my fortune. Other men make a mystery of the contents of their wills. I wish the terms of my will to be known by all interested in it."

"I have no desire to be enlightened, sir," murmured Reginald, who felt that his uncle's words boded no good to himself.

"My will has been made since my marriage," continued Sir Oswald, without noticing his nephew's interruption; "any previous will would, indeed, have been invalidated by that event. Two-thirds—more than two-thirds—of my property has been left to my wife, who will be a very rich woman when I am dead and gone. Should she have a son, the landed estates will, of course, go to him; but in any case, Lady Eversleigh will be mistress of a large fortune. I leave five thousand a year to each of my nephews. As for you, Reginald, you will, perhaps, consider yourself bitterly wronged; but you must, in justice, remember that you have been your own enemy. The annuity of two hundred a year which you now possess will, after my death, become an income of five hundred a year, derived from a small estate called Merton Grange, in Lincolnshire. You have nothing more than a modest competency to hope for, therefore; and it rests with yourself to win wealth and distinction by the exercise of your own talents."

The pallor of Reginald Eversleigh's face alone revealed the passion which consumed him as he received these most unwelcome statements from his uncle's lips. Fortunately for the young man, Sir Oswald did not observe his countenance, for at this moment Lady Eversleigh appeared on the terrace-walk outside the open window of her husband's study, and he hurried to her.

"What are to be our plans for this afternoon, darling?" he asked. "I have transacted all my business, and am quite at your service for the rest of the day."

"Very well, then, you cannot please me better than by showing me some more of the beauties of your native county."

"You make that proposition because you know it pleases me, artful puss; but I obey. Shall we ride or drive? Perhaps, as the afternoon is hot, we had better take the barouche," continued Sir Oswald, while Honoria hesitated. "Come to luncheon. I will give all necessary orders.

They went to the dining-room, whither Reginald accompanied them. Already he had contrived to banish the traces of emotion from his countenance, but his uncle's words were still ringing in his ears.

Five hundred a year!—he was to receive a pitiful five hundred a year; whilst his cousins—struggling men of the world, unaccustomed to luxury and splendor—were each to have an income of five thousand. And this woman—this base, unknown, friendless creature, who had nothing but her diabolical beauty to recommend her—was to have a splendid fortune!

These were the thoughts which tormented Reginald Eversleigh as he took his place at the luncheon-table. He had been now a fortnight at Raynham Castle, and had become, to all outward appearance, perfectly at his ease with the fair young mistress of the mansion. There are some women who seem fitted to occupy any station, however lofty. They need no teaching; they are in no way bewildered by the novelty of wealth or splendor; they make no errors. They possess an instinstive tact, which all the teaching possible cannot always impart to others. They glide naturally into their position; and, looking on them in their calm dignity, their unstudied grace, it is difficult to believe they have not been born in the purple.

Such a woman was Honoria, Lady Eversleigh. The novelty of her position gave her no embarrassment; the splendor around her charmed and delighted her sense of the beautiful, but it caused her no bewilderment; it did not dazzle her unaccustomed eyes. She received her husband's nephew with the friendly, yet dignified, bearing which it was fitting Sir Oswald's wife should display towards his kinsman; and the scrutinizing eyes of the young man sought in vain to detect some secret hidden beneath that placid and patrician exterior.

'The woman is a mystery", he thought; "one would think she were some princess in disguise. Does she really love my uncle, I wonder? She acts her part well, if it is a false one. But then, who would not act a part for such a prize as she is likely to win? I wish Victor were here. He, perhaps, might be able to penetrate the secret of her existence. She is a hypocrite, no doubt; and an accomplished one. I would give a great deal for the power to strip the veil from her beautiful face, and show my lady in her true colors."

Such bitter thoughts as these continually harassed the ambitious and disappointed man. And yet he was able to bear himself with studied courtesy towards Lady Eeversleigh. The best people in the county had come to Raynham to pay their homage to Sir Oswald's bride. Nothing could exceed her husband's pride as he beheld her courted and admired. No shadow of jealousy obscured his pleasure when he saw younger men fleck round her to worship and admire. He felt secure of her love, for she had again and again assured him that her heart had been entirely his even before he declared himself to her. He felt an implicit faith in her purity and innocence.

Such a man as Oswald Eversleigh is not easily moved to jealousy; but with such a man, one breath of suspicion, one word of slander, against the creature he loves, is horrible as the agony of death.

Reginald Eversleigh had shared in all the pleasures and amusements of Sir Oswald and his wife. They had gone nowhere without him since his arrival at the castle; for at present he was the only visitor staying in the house, and the baronet was too courteous to leave him alone.

"After the twelfth we shall have plenty of bachelor visitors", said Sir Oswald; "and you will find the old place more to your taste, I dare say, Reginald. In the meantime, you must content yourself with our society."

MEDIATION IS ACCEPTED BY MEXICO AND U.S.

Argentina, Brazil and Chile Will Use Their Persuasive Powers to Secure an Agreement Between Gen. Huerta and the United States—Wilson, In Accepting, Lays Down Conditions.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Spanish Ambassador Riano announced late last night that he received private advices from Mexico City stating that Gen. Huerta had accepted the offer of Argentina, Brazil and Chile to use their good offices to bring about an amicable settlement of the difficulty between the United States and Mexico.

Wilson Also Accepts.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—President Wilson last night announced he had accepted an offer from Brazil, Argentina and Chile to use their good offices in an attempt to bring about a peaceful and friendly settlement of the difficulty between the United States and Mexico.

The offer was formally submitted by the three South American envoys to Secretary Bryan and laid before the President.

It is held that Mr. Wilson's reply means that he will insist upon the elimination of Huerta from the Mexican Presidency.

The reply of the President, made through the Secretary of State to the diplomatic representatives, was as follows:

"The Government of the United States is deeply confident of the friendliness, the good feeling and the generous concern for the peace and welfare of America manifested in the joint note just received from your Excellency tendering the good offices of your Government to effect, if possible, a settlement of the present difficulty between the Government of the United States and those who now claim to represent our sister Republic of Mexico. Conscious of the purpose with which the proffer is made, the Government does not feel at liberty to decline it. Its own chief interest is in the peace of America, the cordial intercourse of her republics and our people, and the happiness and prosperity which can spring only out of frank, mutual understandings and the friendship which is created by common purpose. The generous offer of your Government is, therefore, accepted.

"This Government hopes most earnestly that you may find those who speak for the several elements of the Mexican people willing and ready to discuss terms of satisfactory and therefore permanent settlement. If you should find them willing this Government will be glad to take up with you for discussion in the frankest and most conciliatory spirit any proposals that may be authoritatively formulated, and will hope that they may prove feasible and prophetic of a new day of mutual co-operation and confidence in America.

"This Government feels bound in candor to say that, its diplomatic relations with Mexico being for the present severed, it is not possible for it to make sure of an uninterrupted opportunity to carry out the plan of intermediation which you propose. It is, of course, possible that some act of aggression on the part of those who control the military forces of Mexico might oblige the United States to act to the upsetting of the hopes of immediate peace, but this does not justify us in hesitating to accept your generous suggestion. We shall hope for the best results within a brief time, enough to relieve our anxiety lest most ill-considered hostile demonstrations should interrupt negotiation and disappoint our hopes of peace."

The text of the offer made by the three countries was:-

"Mr. Secretary of State:

"With the purpose of subserving the interests of peace and civilization in our continent and with the earnest desire to prevent any further bloodshed to the prejudice of the cordiality and union which have always surrounded the relations of the Governments and the people of America, we, the plenipotentiaries of Brazil, Argentina and Chile, duly authorized hereto, have the honor to tender to your Excellency's Government our good offices for the peaceful and friendly settlement of the conflict between the United States and Mexico.

"This offer puts in due form the suggestions which we have had occasion to offer heretofore on this subject to the Secretary, to whom we renew the assurances of our highest and most distinguished consideration.

"(Signed)

Consul In Jail Two Days.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—United States Consul-General Philip Hanna, at Monterey, reported to Secretary Bryan last night that he had been humiliated and placed in jail by Mexican Federal officials on April 22, and left behind the bars until released two days later by the Constitutionalists when they captured the city.

Mr. Hanna's message to Secretary Bryan was despatched yesterday from Monterey. The Secretary took it to the White House at once, and it was the subject of a long conference between him and President Wilson. Mr. Hanna reported that he had been courteously treated by the Constitutionalists.

Aviator Surveys Mexican Forces.

VERA CRUZ, April 27.—An aeroplane from the American fleet made a flight over Vera Cruz shortly before noon yesterday. On attaining an altitude of several hundred feet the naval aviator circled the city and then passed over the outskirts and observed the position of the Mexican Federal forces.

CAILLAUX RE-ELECTED.

PARIS, April 27.—The elections passed off quietly yesterday.

For the 602 seats, 2,902 candidatures were originally declared. Of these 350 were withdrawn in the past few days. Six hundred others may be disregarded as being of a fantastic character, leaving something under 2,000 candidates. Up to midnight only 86 results were known. Of these 40 were indefinite, necessitating a second ballot on May 10.

Joseph Caillaux, who resigned the Ministry of Finance after the killing of Caston Calmette, editor of The Figaro, by Mme. Caillaux, and who decided to become a candidate for the Chamber at the request of his friends, was re-elected.

Victor Herbert Very Ill.

LONDON, April 27.—Victor Herbert, the composer and conductor, underwent an operation Saturday for appendicitis. His condition had become so critical that the doctors decided that an operation was necessary to save his life. They consider in view of the seriousness of the case that the composer's condition is as good as can be expected. Mr. Herbert came to London a week ago.

Some men do no wrong because they are too lazy to do anything.

RAINBOW WOULD TAKE SIX WEEKS TO FIT FOR SEA

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 25.—It would take at least six weeks, it was stated today at Esquimalt, to make H. M.C.S. Rainbow ready for sea. The wing of the Canadian Laurier navy in the western ocean is just now a lame duck. The cruiser has been tied up for more than six months in the Esquimalt yard and while most of her heavy equipment is still on board, it has been carefully dismantled.

Of officers and crew there are now aboard her only 37 men. Her full complement is 250 men, and to prepare the vessel for a scrutinizing tour of the west Mexican coast this complement would have to be found.

The Rainbow would have to go into dry dock before she could sail. Though six weeks was mentioned as the time needed to fit her, it might take three months to put her in really formidable shape to even throw a scare into the Mexicans.

British Columbian people would be rather gratified, so far as can be learned, to have the vessel sent on a real expedition. To tell the truth, she has been so long tied up at the Esquimalt wharf, that the people of British Columbia had almost forgotten her existence.

UNDER MARTIAL LAW.

Vera Cruz Is Now Governed Absolutely by U. S. Admiral.

VERA CRUZ, April 27.—Vera Cruz is to-day under martial law. Rear Admiral Fletcher, commanding the American naval forces on shore, yesterday issued a proclamation to this effect, and the last opportunity Mexicans had for handling their own affairs in Vera Cruz under their own laws disappeared.

Admiral Fletcher and his staff determined that there should be no more quibbling with the Mexican officials regarding forms of Government, and until further notice the residents of this port will live and be judged by military law.

This proclamation makes Rear Admiral Fletcher absolute ruler as before, and it is agreed that he will use his power with stoical regard for all, to the end that order shall be maintained.

It is expected that the martial law proclamation will have another effect—that of opening the way for more of the city and federal employes to return to their posts and co-operate in restoring the local government functions, Mexicans point out that these men will now be in a position to explain to their friends and the existing government at the capital that under martial law they felt obliged to return to their work.

The federal general, Maas, has established his headquarters at Soledad, about sixteen miles from Vera Cruz, and his men are tearing up the railway tracks. The gap between Tejera, the water supply station, which is guarded by the Americans, and Soledad has grown greatly, and it is now no simple task for the refugees, whether foreigners fleeing from Huerta or Mexicans, proceeding from Vera Cruz towards the capital to get themselves and their baggage across the open space.

STRIKERS TAKE TOWN.

News of Capture of Chandler, Col., Is Received at Denver.

DENVER, Col., April 27.—The town of Chandler and the mining camp there was captured just at dusk last evening by 1,000 strikers, according to a message which just reached the governor's office from Florence.

The news was taken to Florence by auto. It is said the strikers had taken absolute possession of the place.

A crowd of men and women—from 5,000 to 6,000 in number—stood in a pouring rain on the lawn in front of the Capitol building here yesterday afternoon and heard the state administration denounced for permitting the murders in the southern coal strike district.

At the conclusion of the speechmaking the mass meeting adopted resolutions condemning Governor E. M. Ammons as an accessory to the murder of babies, and demanding his impeachment at a special session of the Legislature, which Ammons has agreed to call for May, or, in the event of his failure to call the special session, those at the meeting are pledged to have him recalled.

The Denver Federation of Labor yesterday afternoon adopted a resolution to be presented to the national organization asking that each of the 2,000,000 members be assessed five cents a month so as to provide money and arms for the strikers. This would be $100,000 a month.

TORNADO HITS VILLAGES.

Illinois County Hamlets Devastated—One Dead and One Dying.

KANKAKEE, Ill., April 27.—One woman was killed, one man was fatally injured and hundreds of head of farm stock were killed when three villages were razed by a tornado that tore through Kankakee, Illinois County, early Saturday, according to meagre reports here yesterday afternoon. When the twister struck Clifton, destroying three business blocks and eight houses, Mrs. Hortense Collins was caught in the debris of her ruined home, suffering fatal injuries.

Momence also suffered heavy property damage, but reports from that village are meagre. The path of the tornado was only a hundred feet wide in most places.

BRITAIN IS DUBIOUS.

London Papers See Little Prospect of Successful Mediation.

LONDON, April 27.—The London morning newspapers in their editorial comment on the Mexican situation are not sanguine that the offer of mediation by the Presidents of Brazil, Argentina and Chili will result in a peaceful solution of the trouble, declaring that the United States is bent on the elimination of President Huerta, and that it will be impossible for Huerta to accept such terms.

TRAMPS PLENTIFUL

Since Saturday night no less than ten members of the tramping fraternity were provided with shelter at the police station. Their ages ranged from 20 to 61 years, and various countries were represented.

RECORD AT WELLINGTON

The village of Wellington, with a population of 825, has quite a unique record, in that there are three residents over ninety-one years of age, and twenty-two over eighty years. This is certainly some record for such a small place, and undoubtedly speaks well for the village from a health standpoint.

The three residents who are over ninety-two years of age, are Wilson Sears, Mrs. Spring and James Hadden.

A FINE PIECE OF PHILANTHROPY

Belleville takes a front rank, among cities of its size in Canada, in rescue work, and in its care for the sick, the indigent, and the neglected orphans and waifs of society. Our Hospital, county and city Houses of Refuge, Children's Shelter, City Mission and School for the Deaf, are worthy of all praise and command the approval and support of every loyal citizen. We have also another fine example of true philanthropy in the Marchmont Home, a large group of buildings situated on Moira street, at the corner of Yeomans street, and surrounded by a fine garden and orchard. This home is a branch of the Manchester and Salford Boys' and Girls' Homes, situated in Manchester, England.

For thirty years, the Rev. Robert Wallace, one of our best known and most highly respected citizens, was in charge of this Canadian branch in Belleville. He has now been succeeded by Mr. R. O. Knight, who comes to the work very highly recommended, and with a good record in rescue-home service in England. Visitors are alway given a cordial welcome at the Marchmont Home, and it is hoped that our citizens will take occasion to welcome Mr. Knight and his capable wife to our city's best, in friendship and Christian service.

The Hon. Secretary of the Manchester home, Mr. Thos. R. Ackroyd, paid an official visit to the Belleville branch last week, and your correspondent was privileged to gather from him some interesting particulars of this noble piece of philanthropy. The parent home was established in Manchester 44 years ago. On the first night 22 destitute boys were gathered in off the streets, while last year 5,000 boys and girls were cared for in the various branches of this institution. This will indicate the rapid growth and the thorough organization of the work. The expenses of these homes which now number 15, amounts to over $75,000 per year, and this budget is met by the gifts of wealthy English supporters as well as by a host of smaller subscriptions from year to year. The home is non-sectarian, but evangelical and Christian in its basis and operations. A feature of this home is that no boy or girl is uniformed, and that they are sent to the public schools and take their place like ordinary children and are trained as natural children in any well kept home. At the age of fourteen the boys are drafted out to learn trades, and the girls are placed as domestic servants. A careful tabulation covering 44 years reveals only 3 per cent. of failures in all these thousands of children. This speaks volumes for the personal care and discipline that is given to them, and also the love and respect they become imbued with towards their foster home and kind guardians. Canada receives only a very small percentage of these rescued children. Only the most fit and promising are emigrated, and a glance at the group of 24 boys who arrived here last Sunday will prove the sincerity of the society in this regard. They are the very picture of health and sturdiness, and are so eagerly sought after by the Canadian farmer that for every single boy there have been ten applicants.

ATTACKS STEPMOTHER.

Montreal Girl Makes Murderous Assault With Carving Knife.

MONTREAL, April 27.—A fifteen-year-old girl, armed with a long carving knife, made a murderous attack upon her stepmother at her home on Friday night. Her father put up a lively battle and after a terrible rough-and-tumble fight on the kitchen floor, wrestled the knife from her. Then he swore out a warrant for her arrest in the juvenile court.

The girl, who is big for her age and alleged to be a wayward one, was remonstrated with by her stepmother for her street walking tendencies. She flew into a dreadful passion, and, grabbing the knife, made a sudden leap for her. The father jumped and grasped her arm and the two fell to the floor. She put up a furious battle before she was overpowered.

THE READING CAMP ASSOCIATION

Now that the examinations are practically over, the students in the various universities of the Dominion are making their plans for the approaching summer. Many of them will devote their energies to "having a good time" during the hot weather, but a considerable section of them will spread abroad over the face of the country in their capacity as instructors of the Reading Camp Association. Rev. Thos. Joplin, who is spending a few days in Belleville, gave us a few details of the work this morning, in his official capacity as representative for the association.

"We have had well over one hundred and fifty applications for positions as instructor for the coming summer", said Mr. Joplin, "but unfortunately funds are lacking to place about half of these. We could easily find camps that would be only too willing to receive our men, but the financial diffficulty bars the way. Our instructors go out to the camps farthest away from civilized life and devote their spare time to helping the men who work there. We provide a reading tent or room and keep it supplied as regularly as possible under the circumstances with newspapers and current magazines. The instructor works as an ordinary laborer during the daytime, and in the evenings and whenever he and the men have a little time to spare he teaches them English or whatever they may wish to study. Most of the navies are Poles, Galicians, or come from one or other of the countries of Southern Europe. Of course they must start by learning to speak and read English. When they have mastered the language to a certain extent, they take up other subjects, geography, for instance, and hygiene. The instructor also gives them lectures on their political standing in this country and "puts them wise" as to their privileges and responsibilities as Canadian citizens.

"If they would only stay steadily at one camp during the course of the summer, each would have the rudiments of a very fair education by the end of the season, but a great number of them change about continually from camp to camp, and a good deal of the instructor's patient work seems to go for nothing. We know that it is no so, of course, because when a man has learned even one little fact he is that much advanced on the road of learning. Still, we hope that we shall one day have an instructor in every camp in Canada. The only barrier to it this season is simply the lack of funds. The men and their employers welcome the Reading Tent with gratitude, and there are always plenty of men willing to take the field, so that it is, as I said, simply a case of not being able to afford it for the present."

Rev. Mr. Joplin will address the Bridge St. League this evening at 8 o'clock.

Many an engagement has been broken thinking the other had money.

ANOTHER BELLEVILLE BOY PASSES ON

Edward Bennett Boselly Passes Away at Ottawa at the Ripe Age of 78

At Ottawa on Monday, April 20th, Edward Bennett Boselly died at the ripe age of 78. Deceased was born in Belleville on April 10th, 1836, the son of Edward Paul Boselly, one of the early settlers of Belleville. Both his father and mother, of U. E. Loyalist stock, married in Kingston and settled in Belleville. The mother was Miss Bennett of Wolf Island. Edward, the deceased, when a young man, located in Mount Forest, associating himself wih the Methodist Church, his intelligence and piety soon showing itself, and he was for very many years superintendent of the Sunday School, and was made a local preacher in connection with his church. He was in 1863 married to Miss Florinda Conklin, who was an occasional visitor in Belleville, but died about two years ago. Deceased was a member of the Masonic fraternity and United Workmen, a Liberal in politics, and whether serving the church, society or state, put his whole heart and energy in his work. Under the Laurier administration he was appointed to an office in the Department of the Interior, which he held actively until his death. His remains were taken to his old home in Mount Forest and deposited beside those of his wife and two children. He leaves to mourn, four children and two sisters. The children are: Rev. E. S. Boselly of Washington; Harry W. of Dakota; Miss Mary L. Boselly and Mrs. Alex. Hackett of Woodstock. The latter two were living in Belleville during a portion of last year. The surviving sisters are residents of Belleville—Mrs. A. Graham and Mrs. Francis Scantlebury.

BEGIN TO BE CARDINAL

Canadian Named For Elevation in Roman Catholic Church.

List of Churchmen Who Will Be Created Members of the Sacred College Does Not Contain Name of Mgr. Bruchesi, But Instead of It That of Archbishop of Quebec—New Cardinal Is 74 Years Old.

ROME, April 27.—Pope Pius yesterday decided to hold a consistory May 25 for the purpose of creating Cardinals. Among those who will be elevated to membership in the Sacred College are: Most Rev. Louis Nazaire Begin, Archbishop of Quebec; Monsignor Giuasola Menendez, Archbishop of Toledo, Spain; Monsignor Serafini, Assessor of the Congregation of the Holy Office; Monsignor J. Delachiesa, Archbishop of Bologne; Monsignor Czernoch, Archbishop of Strigonia; Monsignor Sevin, Archbishop of Lyons; Monsignor de Bettinger, Archbishop of Munich; Monsignor de Harmann, Archbishop of Cologne; Monsignor Piffl, Archbishop of Vienna; Monsignor Giustini, Secretary of the Congregation of the Sacraments; Monsignor Lega, Senior Judge of the Rota Tribunal; Monsignor Tecchi, Assessor of the Consistorial Congregation, and Abbot Gasquet, President of the English Benedictines.

The long-expected list of cardinals to be created at the consistory is causing some surprise, as they expected Monsignor Bruchesi, Archbishop of Montreal, to be included, while nobody thought Abbot Gasquet would receive the honor, although all agree he is most worthy. It is stated that the decision to hold the consistory was due chiefly to the insistence of Germany, which would otherwise cause a conclave without a representative of the Sacred College. However, evidently, Cardinals Gibbons, Farley and O'Connell knew the consistory would be at the end of May, as all had decided to be in Rome at that time.

The Most Rev. Louis Nazaire Begin was born at Levis, Que., in 1840. At one time he was principal of Laval Normal School, Quebec. From 1888-91 he was Bishop of Chicoutimi. From 1891 to 1898 he was coadjutor to Cardinal Taschereau, with the title of Archbishop of Cyrene. He was administrator of the archdiocese from 1894 to 1898, and was made Archbishop of Quebec April 12, 1898. He has traveled widely, and is the author of a number of religious and other books and pamphlets.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-west Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

Quebec Marriages.

The Province of Quebec is the most expensive place there is in which to be married by license. This is because the province puts a tax on marriage by license. Six dollars is drawn down every time a license is issued by the Government. The total cost is eight dollars. Two of these go to the issuer of the document. This money does not go into the general fund of the province, but is devoted to the higher Protestant educational institutions, and is placed at the disposal of the educational board. It is given in this way because Roman Catholics do not marry by license.

The tax amounts to many thousands of dollars every year. In one office alone in 1912 no less than 800 licenses were issued. Undoubtedly the total would be in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Tolls Fight Again This Week.

WASHINGTON, April 27. — The prediction was made yesterday by friends of the bill to repeal the exemption clause of the Panama Canal Act, that it will reach the floor of the Senate this week. The Senate committee on interoceanic canals, will continue its hearings on the measure until Tuesday or Wednesday, and then a report will be made without delay.

Senator Simmons, champion of the repeal bill on the committee, said last night that the hearings held made a good impression on the committee. He thinks the prospects for the passage of the bill are improving all the time.

Reports Capture of Briton.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Secretary Bryan said yesterday that he had notified British Ambassador Spring-Rice of the reported arrest of a British subject at Orizaba. He was one of twenty foreign railroad employes, nineteen of them Americans, who were reported arrested there. Mr. Bryan denied the report that these prisoners had been executed, and stated that the Brazilian consulate would be appealed to for their release.

Duke of Connaught Says Boxing Helps One To Control Temper.

MONTREAL, April 27.—A eulogy of the disciplinary effects of boxing was pronounced by the Duke of Connaught after an exhibition of sparring by the Griffintown Boys Club Friday night.

"Boxing," the duke told the boys, "teaches you not to lose your temper. A good smack in the face hurts, and it is well to learn to take one with a grin. It seems a very small thing, but in this world it is a very important thing that you should not take offence at anything."

Friday night the duke also opened an exhibition of Boy Scouts. The occasion was made noteworthy by the fact that Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught made her first public appearance since her serious illness.

And none less than $20.00.

This extraordinary offer embraces practically all of our last spring season's Suits and they have been marked at this extremely low price regardless of what they sold at last year. The collection includes such popular shades as blues, tans, greys, black and white stripes and black, in serges, diagonals and cheviots. Some are neatly trimmed, others plain tailored. The skirts have a slight fullness at the sides, but otherwise they reflect this season's style tendencies. The coats, although not cutaway, are very stylish.

Make it a point to see these in our Suit Department tomorrow as a sale such as this is seldom offered, especially this early in the season. As stated above these suits sold regularly at $20.00, $22.50 and $25.00, for only—

FRESH CRISIS COMING

Asquith Cabinet May Make Another Move in Ulster.

Successful Importation of Arms on Friday Is Occasion For a Hurried Conference of Premier Asquith and His Associates—Police Spies Are Active Throughout the North—Debate This Week.

LONDON, April 27.—The gun-running exploit of the Ulster Volunteers, resulting in receipt of 40,000 rifles, stirred the British Cabinet into sudden activity Saturday. Premier Asquith, who was on the way to his country residence for the week-end, was stopped by telegraph and returned to London immediately. On his arrival he conferred with Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, and other colleagues in the Cabinet. Major-Gen. Sir Cecil McCready of the War Office participated in the conference.

It is unlikely that one result will be a statement in Parliament that what has happened is the very thing the Government feared when they took steps to find out the possible action of the officers of the army if detailed to prevent such a rush-in of munitions of war or in preventing the seizure of the Government stores already located in Ulster.

The Times' Belfast correspondent says conviction is growing to-day that the authorities are again contemplating action against Ulster. Belfast is in the same condition of suppressed excitement which prevailed on March 18, when it became known the Government were about to concentrate military and naval forces.

Belfast Unionists say there is considerable activity among the police, and opinion is prevalent that they and not the troops will be "called upon to initiate the provocative action." Some confirmation of this is afforded by the repeated spying by the police near private houses throughout the whole of Ulster and renewed shadowing of prominent Unionists.

Although the motion has been modified to include the word "inaccuracy," which will give Mr. Austen Chamberlain opportunity to bring up the whole of the Irish issues, especially those as one Unionist puts it, which censors the Government's attempt to conceal the vital facts. More than sixty questions will be put to Mr. Asquith and Mr. Churchill during the two days' debate next week.

Questions will be asked about the personal assurance which Sir John French appended, exempting Curragh officers from fighting in Ulster, and about the reasons which led the Government to think that the safeguarding of stores had become necessary. One wants to know what Sir A. Paget did to carry out his instructions to guard the stores in the south of Ireland. Mr. Austen Chamberlain will submit the motion, and will be followed by Mr. Churchill on behalf of the Government. Mr. Bonar Law and Mr. Asquith will conclude the debate on Wednesday night.

The Standard (Unionist) remarks that there will no doubt be a demand from the radical benches that severe steps be taken, but the responsibility, especially in view of the warning of a month ago, is so appalling that it can scarcely be believed that the Prime Minister will sanction measures in the least degree likely to be effective. The police are obviously powerless to deal with a population of trained determined men, who will assuredly not submit to disarmament without a struggle. To attempt to use the military force for the purpose is only to precipitate calamities from which the country was providentially saved a month ago. Asquith has no longer the excuse which we take the liberty of calling a poor excuse, of being hustled into a reckless adventure by a cabal of hot-headed subordinates. He now knows the whole danger, and he has full power over the army. If he takes a false step the blood will be on his own head. It can only be hoped that even at the eleventh hour he will see the situation in its true gravity and act not as a party leader, but as a statesman.

MAJORITY OF CITY COUNCIL AWARD PAVING CONTRACT

Foley and Gleeson of Ottawa Win Out on Paving Contract--Public Works Committee in Session for Several Hours

An adjourned meeting of the City Council was held last night, or perhaps more correctly speaking, at an early hour this morning, as it was after the midnight hour when in reality it commenced its brief session.

Mayor Wills and all the members of the Council were in attendance.

Council met at 8 o'clock, and a motion prevailed that the Council go into Committee of Public Works. This motion prevailed, and the committee was in session until 10.55, when Council resumed, and a motion to extend the time for four hours prevailed and the Public Works committee resumed.

The Council met at 12.30, and the following recommendation from the committee was considered:

It was recommended that the tender of Foley & Gleason of Ottawa for the pavement on Front street and a portion of Bridge street be accepted at $2.38 per square yard.

On motion the report was received, and on motion that it be adopted, the yeas and nays were called for by Ald. Wallbridge, and resulted in 7 voting for its adoption and 3 against. The yeas and nays were as follows:

Yeas—Duckworth, O'Flynn, Panter, Platt, St. Charles, Smith and Woodley.

Nays—Mayor Wills, Aldermen McFee and Wallbridge.

CHOLERA BREAKS OUT IN MONCTON

But it is Merely a Type Prevalent Among Children in Summer

MONCTON N.B. April 27.—Something of a panic has been created in Dorchester and vicinity by an outbreak of cholera, which has so far caused one death, with eight or ten people ill with the malady. It was at first feared that it was Asiastic cholera, but at a consultation of nine doctors at Dorchester today it was decided that the disease was not Asiastic, but cholera of contagious type common among children in summer.

On April 15th a Scotchman and his family arrived at St. John on the steamer Letitia, and went to Rockland, near Dorchester, to work on the farm of a man named Norman McKelvae. Shortly after Fraser's arrival McKelvae's baby took it [illegible] died, and seven other children and three adults of the two families have since contracted the disease. Two of the children are not expected to live.

The provincial and county boards of health were notified, and a consultation of eight or nine doctors was held. Dr. Steeves, chairman of the provincial board of health, stated the disease was the cause of contagious cholera, but it was not Asiatic cholera as reported. Every precaution is being taken to prevent the spread of the contagion.

ELEVEN POUNDS BY PARCEL POST

OTTAWA, April 27.—The Post Office Department has issued a circular pointing out that from numerous enquiries received from the public on the subject of parcel post it would seem desirable to emphasize the fact that all restrictions as regards weight and delivery have been removed.

Parcel post packets may now be mailed up to the limit of weight of eleven pounds. It had been the intention to limit the weight of parcel post packages to six pounds during the organization period, but as the organization was quickly completed, heavier parcels have now been handled for some time it having been determined to give the public the full benefit of this. Parcel post packets may, therefore, be mailed up to the limit above stated.

The additional fee of five cents, which was at first charged on parcels mailed for local delivery in places where the letter carrier delivery is in operation, has also been abolished.

SCREAMING WOMEN TAKEN FROM WATER

Suffragists Attempt to Hold Boat Parade on Ornamental Lake

LONDON, April 27.—The suffragettes made an attempt to-day to hold a boat parade in the Serpentine in Hyde Park, but were balked by the authorities, who moored all the boats in midstream. The militants then sent three women swimmers to try to bring the boats to shore. One of the women scrambled into a boat and waved a flag. The second woman cut some of the moorings ropes, but both were seized by boatmen and handed over to the police. The third was dragged out of the water screeching at the top of her voice, while a thousand excited persons watched the struggle.

TRIO OF CAR THIEVES ARRESTED AT WINDSOR

WINDSOR, Ont., April 28.—(Special.)—As a result of several days of "watchful waiting" on the part of Grand Trunk special officers three young Windsor men—Charles Gall, John Carson and Gordon Scott—were arrested last night for looting freight cars in the local yards. In Police Court to-day the trio admitted their guilt and were remanded for sentence.

When the officers searched Carson's house they found a varied assortment of goods in the cellar, including a quarter of fresh beef, some sixty dozen eggs, and other supplies, all of them having been stolen from cars as they stood on the side tracks. It is believed other arrests will follow.

SOCIETY ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED TO-DAY

(Special to the Intelligencer)

NEW YORK, April 28.—Society to-day learned of the engagement of Junius Spencer Morgan, son of the present head of the house of Morgan and heir to the Morgan millions, to Miss Louise Converse, of Boston, daughter of Frederick S. Converse, composer.

MILITARY OPERATIONS CEASE FOR PRESENT AT VERA CRUZ

Only Fighting Reported is at Tampico, Where Rebels Made Onslaught on the Defences

VERA CRUZ, April 28.—Special—Military operations between the United States and Mexico hang suspended tonight pending the verdict for war and peace from the two capitals.

Brigadier-General Funston and his fifth brigade of 4,500 men in the first fleet of transports lay somewhere out at sea under the convoy of the battleships Vermont and the Louisanna.

Admiral Badger's great fleet in the harbor swings idly at anchor. Admiral Fletcher's sailors and marines ashore have turned themselves into municipal employes in the government of the city, which is under martial law.

Reports from nearby Federal camps are similar. General Maas, the Mexican commander, and his small force hold the railroad west of Tejeira, spread out along its right of way, but now inactive. General Rubio Navarette, who has the detail to blow up bridges and tunnels if trouble starts anew, has his men stationed at strategic points along the line, but the dynamite is not yet in place.

The only fighting reported is by Admiral Mayo at Tampico. In a wireless message to Admiral Badger today he said the Constitutionalists have made a desperate onslaught on the Federal defences of the city, but that no Americans are in the danger zone. A British cruiser has taken off 1,111 Americans, more are aboard the Dolphin and Des Moines, with room for still more on the North Dakota, which arrived today.

There are still many Americans out in the oil fields to the north-east of the city, but it is hoped that they can get through the lines in safety. No anti-American demonstrations are reported anywhere.

The American flag went up formally over Vera Cruz this afternoon with appropriate ceremonies. The bands played, the marines stood with present arms, and the officers off duty at attention. It will require ceremonies

PATROL BOAT TO HUNT ST. CLAIR RIVER PIRATES

Sarnia, Ont., April 28—Special—Following the activities of river pirates along the St. Clair River in this vicinity, the Cleo, the Michigan patrol boat No. 2, arrived at Port Huron on Friday. For some time past petty and sometimes serious depredations have been going on along the river fronts of both there and Sarnia. Owners of small pleasure craft suffered the most at the hands of the thieves, but large vessels have also been victimized. The thieves have thus far escaped detection, but with the arrival of the patrol boat it is expected that the guilty parties will be taken into custody. The vessel is at present tied up in Black River, above the Molloy coal docks.

MEXICO CITY PLOT TO OUST HUERTA

VERA CURZ, April 28.—Victoriano Huerta will voluntarily abdicate or will be forced out with violence within a few days, according to American refugees who arrived on a special train from the capital this afternoon.

Frederico Gamboa, former Minister of Foreign Affairs once Governor of Yucatan, and candidate of the Catholic party at Huerta's election is named as the man to supplant him.

According to the refugees, anti-Huerta sentiment has so crystallized at the capital that on Saturday the conspirators made an attempt to oust the dictator, but failed. They do not go into details, and admit they have only a rumor of it. They are certain, however, that Huerta is becoming more and more unpopular, because the better class of Mexicans are finding out that the Administation has deliberately deceived them in regard to the action of the United States.

The truth about Vera Cruz has reached the capital and has aided in bringing out a reversal of sentiment, or, at least an abatement of the patriotic frenzy.

SPANKED TILL HE SALUTED THE FLAG

NEW YORK, April 27.—The baseball field at Seton Hall, South Orange, a school in which are probably more Spanish-speaking students than in any other part of the United States was the scene of war the other day. The weapons were barrel staves and the enemy was John Duque, the only one of the fifteen Mexican students who refused to salute the American flag.

Young Duque was paddled by the American students until he had climbed out of their reach on the flag pole, at the top of which floated the flag. Then he doffed his cap and the war was over.

A RUMOR ABOUT "PANCHO" VILLA

BALTIMORE, April 28.—That "Pancho" Villa, leader of the rebel forces in northern Mexico, is a negro Marylander, and was sergeant in the Tenth U. S. Cavalry until fifteen years ago, when his enlistment expired, was the declaration made here today.

FIFTEEN PERISH IN EXPLOSION AT SEA.

They will hold a dinner at the Frontenac Club Tuesday night and attend convocation in a body on Wednesday. The following have been elected as members of Queen's University Council: Mr. J. M. Gray, Toronto; Major C. F. Hamilton, Ottawa; Mr. E. T. Corkill, Toronto. Mr. W. F. Nickle, M.P., was elected as representative of board of trustees of University for the next three years.

LONG TRIP AFTER ALLEGED BIGAMIST

Toronto Detective Leaves for Sydney, N. S., to Bring Back to Toronto

TORONTO, April 28.—Detective Archibald left yesterday for Sydney, N.S. for Edward Tilson, who is under arrest there on charges of bigamy and perjury.

Two months ago Inspector Gregory received a letter from the man's wife, who is living in England. She stated that her husband had left her three years ago to come to Canada. For some months she received letters from him, but they ceased at the beginning of the year.

The man was located at a hotel, where he was employed as a cook. The wife communicated with, and she asked the inspector to take action against her husband on a charge of non-support. When officers were sent to arrest him they found he had left the city.

He was traced to Montreal, and it was learned that a woman was travelling with him. Investigations showed that the day before he left Toronto he had married her. From Montreal he went to Halifax and then to Sydney, where he was arrested.

EXEMPTION LAW WILL LEAD TO WAR

Ex-Judge Burke Says Disgrace Can Only be Wiped out on Battlefield

WASHINGTON, April 27.—A declaration that the repeal of the Panama Tolls Exemption law will eventually lead to war between the United States and Britain was made to the Senate Committee by ex-Judge Thos. Burke, trustee of the Carnegie endowment for international peace.

Judge Burke is a delegate to The Hague and general counsel of the Great Northern Railway. He formerly was Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Washington.

In making this statement the former justice said he was amazed at the position taken by Andrew Carnegie and Senator Root, both his close personal friends.

"It is the irony of fate," he said "that the great advocates of peace are advocating what will eventually produce war. If you pass this repeal measure, you will take a step that is irrevocable. You will put upon the country a burden of disgrace the people will never bear; you will establish a policy which can only be wiped out on the battlefield."

JUMPS TO DEATH OVER HIGH BRIDGE

MONTREAL, April 27.—In a moment of despondency, superinduced by prolonged illness, Edmond Gabriel, a laborer, 38 years of age, threw himself over a bridge at Pont au Viau yesterday morning to the rocks thirty feet below, dying almost instantly. His dead body was found by two young men who were climbing around the rocks on the dry bottom of the river. They informed the police, who took charge of the body. Without calling a jury Deputy Coroner Biron disposed of the case as accidental in view of the circumstances of the man's ill health.

DROPS DEAD ON ANNIVERSARY DAY

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 27.—Rev. Father Francis Best, of Englewood, N.J. General Superior of the Carmelite Order of the United States and Canada, dropped dead yesterday as he was about to enter the Holy Trinity Church to attend the silver anniversary and jubilee of his ordination.

Father Best, who had been ill for some time, arrived here last night to participate in the celebration.

He was 52 years of age.

STRAINED CONDITIONS PREVAIL IN ULSTER

(Special to the Intelligencer)

BELFAST, April 28.—Belfast, and indeed the whole of Ulster, is seething with Unionist activity almost beyond belief. Not only the public service is honeycombed by Carsonism, but there is reason to believe that the telephone and telegraph lines are continually being tapped by the Volunteers. Their insulting of Larne during the gun-running is only an example of what occurs daily. Messages of Government servants, even in code, are tapped and deciphered. The Unionists themselves depend entirely on despatch riders and signalers to convey important messages.

ADMIRAL STOKES DIES IN IRELAND

LONDON, April 27.—Much sympathy has been awakened in Anglo-Canadian circles in the sudden death yesterday in Queenstown, from acute pneumonia, of Vice-Admiral Robert Henry Simpson Stokes, senior officer of the Coast of Ireland squadron aged 59.

Vice-Admiral Stokes, who only took up his command on Tuesday, married in 1882, Maude, the only daughter of I. Simpson, of Kingston, Ontario. His mother, who is at Queenstown, was the daughter of the late John Simpson, of Ontario.

MADE A LONG TRIP ON BACK OF ENGINE

TORONTO, April 27.—After travelling widely through the United States on a "hobo" ticket and never getting caught, Henry St. John succumbed to the vigilance of the Grand Trunk constable. In the police court today he pleaded guilty to riding on the back of an engine from Montreal to Toronto. He declared that ridin' on the Grand Trunk was very uncomfortable. He was in search of work, he alleged.

Magistrate Ellis was impressed by the accomplishment of the accused, but fined him $5 and costs or 30 days in jail. St. John will rest up for a month after his prolonged travelling.

SIDNEY CROSSING.

The seeding is very backward this year; the land is working up very loose and quite a lot of grain has been put in already. Prospects are favorable for a good crop. Fall wheat and meadows are looking fine. Cows have wintered well and as pastures promises good, a good yield of milk is expected. Nearly all the farmers here have fattened or are raising their calves. Apples, pears and small fruit generally, are in good shape; trees have been well pruned, and as they are well budded prospects are bright for a good crop.

Mr. Sketch of Campbellford, organizer for the Royal Templers of Temperance, has been here working for Bayside Council during the past week. They report about sixty members.

Mrs. H. Martin, Trenton, is very low with pneumonia.

Quarterly services will be conducted by Rev. E. E. Howard at Centenary, and Rev. E. E. Cook at Aikens on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Westover have settled in their new home.

Mr. C. Saylor, who has been very ill, is improving.

BOOSTER PERIOD CLOSES WEDNESDAY NIGHT AT TEN

All Subscriptions Must be in This Office or Mailed Before That Hour---Turn in Your Subs Now and Avoid Rush--Subscriptions Count Most Now--Secure Every One Possible While Offer is on

To-morrow night (Wednesday) promptly at 10 p. m., the "Booster" Period in The Intelligencer's great contest will cease. All subscriptions must be in this office or mailed by that time in order to count on this offer. Candidates should turn in their subscriptions early and avoid the rush at the last minute. From the present indications there will be an avalanche of subscriptions reported and the candidates that come first will not have to delay in reporting their subscriptions.

Candidates do not let a single subscription escape you that is possible to secure to-day and tomorrow. You are assured that never again during the contest will the subscriptions count as many votes as they will up to the close of this offer on Wednesday, April 29th. So there is no reason to hesitate; just keep going now while you can secure the Big Votes and at the close of the contest you will have no cause for regret.

Each and every yearly subscription that you can secure on this offer will count you 50,000 votes. It is the votes that will win the prizes and the candidates who do the best work on this offer and secure the largest number of subscriptions will have a good start and stand a good chance of landing in the front seat of the McLaughlin touring car. Don't stop. Keeping everlastingly at it will bring success.

Contest Ginger

Perhaps you think that because there are still a few weeks remaining of the contest you have plenty of time and you can afford to take a little rest. This is a mistake.

The days pass very quickly. "The bird of the time has but little way to flutter and the bird is on the wing". You should not be on some restful twig. There will be time to rest when you have won the prize of your choice.

Until then let your motto be: Haste, not waste. Do not waste a minute and you will not lose a prize.

There are plenty of subscriptions to be had if you will only go after them.

Every one you ever knew, every one you know now, every one you may know in the future, are the ones you should ask for a subscription in your favor. Keep your friends in mind that the big vote offer ends Wednesday, April 29th.

Better take a few lessons in running a car right now so as to be an experienced chauffeur when you win the McLaughlin Buick.

Now is the time to go out after those subscriptions that have been promised you.

There is no way of telling who will be in the lead after the big vote, but it is safe to predict that it will be someone who is not wasting time at this particular minute.

Open Evenings

The contest department is open each evening from 7 to 8 o'clock.

RE STREET PAVING

Belleville, April 28th, 1914.

Dr. E. O. Platt, Chairman of Board of Works, Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir.—On account of sewers and other underground work to be done on Front and Bridge streets, we find that it will be some little time before we can start the paving work on said streets, contract for which was awarded us last night.

As the mud on these streets has gotten so deep as to become an annoyance to the merchants and pedestrians in general, we have arranged to start a gang within the next day or two cleaning up said mud, and will appreciate any assistance you can give us to expedite this work.

We trust our action will meet with the approval of your Board and relieve the annoyance until we are ready to start paving.

Yours very truly,
FOLEY & GLEESON,
By J. F. Driscoll.

DIED AT MATTAWA

After a great many years of suffering borne with great patience, death claimed a former well known resident of Stoco and Tweed, in the person of Mrs. W. A. Canniff, who died on Saturday evening at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Floyd, Mattawa. Deceased was well and favorably known to a great many in this district, who will regret to hear of her demise. The remains will arrive in Tweed to-day where interment will take place.

RECOMMENDATIONS BY PUBLIC WORKS COM.

At the meeting of the Public Works committee last evening the following recommendations were adopted, but were laid over until the regular meeting of the Council on Monday next for endorsation:

It was recommended that all dirt taken from Mill street between the station and the upper bridge, if not sold, be dumped on the city school lot on Station Road.

It was recommended that the prayer of the petition from property owners on Charles street, asking for a crossing on that street between Dundas and Bridge street be granted. It was recommended that the request of R. O. Stewart, asking for the privilege of extending a verandah out 18 inches on the boulevard in front of his property on Moira street be referred to the street surveyor and city engineer to report upon.

BROKE INTO MILITARY STORES

KINGSTON April 27.—Some time Saturday night a thief broke into the Ordnance Corps and stole a quantity of the stores. Although a complete inventory of the stock has not been made, it is understood that about $20 worth of goods have been stolen, consisting principally of military boots. Rifles and other valuable stores were in the building, but it is not known yet, whether or not any of these have been taken.

SHIPBUILDERS MERGE

KINGSTON, Ont., April 27.—It is intimated that the Vickers Maxim Company interested in shipworks in Montreal, and associated with a large English concern, have secured control of the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co. and Kingston Shipbuilding Co. This concern has also considerable stock in Canada Steamship Lines and may work in connection with that Navigation Company. Interests at Kingston may be largely increased.

Thin People Can Increase Weight

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little Sargel with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weight and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it turns the fats sugars and starches of what you have eaten, into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive. J. S. McKeown's Drug Store and other leading druggists in Belleville and vicinity sell it in large boxes—forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

GRAND TRUNK NEWS BUREAU

LAID LAST MILE OF STEEL ON G.T.P. IN RECORD TIME.

Mr. W. P. Hinton, Asst. Passenger Traffic Manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, has reached Winnipeg after witnessing the driving of the last spike on the G.T.P. at Nechako Crossing. For intensity of interest Mr. Hinton states that he has viewed no event to compare with that of laying the last mile of steel on the most modern of transcontinental railroads.

"Tuesday, April 8th at 11 o'clock was appointed for the laying of the last mile of steel," he writes, "the first gang to reach the centre post was to receive all honors. It was 12.50, however, before the crews were ready and in view of 1,500 people, who exhibited the greatest excitement, the record breaking contest began. The track laying crew from the east won out, however, and the point they stopped at was immediately east of the centre post so as to give the moving picture machines a chance to obtain the best record. The approximate half mile was laid in 28 minutes. Final rails were cut and the last one laid in place at 1.32 p.m. Each of the General Superintendents drove a spike, the Division Superintendents each one, and the Chief Engineer the final spike. The foremen of the track laying crews were presented with a gold watch and chain as a memento of their hard work and in recognition of the fact that they had jointly laid 143 miles of steel since the first of January; a magnificent record during the winter months and one which the President feels has never been equalled.

GRAND TRUNK APPOINTMENTS

A circular issued from the office of Mr. H. C. Martin, General Freight Agent and approved by Mr. C. E. Dewey, Freight Traffic Manager, announces the appointment of Mr. Vivian G. Snell to be Commercial Agent of the Grand Trunk Railway System at Moncton, N. B. Mr. Snell is well known among the shippers of merchandise in Montreal. He was soliciting Freight Agent for the Grand Trunk from 1906 to July last when he became City Freight Agent. He entered the Grand Trunk's service in 1895 as call boy, became telegraph operator at Bonaventure Station and was afterwards employed in the local freight offices and as agent in Montreal for the National Despatch—Great Eastern Line (Central Vermont Route.) Mr. Snell succeeds at Moncton Mr. W. J. P. McGregor who has accepted service with the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway as Division Freight Agent at Edmonton.

HAS BELLEVILLE MONEY TO BURN?

Contract Awarded to the Highest Bidder

No. 1. Our Company tendered on a Bitulithic pavement on the present macadam foundation complete with a ten year guarantee, $1.93 per yard.
No. 2. Our Company tendered on an Asphalt Concrete pavement on a 5 inch concrete foundation and 3 inch wearing surface with a 10 years guarantee at $2.26 per yard.
No. 3. Council awarded the contract to Foley and Gleason for an Asphalt Concrete pavement on a 5 inch concrete foundation and 3 inch wearing surface at $2.38 per yard.

TENDER No. 1 would if accepted save the citizens and tax payers 45c. per yard or on 19,000 yards, the amount to be laid, the sum of $8,550.00, and in addition give to the citizens the best pavement to be had.

OUR TENDER No. 2 would give exactly what Foley & Gleason's tender offered except that we would use California Asphalt (which the City of Toronto says is the best they have used for 12 years) and have saved the citizens $2,280.00.

Should not the citizens keep this money instead of handing it to a contractor for no service rendered?

Ten years ago we paved Palmerston Ave., Toronto, with Bitulithic on Macadam foundation, and today, with more traffic than your main street carries, it is in perfect condition. Twelve years ago we laid Spadina Avenue, Toronto, with "Acme" California Asphalt and today with no repairs it is without question the best asphalt in the city.

Has Belleville treated us fairly? We have had twenty-five years experience in the street paving business. We tendered for a better brand of asphalt than our competitors, we gave the same guarantee, we were low bidders, and without offering any reasons, the Council spend several thousand dollars more to hand it to our competitors. WHY?

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

"THE GOLDEN AGE"

To anyone who appreciates good music, bright comedy, and clever stage business, a treat is in store at Griffin's, May 7th and 8th, when the production of J. Nevin Doyle's tuneful and mirthful opera bouffe "The Golden Age", with the best talent of Belleville doing itself proud. The special scenery for the production is being rushed to completion, and the costumes, from McKenna Costumer, Toronto, will be here in a few days. It is also being arranged to secure the electrical effects from the Royal Alexandra theatre Toronto.

It would be advisable to secure seats well in advance, as there promises to be a scarcity of seats after the plan opens, for the "Golden Age" is really the biggest thing the talent of Belleville has ever attempted, and its success is assured.

A NOTED ACTOR

Editor Belleville Intelligencer.

Dear Sir,—I notice McKee Rankin is dead, after sixty years of life on the stage. McKee Rankin gave a splendid performance many years ago of "The Danites." This play was not his own composition, but he amassed a fortune by its production. The play described "The destroying angels" of the Mormons. These men, disguised, perpetrated frightful crimes at the instigation of the Mormon Council, and the play portrays the dangers run and persecutions endured by a girl who was commanded to marry a Mormon against her will. Mrs. Rankin, a pretty young woman, was the heroine, and Rankin, as Sandy McGee, was the hero. Rankin was the only Canadian actor who achieved success in melodrama in Canada. His father was very prominent in business and political matters, and was so annoyed at his son for going on the stage that he cut him off from his inheritance. A man named Townsend played Shakesperean characters here, several times. He was a fine actor, tall and symmetrical. His support was very poor. I remember him playing "Richard the Third." He hired several young fellows to play drums and simulate the approach of an army at the moment when Richard awakes from his slumber, and calls out, "Give me another horse! Have mercy, Jesu! Soft, I did but dream." The drummers were engrossed by the play and forgot to drum. The audience was startled by King Richard shouting out, "Play up, damn you!" You can imagine the fun of the whole thing. Poor Townsend never appeared here again. "Nell Gwynne," Charles II's mistress, and about whom he said on his dying bed, "Don't let poor Nelly starve," was admirably presented by a young American artist. "Charlie's Aunt" at its first representation, was played by the celebrated English comedian who produced it in London, and who quite recently died. For real rollicking fun, no farce has given greater enjoyment. "The Lights of London" was a good play, and gave glimpses of London life. "The Silver King" came here twice and gave great pleasure. I saw the elder Sothern in the National Theatre in London in the play of "David Garrick, or Dundreary Married and Done For." Buckstone was in the caste. The audience shouted for Buckstone, and Sothern apologized for his non-appearance by saying "I am afraid you will have to excuse Mr. Buckstone, as at this moment the only garment he has on is one stocking." Mr. Reeves was to follow Sothern, but sent word that he was ill. The audience threatened to wreck the house, and Sothern had to assure the audience that Mr. Reeves was really ill, and that rather than disappoint them, he, Mr. Sothern, would play an engagement for two weeks.

In Edinburg I attended the play of "Rob Roy," and in this play Mr. Reeves, who was a member of the troupe, sang "M Pretty Jane," the song which made him famous the world over. Sir Henry Irving's "Faust" and "Much Ado About Nothing," were the only plays in which I saw both Sir Henry and Ellen Terry. J. L. Toole was starring in London in "Oliver Twist." I recently saw "Oliver Twist" played by the "Marks Brothers." I noticed a slight difference between their performance and the magnificent presentation in London. Miss Anglin at an early age exhibited a marked predilection for the stage. Her father, the Queen's printer, was very strict, and was horrified at the avowed determination of his daughter to become an actress. To keep her out of temptation, Margaret was sent to New York with strict injunctions that she was not to be allowed to recite or engage in any dramatic representation whatever. Unknown to her teachers she took lessons in elocution, and leaving the school, took part in a public performance in which she won great praise. Mr. and Mrs. Anglin hurried to New York and were prevailed upon to witness her performance. They were so delighted with it that they withdrew their objections. I have seen Margaret Anglin with Henry Miller in "The Great Divide" and in "The Awakening of Helena Ritchie." I have seen Sir Johnston Forbes Robertson in "Passing of the Third Floor Back," "Hamlet" and "Merchant of Venice. The "Passing of the Third Floor Back" produced a most wonderful effect upon the audience. There is little that is attractive in scenery or the play. The stage setting is poor and tawdry, a room such as can be seen in any second class boarding house. The boarders are, a Jew, anxious for bargains, an old maid soured with the world and delighting ing scandal, a slum maid, a young artist, a retired military officer and his wife—poor, proud and disagreeable, and old lady who is forever talking about the fine house at which she had been a guest—everything depressing, nothing elevating. Into this unsavory and unpleasant family enters Robertson, who engages a room on the third floor, and a back room at that. Robertson discovers the foibles and weaknesses of his fellow boarders and he gradually works upon each of them to bring out the very best which is in them. He shows how contemptible is slander, what a great happiness it is to be kind and good, honest and charitable. Oh, the beauty of his wonderful voice, the almost angelic expression upon his countenance, as he pleaded with these people, and the marvellous effect upon them. Women were crying, great strong men bowed their heads and wept convulsively. The beautiful face, so kind, with such a pure, sweet expression, won all hearts, and every one felt as if a great apostle of peace, love and goodness had appeared in their midst.

Yours truly,
JOHN J. B. FLINT.

LOCAL BASEBALL FOR THIS YEAR

Baseball in Belleville this year should be on a higher plane than ever before, as with two teams already organied, the Grand Trunks and the Ontarios, it should be a record year. With the Canadian Steel Team and the Coleman Flats Team, who have yet to be heard from a good City League could be formed. There is enough material for half a dozen teams in the city, and so let our sportsmen get busy and make it a success. If there is any room for more teams the Printers Baseball Team would no doubt enter the League.

THORPE WILL JOIN THE LEAFS

TORONTO, April 27.—Jim Thorpe, the big Indian athlete and promising baseball prospect will probably join the Leafs before they finish up with the Skeeters and Newark clubs. Waivers, according to reports, have been received from all the major league clubs, and now it is only a matter of arranging terms. He is a right-hand batsman, and will be used for utility outfield purposes and as a substitute first-baseman. The Leafs' outfield is entirely composed of left-hand hitters, and when Hearne is in the game the club has six batters who swing from the wrong side. This is the real weakness of the team and a defect that must be remedied at once in view of the fact that every team in the league has one or two southpaw pitchers. Baltimore has no less than four, Ru., Danforth, Morrisette and Russell.

CANADIAN LEAGUE ADVANCE

TORONTO, April 27.—President Fitzgerald of the Canadian League this morning received word from Secretary Farrell of the National Baseball Association controlling all minor leagues that the Canadian League had been raised to Class B. The Canadian League has been applying for three months for this rating. Twice the National Association refused it, but an appeal to the National Commission backed by the good offices of President Ed. Barrow of the International League and President McCaffery of the Toronto ball club granting the rating.

It stands for this season only with the right to ask for its permanency at the New York State League. All major league drafts are $1,200 a man instead of $750 last year and drafts by class AA, $750 instead of $500. The salary limit is raised from $1,400 to $2,500. annual meeting of the National Association at Omaha next fall.

Class B. rating is the same as that of

ORIOLES MUST QUIT IF THEY DO NOT DRAW WHEN FEDS ON TOUR

BALTIMORE, Md., April 27.—Now the Baltimore Federals have left on their first western trip, the coming week will be a crucial one for Manager Dunn of the Orioles. The Federals outdrew his club the past week 100 to 1, and, beginning today he will have full sway. He is wondering what his attendance figures will be.

If they continue to remain around the 100 or 200 mark each day, Dunn intends to fight at once for the International to be recognized for the removal of the draft rule. If this fails, Dunn cannot possibly stand the small receipts and may move to another city, probably Washington or Cincinnati.

In three games last week the Orioles drew less than four hundred spectators, an average of less than 135 per game. The Baltimore Internationals are recognized on paper, as the best team in the league, at that.

An easy name to remember. A hard tea to forget.

STANDING OF BASEBALL BATTERS

Chicago, April 27.—Leading batters in the major leagues hit the ball at a rate of better than .500, according to averages published here today, and including the games played up to Saturday. The leading hitters include, in most cases, the men famous for their stick work, but some of the regular tars are far behind others not heretofore especially noted for their hitting ability. Detroit is leading the American League in hitting with a club percentage of .272, and New York is next with .269. Crawford is doing the best work for Detroit with an average of .500, while Cobb is hitting at .321 and ranks tenth.

The first ten batters in the American league are:—Williams, St. Louis, .522; Collins Chicago, .519; Crawford, Detroit, .500; Jackson, Cleveland, .390; C. Walker St. Louis, .370; Lelivelt, Cleveland, .350; Blackburn, Chicago, .333; McInnis, Philadelphia, .333; Jonnstone, Cleveland, .323; Cobb Detroit, .321.

Sherwood Magee of Philadelphia leads the National League and his percentage of .570 is keeping the Philadelphia team in front with an average of .316. Brooklyn being next with .286. The next nine batters are:—Gowdy, Boston, .538; Phelan, Chicago, .500; Gibson, Pittsburg, .429; Lobert, Philadelphia, .412; Yingling, Cincinnati, .400; Miller, Brooklyn, .400; Killifer, Philadelphia, .385; Daubert, Brooklyn, .385; Dalton, Brooklyn, .376

Vincent Campbell, Indianapolis is ahead in the Federal League with .613, five hits in one day helping his average. The next nine are:—Simon, St. Louis, .545; Murphy, Brooklyn, .500; Russell, Baltimore, .500; Crandall, St. Louis, .429 H. Millen, St. Louis, .423; E. S. Mond, Indianapolis, .417; Hanford, Buffalo, .412 Swacina, Baltimore, .400; Stovall, Kansas City, .389. The St. Louis team is leading the league in club percentage with .291 and Brooklyn is next with .286.

LINERS

Heinie Zimmerman was asked if he would consider an offer from the Feds. "I should say not," Zimmerman replied. "Go out and play in Kansas City? Not on your life!" Kansas City should worry, but probably won't.

The Pittsburg Pirates have been experimenting with "Ham" Hyatt as catcher. If by any stroke of fortune Hyatt can be used behind the bat powerful batting strength will be added to an already promising combination.

Pitcher Joe Bosk of Utica wears a headgear with a pad on one side as a protection while he is batting. Bosk was the vicitm of a bean ball in 1911, and he doesn't want to run any chances of having the same thing happen again.

McGraw not only sets the pace in the National League but in diamond costuming. The Giants blossomed out in stripes and other club sadopted the fashion. Same is true of collarless shirts and mackinaws. A case of following suit as it were.

Germany Schaefer and Nick Altrock, baseball's foremost comedians, who are gain heading Clark Griffith's vaudeville bill, have some important stuff in their act this year, which is "getting over" along with the other numbers from last season's program.

The acquisition of Frank Truesdale should strengthen the New York appreciably. The one one weak spot in the Chance machine has been at second base although Roy Hartzell has been playing the same steady dependable game there that has always been characteristic of him. The coming of Truesdale permits the use of Hartzell as a general utility man, a role that Chance has been planning for him for some time.

Bill Clymer of Buffalo must be fairly well fixed in infield material, or he would not have let Truesdale get away. In Gilhooley he gets a wonderful outfielder. It was thought for some time that the former Royal was a fixture in the New York outer defence, but the remarkable work of Holden, Cook and Channel changed the situation. Of course Jimmy Walsh was slated for the left field job the moment he was obtained from the Athletics.

BASKETBALL

BELLEVILLE WINS FAST GAME

Last Saturday the basketball team of St. Lukes S.S. Kingston, came here to play a game with the Bridge St. S.S. team with the result that the Belleville boys won by a score of 56 to 36. That this sport is becoming very popular was shown by the large numbers that turned out to see Saturday's game.

Mr. P. Pitney, as referee, started the game at 8.30 o'clock. At the outset Belleville had it all over Kingston, scoring six or seven baskets in as many minutes. Kingston changed their men around and it at once made a difference, although Bellevile still held the advantage. At half-time the score was 33-10 in favor of Belleville.

In the 2nd half the Kingstons changed positions again. The effect of this showed at once in their playing, and for a while they had the Belleville boys on the run scoring basket after basket. The Bridge St. team having been under the impression that the game was cinched, now woke up and to the end of the game held their own, winning by superior combination and the ability to score on long shooting.

After the game the teams partook of a supper at the Y.M.C.A. restaurant.

J. Marshall and P. Bell, players on the Kingston team are both former Belleville boys. A return game will be played in Kingston next week. This makes seven straight wins for the Belleville boys.

HIS ASHES ON THE TURF

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 27.—Friends of George W. St. Clair, who had driven to victory in races many of the world's most famous harness horses, have agreed to comply with his dying request that his body be cremated and that the ashes be scattered over the Lexington driving park.

John F. Madden, Michael Bowerman and John Splan, horse owners and lifelong friends, shipped the body to the Cincinnati crematory Saturday, and after receiving the ashes will carry out St. Clair's wishes to the latter.

TO SUPPRESS MILITANT PAPER

LONDON, April 27.—(Special.)—It is understood that another attempt is to be made to put an end to the Suffragette, the organ of the militants. The plague of incendiarism all over the country has caused such an outcry that Home Secretary McKenna will be compelled to attempt another repressive move. The Suffragette has of late been carefully edited, and it will not be easy to point to a direct incitement to arson, but articles dealing with this work of the militants and approving all that has been done appear in every issue. The current number gives eulogistic reports of various fires under such headlines as "The War in Ulster," "Three Outbreaks of Fire," and "Reply to Carson's Betrayal of Irish Women." Whether or not Home Secretary McKenna's move, if he attempts one, will prove less abortive than his former ones, he can no longer maintain, as he did recently, that the authorities have the militants well in hand They are apparently more active and more determined than ever in their policy of destruction.

To give your hair that gloss and lustre and wavy silky-softness, use Harmony Haid Beautifier. It takes away the dull deal look of the hair, and makes it bright—turns the stringiness into fluffiness—overcomes the oily odors and leaves a sweet, true-rose fragrance—makes the hair easier to put and neatly and easier to keep in place. It is just exactly what it is named—a hair beautifier, and whether your hair is ugly now or beautiful, it will improve its appearance. You'll be delighted with the results. FREE FOOD ABANDONED

The long waited and much talked of Liberal fiscal policy has been announced after many and frequent conferences between the fiscal and high protection wings of the party. As a result, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, last week, moved an amendment to the budget embodying the new fiscal policy of the party. Free food, as well as an increase in the British preference, are not contained in the Liberal platform. The policy consists of free wheat and wheat products, and free agricultural implements, with "with considerate removal of taxation as a means of alleviating the high cost of living," whatever that means.

The Liberal fiscal policy is to be found in the following amendment, which Sir Wilfrid moved:—

"That this House is of the opinion that in view of the prevailing economic conditions of the country, it is advisable to place wheat, wheat products and agricultural implements on the free list, and that without doing injustice to any class steps should be taken to alleviate the high cost of living by considerate removal of taxation."

This amendment was defeated by 88 to 46, a Government majority of 42, a particularly heavy majority.

Free wheat, wheat products and free agricultural implements are specific. But the third plank is a clever and ingenious attempt to word a policy which can satisfy both ultra-free traders and high protectionists. It can be interpreted in any way or in any light; it can be made a rallying cry for Dr. Clark in the West and Mr. E. M. Macdonald in the East.

The Minister of Trade and Commerce, replying to the Opposition leader, in that extremely searching way he has, showed in one sentence the weakness of the Liberal pronouncement.

"It is a political and party policy," declared the speaker. "It is not a policy for the country. It is a policy not based on the needs of the country at large, but an attempt to combine the diverse views of his party upon one policy."

Quite naturally he twitted Sir Wilfrid Laurier on the abandonment of "free food," while there were loud cries from the Government benches of "Where is free food?" when the Opposition leader moved his amendment. It was evidently a sore point, and Sir Wilfrid took the jibing none too pleasantly.

"My right honorable friend," said the speaker, "is not so courageous today as he was at Hamilton. Why? Is the principle any less clear than it was in Hamilton four months ago? Are food prices any lower today than they were in Hamilton four months ago? Is the condition of the householder and housekeeper any different from what it was then? These were the considerations which weighed with my right honorable friend then; and when he had sifted out the matter, he came to the conclusion that there must be relief, that relief was possible in one way and one way only—give them cheaper food. How was this to be done? Take the tariff off food products and let the people have their food free."

Then, with a flash of that old-time biting sarcasm, he forcibly drove home:

"Where is he today? And why is he on more backward ground today than he was three months ago? He has no answer but the politician's answer. The men behind him, and the men from whom he expected support have told him 'wrong again, right about face.' And he has made the right about face. There is the courageous, heroic leader of reform. Convinced by logic and the experience of thirty years as to what he ought to do, yet he snuffs himself out."

LAURIER'S RELICS

This is a nice, flippant way, says the Toronto Telegram, for a good Grit paper like the Guelph Mercury to refer to a fleet which, when it first smote the eyes of Canadians, was referred to as "the nucleus of a navy which will make Canada respected among naval powers," and which caused Sir Wilfrid Laurier to appear, when viewed through Grit spectacles, about three sizes bigger than Christopher Columbus:

"Mr. Cockshutt, of Brantford, asked in the Dominion House what action Canada would take to safeguard Canadian interests in Mexico. We've been waiting for some joker to suggest that the Niobe and the Rainbow be dusted up and sent off to the trouble factory."

THREE FAMOUS SCIENTISTS

Dr. Andrew Wilson, Dr. Gordon Stables and Dr. Lascelles Scott, the famous English analyst, have all personally tried Zam-Buk and expressed themselves convinced of its great healing value.

Mrs. St. Denis, of Thompson St., Weston, Winnipeg, suffered long with eczema; and finally her doctor said only Zam-Buk could cure her—another fine tribute of a scientific man to this great herbal healer.

Mrs. St. Denis says: "The eczema broke out on my nose and one side of my face. I could get no sleep because of the irritation and pain, and my face was in such a shocking condition that for two months I did not go out of the house. I applied remedies and my doctor treated me, but without effect, until one day he said that the only thing which would be likely to cure me was Zam-Buk. I procured a supply and to cut a long story short, in a few weeks Zam-Buk cured me completely, leaving no scars."

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for cuts, scalds, burns, eczema, scalp sores, ulceration, inflammation, piles, etc.; also as an embrocation for rheumatism, sprains and sciatica. All druggists and stores at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful substitutes.

POLITICAL PARAGRAPHS

It would not be exactly polite to the bolting Grits to say that the rodents are deserting the foundering schooner.

• • •

It is when we hear these Grits talking about the bolters from their party that we find out what they really think about each other.

• • •

The tie that binds Sir Lyman Jones to the Liberal party has been broken. In other words, something has happened to the binder.

• • •

There seems to be only one place in Canada where Sydney Fisher is not anxious to be a candidate. Need we say it?—Brome, P.Q.

• • •

And now they say that Sydney Fisher will carry his spite against the Liberal party to the point of running in Jacques Cartier. He's no lady

• • •

It transpires that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had molehills of information in 1903. Following his invariable custom, he made mountains out of them.

• • •

The new tariff law against the importation of ospreys and other feathers does no harm to the Liberal party, which still has the White Plume.

• • •

In this mad race for the Liberal leadership, nobody seems to have paid sufficient attention to the remarkable speed developed recently by Dr. Neely, of Humboldt.

• • •

Great excitement prevails over the rumor that the Grits have discovered a tariff policy upon which Ned Macdonald and Dr. Mike Clark can stand at the same time.

• • •

Since the Liberals want free implements and the Conservatives have cut the duty, it would seem that Sir Lyman Jones is without a party. Plowing a lonely furrow, as it were.

• • •

The Grits are accusing the Borden Government of degrading the Transcontinental Railway, whereas the Grits did all they could to degrade the public life of Canada.

• • •

According to the Ottawa Free Press the Laurier Government started the Hudson Bay Railway. What they really did was to let the contract for a bridge at the Pas at election time.

• • •

If the exodus from the Liberal party keeps up much longer Hon. Frank Oliver will be left alone in his seat, just like when they sang the National Anthem.

• • •

No, the members of the Laurier Opposition did not spend a pleasant Easter at their respective homes. Their constituents got after them with speech that was plain, not to say positively cruel.

• • •

On reading over the seven-hour defence inflicted on Parliament by George P. Graham, we are almost persuaded to admit the justice of his claim to first place among the humorists of Canada.

• • •

The freight rate on vegetables in Western Canada has been reduced, which will enable certain members of the Liberal party in that part of Canada to enjoy cheap travel as cabbageheads. No make-up necessary.

INDIVIDUAL LIBERAL POLICIES REVEALED IN BUDGET DEBATE

W. M. German (Welland)—Wants a moderate tariff, and more protection for steel.

Hugh Guthrie (South Wellington)—Wants the tariff maintained on everything but foodstuffs and agricultural implements.

E. W. Nesbitt (North Oxford)—Wants duty on agricultural implements reduced by seven per cent. only, and reasonable protection for other industries.

A. B. McCoig (West Kent)—Wants free wheat to keep the Western farmer from going in for mixed farming and competing with the farmers of Ontario. Prefers to buy our food from abroad sooner than raise it ourselves.

W. F. Carroll (South Cape Breton)—Thinks the Government did not do enough for the iron and steel corporations. Would re-introduce the bounty system.

Hon. H. R. Emmerson (Northumberland)—Wants absolute Free Trade.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux (Rouville)—Wants free food and free agricultural implements.

Hon. George P. Graham (S. Renfrew)—Thinks that the two and a half per cent. reduction on agricultural implements proposed under the reciprocity agreement was sufficient reduction of the tariff for ten years.

Dr. Michael Clark (Red Deer)—Wants to abolish every Customs House in the country.

E. M. Macdonald (Pictou)—Wants more protection for steel and iron.

Hon. H. S. Beland (Beauce)—Wants a moderate tariff.

D. A. Lafortune (Montcalm)—Wants tariff raised on tobacco and duties on everything else abolished.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier (Quebec East)—Wants "free wheat," 'free agricultural implements," and a "considerate removal of taxation." He no longer mentions "free food."

"No, you can't!" answered the woman decisively.

"But I want to know what party he belongs to," pleaded the girl.

"Well, take a good look at me," she said sternly. "I'm the party he belongs to."

"RUN TO EARTH"

By the Author of
"Lady Audley's Secret," "Aurora Floyd," etc., etc.

"I am more than contented, my dear uncle, and do not sigh for the arrival of your bachelor friends; though I dare say I shall get on very well with them when they do come."

"I expect a bevy of pretty girls as well. Do you remember Lydia Graham, the sister of Gordon Graham, of the Fusiliers?"

"Yes, I remember her perfectly."

"I think there used to be something like a flirtation between you and her.

Sir Oswald and Lady Eversleigh seated themselves in the barouche; Reginald rode by their side, on a thorough-bred hack out of the Raynham stables.

The scenery within twenty miles of the castle was varied in character and rich in beauty. In the purple distance, to the west of the castle, there was a range of heather-clad hills; and between those hills and the village of Raynham there flowed a noble river, crossed at intervals by quaint old bridges, and bordered by little villages, nestling amid green pastures.

The calm beauty of a rustic landscape, and the grandeur of wilder scenery, were alike within reach of the explorer from the castle.

On this bright August afternoon, Sir Oswald had chosen for the special object of their drive the summit of a wooded hill, whence a superb range of country was to be seen. This hill was called Thorpe Peak, and was about seven miles from the castle.

They ascended the hill slowly, Lady Eversleigh leaning upon the arm of her husband. The pathway wound upward, through plantations of fir, and it was only on the summit that the open country burst on the view of the pedestrian. On the summit they found a gentleman seated on the trunk of a fallen tree, sketching. A light portable color-box lay open by his side and a small portfolio rested on his knees.

He seemed completely absorbed in his occupation, for he did not raise his eyes from his work as Sir Oswald and his companions approached. He wore a loose travelling dress, which, in its picturesque carelessness of style, was not without elegance.

This traveller was Victor Carrington.

"Carrington!" exclaimed Mr. Eversleigh; "whoever would have thought of finding you up here? Sketching too!"

The surgeon lifted his head suddenly, looked at his friend, and burst out laughing, as he rose to shake hands. He looked handsomer in his artistic costume than ever Reginald Eversleigh had seen him look before. The loose velvet coat, the wide linen collar and neckerchief of dark-blue silk, set off the slim figure and pale foreign face.

"You are surprised to see me, but have still more right to be surprised at seeing you. What brings you here?"

"I am staying with my uncle, Sir Oswald Eversleigh, at Raynham Castle."

"Ah, to be sure; that superb place within four miles of Abbeywood, where I have taken up my quarters."

The baronet and his wife had been standing at a litle distance from the two men; but Sir Oswald advanced, with Honoria still upon his arm.

"Introduce me to your friend, Reginald", he said, in his most cordial manner.

Reginald obeyed, and Victor was presented to Sir Oswald and his wife. His easy and graceful bearing was calculated to make an agreeable impression at the outset, and Sir Oswald was evidently pleased with the appearance and manners of his nephew's friend.

"You are an artist, I see, Mr. Carrington", he said, after glancing at the young man's sketch, which, even in its unfinished state, was no contemptible performance.

"An amateur only, Sir Oswald," answered Victor. "I am by profession a surgeon; but as yet I have not practised. I find independence so agreeable that I can scarcely bring myself to resign it. I have been wandering about this delightful county for the last week or two, with my sketch book under my arm—halting for a day or two in any picturesque spot I came upon, and hiring a horse whenever I could get a decent animal. It is a very simply mode of enjoying a holiday; but it suits me."

"Your taste does you credit. But if you are in my neighborhood, you must take your horses from the Raynham stables. Where are your present quarters?"

"At the little inn by Abbeywood Bridge."

'Four miles from the castle. We are near neighbors, Mr. Carrington, according to country habits. You must ride back with us, and dine at Raynham."

"You are very kind, Sir Oswald; but my dress will preclude——"

"No consequence whatever. We are quite alone just now; and I am sure Lady Eversleigh will excuse a traveller's toilet. If you are not bent upon finishing this very charming sketch, I shall insist on your returning with us; and you join me in the request, eh, Honoria?"

Lady Eversleigh smiled an assent, and the surgeon murmured his thanks. As yet he had looked little at the baronet's beautiful wife. He had come to Yorkshire with the intention of studying this woman as a man sudies an abstruse and difficult science; but he was too great a tactician to betray any unwonted interest in her. The policy of his life was patience, and in this, as in everything else, he waited his opportunity.

"She is very beautiful", he thought, "and she has made a good market out of her beauty; but it is only the beginning of the story yet—the middle and the end have still to come."

* * * * *

After this meeting on Thorpe Peak, the surgeon became a constant visitor at Raynham. Sir Oswald was delighted with the young man's talents and accomplishments; and Victor contrived to win credit by the apparently accidental revelations of his early struggles, his mother's poverty, his patient studies, and indomitable perseverance. He told of these things without seeming to tell them; a word now, a chance allusion then, revealed the story of his friendless youth. Sir Oswald fancied that such a companion was eminently adapted to urge his nephew onward in the difficult road that leads to fortune and distinction.

"If Reginald had only half your industry, half your perserverance,.. I should not fear for his future career, Mr. Carington," said the baronet, in the course of a confidential conversation with his visitor.

"That will come in good time, Sir Oswald", answered Victor. "Reginald is a noble fellow, and has a far nobler nature than I can pretend to possess. The very qualities which you are good enough to praise in me are qualities which you cannot expect to find in him. I was a pupil in the stern school of poverty from my earliest infancy, while Reginald was reared in the lap of luxury. Pardon me, Sir Oswald, if I speak plainly; but I must remind you that there are few young men who would have passed honorably through the ordeal of such a change of fortune as that which has fallen on your nephew."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that with most men such a reverse would have been utter ruin of soul and body. An ordinary man, finding all the hopes of his future, all the expectations, which had been a part of his very life, taken suddenly from him, would have abandoned himself to a career of vice; he would have become a blackleg, a swindler, a drunkard, a beggar at the doors of the kinsman who had cast him off. But it was not so with Reginald Eversleigh. From the moment in which he found himself cast adrift by the benefactor who had been more than a father to him, he confronted evil fortune calmy and bravely. He cut the link between himself and extravagant companions. He disappeared from the circles in which he had been admired and courted; and the only grief which preyed upon his generous heart sprang from the knowledge that he had forfeited his uncle's affection."

Sir Oswald sighed. For the first time the began to think that it was just possible that he had treated his nephew with injustice.

"You are right, Mr. Carrington", he said, after a pause; "it was a hard trial for any man; and I am proud to think that Reginald passed unscathed through so severe an ordeal. But the resolution at which I arrived a year and a half ago is one that I cannot alter now. I have formed new ties; I have new hopes for the future. My nephew must pay the penalty of his past errors, and must look to his own exertions for wealth and honor. If I die without a direct heir, he will succeed to the baronetcy, and I hope he will try his uttermost to win a fortune by which he may maintain his title."

There was very little promise in this; but Victor Carrington was, nevertheless, tolerably well satisfied with the result of the conversation. He had sown the seeds of doubt and uncertainty in the baronet's breast. Time only could bring the harvest. The surgeon was accustomed to work underground, and knew that all such work must be slow and laborious.

CHAPTER VII

"O Beware, My Lord, Of Jealousy"

The castle was gay with the presence of many guests. The baronet was proud to gather old friends and acquaintances round him, in order that he might show them the fair young wife he had chosen to be the solace of his declining years. A man of fifty who marries a girl of nineteen is always subject to the ridicule of scandalous lips, the ironical jests of pitiless tongues. Sir Oswald Eversleigh knew this, and he wanted to show the world that he was happy—supremely happy—in the choice that he had made.

Amongst those who came to Raynham Castle this autumn was one trusted friend of Sir Oswald, a gruff old soldier, Captain Copplestone, a man who had never won advancement in the service; but who was known to have nobly earned the promotion which had never been awarded him.

FATAL ACCIDENTS TO TINY CHILDREN

TORONTO, April 27.—Two accidents, oine of them fatal, and the other likely to result in death, occurred to two Toronto children yesterday. Oswald Drylock, of 42 Shirley street, aged 4, while crawling along the wall of a Lansdowne subway, fell to the pavement below, crushing his skull, and expired one hour later. James Windle, aged 10, of 45 Holly street, was filling a toy lantern with gasoline, when an explosion occurred, burning him so severely that lit-

Time For Canals and Railways Is Past Says Mr. Burnham, M.P.

OTTAWA, April 28.—The House of Commons spent most of the day in supply and dealt, among other things, with the estimates of the construction of the new Welland Canal. This led to a general discussion of the transportation question, and the rival merits of the Georgian Bay and the Welland Canal. Mr. Burnham (Con., W. Peterboro) thought the day for building canals and even railroads was past. All the wheat of Canada, he said, could be quickly transported to the seaboard by dirigible balloons. It would only be a matter of a short time until all passenger and freight traffic was handled by aerial navigation.

"You may scoff at me," he continuel, "but remember that the people scoffed at Noah."

Mr. Lemieux, Hon. Geo. P. Graham and other Liberal members said that the Laurier Government had been fully committed to the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal, and had only delayed the commencement of the work until the National Transcontinental neared completion.

Hon. Dr. Reid said there was no hostility between the Welland Canal and the Georgian Bay Canal enterprises. The new Welland Canal was urgently demanded by immediate traffic needs and was therefore being pushed with all possible speed. No doubt the transportation needs of the country would also require the Georgian Bay Canal, but the necessity was not so urgent.

Mr. Lemieux said he believed the Government had no intention of building the Georgian Bay Canal. It had recently appointed a commission of three upon the subject, one of whom was known to be inimical to the project.

Postmaster-General Pelletier said the Government certainly would not act until it received the report of the commission.

Mr. German (Welland) said the estimated cost of the Welland Canal, 24 miles long, was $50,000,000. On that basis the Georgian Bay Canal, 440 miles long, would cost about a billion.

SCANDAL UNEARTHED.

Government Will Hold Another Marine Department Inquiry.

QUEBEC, April 28.—Once again Quebec is the scene of a graft scandal. This time it is the Marine Department, which was thought to have been investigated to the bottom in 1908, that is to be the subject of investigation. The padding of pay lists for eight years with names of those who were not working for the Department at the time they figured on the rolls, and also with the names of persons who had no existence whatsoever, constitutes the irregularities now alleged.

Mr. Doutre, of Ottawa, the purchasing agent of the Department, has arrived at Qpebec and it is expected that a commissioner will be appointed to-day to conduct an investigation.

It is said the irregularities, which cover a period dating from 1906 up to within a few months ago, were brought to light through the fact that one of the men in the Department turned informer. His charges were so serious that the Department sent down a detective to enquire into their veracity with the above result.

Mr. Doutre gave out a statement last night in which he said that a commission would in all likelihood be appointed to-day, and that the Government was determined to take most prompt and drastic action to stamp out all wrongdoing as an effective deterrent for the future. He said that, contrary to the general impression, no one had been dismissed or even suspended. He further stated that there was not the least indication that there had been the slightest irregularity with regard to the purchase of supplies, the sole issue being the padding of payrolls, while the sums obtained from these alleged irregularities had been apparently devoted to expenditures on work or material unauthorized by the Department.

MAY INCREASE FLEET.

Squadron In Mexican Waters To Be Strengthened If War Goes On.

LONDON, April 28.—The British Government has had under consideration the possible necessity of strengthening the British fleet in Mexican waters, in order to insure the protection of British subjects and property. Nothing has been yet definitely decided and in view of the latest news from Mexico it is hoped by officials that it will be unnecessary to send more war vessels there.

According to information received by the Government the danger which threatened British subjects in Mexico has largely passed, but any recurrence of that danger will probably be met by the despatch of a sufficient naval force to protect British subjects and their property.

Famous K. C. Dead.

LONDON, April 28.—Mr. Danckwerts, K.C., the famous ecclesiastical and Appeal Court advocate, died yesterday. He was bron in South Africa, 61 years ago. The late Mr. Danckwerts was a familiar figure at the English Bar, where his abnormal stoutness was the subject of much humorous comment. He has briefed many Canadian appeals before the Privy Council.

Shock of Mother's Death Kills Nun.

LONDON, Ont., April 28. — Shock consequent upon the death of her mother at Orillia, coupled with ill-health, caused the death from heart disease of Sister Bernadine, for many years connected with the Sisters of St. Joseph of this city. The body was brought back here and the funeral service held at the same hour as that of her mother at Orillia.

The Easter recess will be a period of hard work for the Opposition. They have to find out where they are at on the tariff question before the House reassembles.

HEADACHES ALMOST DROVE HER WILD

NEWBURY, ONT., May 29th. 1913.
"About four years ago, I was in a dreadful run-down condition, weak and hardly able to walk up stairs. Weakness peculiar to women was the chief trouble. I had Headaches that almost drove me wild, and most distressing constipation. I took many dollars' worth of medicine from the doctors without any good results.

A neighbor advised me to take "Fruit-a-tives" and they proved to be the best medicine I ever got and the only medicine to do me any good. Today, I feel as a young girl, and am able to go about my household duties as usual. My health is splendid and "Fruit-a-tives" is the cause of it". MRS. WM. CRIM.

WAR TALK SUBSIDING MEDIATIONS GIVE HOPE

Washington Is Officially Advised That Huerta Has Accepted the Offer of the Three Latin Republics to Negotiate For Peace — Navy and War Departments Are Still Busy Completing Plans.

WASHINGTON, April 28. — The tenseness of the Mexican situation was distinctly relieved yesterday as the representatives of Argentina, Brazil and Chile, supported by pressure from all Latin-America and from the foremost powers of Europe, concentrated their efforts toward a pacific adjustment of the crisis.

The success of the first steps toward mediation—the prompt acceptance by the United States and the announcement of the Spanish Ambassador that Huerta had accepted the tender of good offices—produced a feeling of distinct hope, which was reflected not only in Administration quarters, but in Congress as well, where "war talk" gave way to a spirit of conciliation.

Throughout the day the three South American envoys, who have undertaken the task of mediation, held frequent conferences to arrange the preliminaries of procedure. Pending receipt of the formal acceptance by Huerta no proposal will be submitted to either the United States or the Huerta Government. Also it has been made plain that no conditions from either party as to the terms that will be accepted has as yet been formally placed before the intermediaries.

The President and Secretary Bryan were assured through two separate Diplomatic sources that Gen. Huerta was ready to accept the tender of good offices and was now drafting a formal acceptance. Pressure from Germany, Great Britain and France advising Huerta to accept the first steps toward mediation, and the approving attitude of Latin-American countries to the settlement of the controversy by Pan-American diplomacy, emphasized the world-wide influences which are working to bring about peace and avert a conflict of death and bloodshed.

Meanwhile the Navy and War Departments are continuing their efforts to care for refugees and perfecting the machinery of the army and navy for any unexpected turn in events.

Secretary Daniels announced that he had telegraphed the full text of the mediation offer and its acceptance by the United States to both Rear-Admirals Badger and Howard, with instructions to have the commanders of all ships on the east and west coasts spread the news throughout Mexico. By this Mr. Daniels hopes the feeling toward Americans may be alleviated and refugees enabled to depart without molestation.

Advices received through the British Embassy told of the completion of arrangements for the safe departure of Americans from Mexico City, while the French Ambassador gave the State Department a message he had received from the French Legation stating that while there had been some anti-American manifestations in the Mexican capital, order now prevailed.

Secretary Bryan said he was able, after receiving information through embassies and legations, to say that no Americans had been killed or injured since the crisis of the last two weeks began, and that, though many had been detained at Aguascalientes, Cordoba and Orizaba, efforts were now being made to obtain their release.

Order prevails in Vera Cruz. Brig.-Gen. Funston and the army are expected to be in command of the situation to-day.

Inspecting U. S. Prisons.

Europe Has Largest Tunnels.

The United States has for so long been pre-eminent in the realm of size that it comes almost as a shock to realize that the largest railway tunnels are on the continent of Europe. Of these the longest is the Simplon, twelve and a quarter miles through the Alps. Two others, the St. Gothard and the Lotschberg, are over nine and one-third miles long, and the Mont Cenis is over seven miles long. In all there are fourteen tunnels over four miles long. The longest tunnel in this country is the Hoosac, four and one-third miles long.—American Machinist.

LITTLE CHANGE SEEN.

French Election Results Not Complete Until May 10.

PARIS, April 28. — Although 351 Deputies were definitely chosen in yesterday's general election for the French Chamber of Deputies, the country will have to await the result of the 251 second ballots on May 10 before it can tell whether the present Government will obtain a majority.

The known results do not indicate any remarkable change in the composition of the parties, but from the votes cast it would appear that the combination of groups led by former Premier Aristide Briand and Louis Barthou, known as the federation of Democrats of the left, was more favored by the voters than the groups forming the present Government's majority.

This may undergo a change at the second ballot, and it may be necessary to take a test vote in the Chamber itself before it can be known with certainty whether the Government will stand or not, as the 602 Deputies are divided into thirteen groups.

"BLACK KNIGHT" DEAD.

Rev. J. H. Hector, Well-Known In Ontario Dies In York, Pa.

TORONTO, April 28.—News of the death of Rev. J. H. Hector, universally known as the Black Knight, at his home, York, Pa., has reached the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance. He was very well known in Toronto, as in many other cities, as an influential temperance speaker.

He was the son of negro slaves, and although he had little education, was a gifted speaker. After fighting as a volunteer in the Civil War in the U. S., and being employed as a railway engineer, he became a minister of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church.

SERVES BURGLAR WITH BATH OF CEREALS

NEW YORK, April 27.—Although a burglar had entered the apartment of George S. Speidell at No. 174 Rich avenue, Chester Hill, Mount Vernon, to get silverware and other valuables, he hurried away as soon as he got a bowl of hot oatmeal. In fact, he didn't even wait to take the loot he had already packed in a little bag.

Mary Desmond, a maid, handed the oatmeal to the burglar. Ordinarily she serves food neatly. But she had not expected to meet a burglar in the dining room yesterday. It made her nervous. She put some of the cereal in the burglar's hair, a portion in his eyes and a lot down the back of his neck. After that, she crammed the steaming bowl over his ears.

Then she went back to the kitchen for the next course, which happened to be scrambled eggs. But without noticing that driblets of oatmeal were burning holes in his waistcoat, the burglar left by the nearest door.

Several persons pursued him, guided by his yells and a trail of steam in his wake. But nobody caught him.

All Hope of Escape of Sealer Southern Cross Now Abandoned.

OTTAWA, April 28. — Word was received here yesterday from W. B. Nicholson, Canadian trade commissioner at Newfoundland, that the total loss of life in the recent Newfoundland sealing disaster will run to 250. In view of the extent of the calamity the Government has under consideration an increase of the grant made to the Newfoundland Government for the survivors. Mr. Nicholson reports that there is no doubt now that the Southern Cross, which had 175 men on board, has gone down with all on board. A letter is expected daily giving full details of the loss of the Southern Cross. The first ship lost was the Newfoundland. Sixty-nine bodies from this ship were brought in by the Bellaventura, and eight men were missing, who it was supposed had walked off the ice. The mourning when these 69 men were brought in was almost indescribable. Members from Cape Breton say that it is rumored amongst the fishermen of that cost that there is still a third ship lost, but there is no confirmation.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, April 27.—Offerings at the C.P.R. live stock market were 550 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 600 calves.

There was no actual change in the market for cattle as compared with this day week, the feeling being steady because of the fact that the supply was about equal with requirements, but the general impression was that drovers were losing money at the present prices as the quality of the stock offered was much better than it has been of late and must have cost more in the interior. The gathering of buyers was fairly large, and as the weather was fine and cool the disposition on the part of the packers and butchers was to operate more freely, and in consequence the demand was better, and a fairly active trade was done. Sales of full loads of choice steers were made at $8.25; good at $7.75, and medium at $6 to $6.25. Small lots of picked choice steers brought as high as $8.50 per 100 pounds. The tone of the market for butchers' cows was stronger and prices advanced 25c to 50c per 100 pounds, which was due to the fact that the supply was smaller than usual. Sales of picked lots of choice stock were made at $7.25 to $7.50, while the top figure paid for choice bulls was $7.25 per 100 pounds.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.25 to $8.50; butchers' cattle, medium, $6.25 to $6.50; butchers' cattle, common, $5 to $5.50; canners, $3.75 to $4; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $7.25 to $7.50; butchers' cattle, medium, $5.75 to $6.75; butchers' cattle, bulls, $5 to $7.25; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $90; milkers, common and medium, each, $70 to $75; springers, $50 to $65; sheep, ewes, $7 to $7.50; bucks and culls, $6 to $6.50; lambs, $8.50 to $9; hogs, off cars, $9.50 to $9.75; calves, $3 to $10.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

"I didn't knew I needed an Elevator until I saw this Book."

THAT'S what a merchant said in our office recently. We had just sold him an Elevator for use in his small, but growing factory in a little town in Western Ontario. He is enthusiastic over the economies he has been enabled to effect through the installation of a small hand-power Elevator costing but $70.00. He has discovered the secret of efficiency in handling goods and filling orders. He has learned how to cut out unprofitable methods and reduce the cost of labor by eliminating waste time and needless effort.

Perhaps you may find in this Book the solution of your most difficult problem. Isn't it worth writing for?

MACREADY IN CHARGE

Soldier Is Created Magistrate In Belfast District.

No Troops Have Been Moved Into the Unionist Zone Although Certain Regiments Have Been Warned to Stand Ready—Police Ordered to Arrest All Armed Motorist In Vicinity of Belfast.

LONDON, April 28.—The nature of the steps which Premier Asquith announced in Parliament the Government intended to take in Ulster is not yet known, except that Major-Gen. C. F. N. Macready of the adjutant general's staff of the War Department, has taken over the command of the police forces in the Belfast district.

No troops have yet been moved north from Dublin although it is understood that certain regiments have been warned to hold themselves in readiness. Five warships arrived off Larne, 17 miles from Belfast, Sunday, and last night played searchlights on the town.

The second Cabinet meeting within 24 hours will take place this morning. The Government have already begun to set the force of law at work and the police in outlying Ulster districts are already reinforced and instructed to search all automobiles and arrest the occupants if any are carrying arms. The budget statement has been postponed till Monday.

The following amendment to yesterday's vote of censure on the Government has been tabulated by several Liberal members, "In view of the serious nature of the preparations made by the Privy Councillors, members of Parliament and others in Ulster, supported by leaders of the Unionist party, to resist the administration of law, resulting in unprovoked outrages on persons and property, including obstruction of the highways, interruption of telephone and telegraphic services, holding up the police, customs house officers, and coast guardsmen, in the execution of their duty, this House undertakes to support the Government in whatever measures are necessary to vindicate the authority of law, to protect the officers and servants of the King in the execution of their duty and secure to his Majesty's subjects the enjoyment of their legal rights."

Yesterday's actual and reliable information from Belfast is that three battalions of infantry are expected to-day. Gen. Macready, the new military governor, has arrived, and will issue an important proclamation, the nature of which is not yet known. It is expected that all arms landed have now been stored. The work was finished at three o'clock yesterday morning, a further supply having been brought in Sunday night.

Hamilton Fyfe, wiring to The Mail from Belfast, concludes: "Of course, everyone is saying, 'What will the Government do?' and in the flat moments which follow the unusual exhiliaration a few are asking themselves whether, after all, Ulster's strength did not lie in sitting still. But that is only the mood of a few. The general feeling is one of exultation.

"A leading member of the Unionist organization expressed himself thus, when someone suggested that English opinion might be inclined to jibe at Ulstermen openly breakng the law, 'What do we care for English opinion?' We wanted rifles and we had to get them. It was just as well to give the Government a hint what they may expect if they pass the Home Rule bill as it stands'."

The death of Sister M. Purification, which took place at Niagara Falls recently, removes the last of the pioneer band of Loretto Sisters who came from the mother house of the community near Dublin, Ireland, to establish the order in Canada. Sister Purification, whose name in the world was Colahan, became a religious at the early age of 17. She was 81 at the time of her death. Her early wish was to become a missionary and go to India, following in the footsteps of St. Francis Xaviour.

REBELLION SPREADS.

Colorado Strike Situation Passes All Previous Bounds.

DENVER, Colo., April 28. — The strike situation yesterday passed all previous bounds. Actual rebellion spread, not only through all of the southern strike zone, but in the northern coal fields, where a quiet strike has been in progress for three years. The strikers late yesterday demanded that every gun in the possession of the mine guards be withdrawn from the field immediately.

In the opinion of those on both sides who are in close touch with the situation, only the possibility that President Wilson might decide to send Federal troops out to take charge of the situation will prevent more serious complications than have existed.

Governor Ammons admitted late yesterday that he is powerless to suppress the warfare. This admission followed a day of wild rumors, some groundless, other authentic, in regard to happenings at Chandler, Ludlow and Trinidad in the southern coal fields and at Louisville in the northern part of the state.

The state capitol from 8 o'clock yesterday morning until late in the day was thronged with men and women, some of them representatives of the coal companies, but a great majority of persons who went there to plead with the governor to use his utmost power to halt the bloodshed and pillage—for it is now amounting to actual pillage—in the strike-ridden counties of the state.

No Troops To Colorado Yet.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—After a long conference last night at the White House, between President Wilson, Secretary Garrison and Senator Thomas, Secretary Garrison announced that no orders sending federal troops into Colorado were issued last night. He said the situation would be discussed again to-day.

Queen Eleanor May Not Come.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, April 28.—Queen Eleanor of Bulgaria has decided to cancel her proposed visit to the United States in case of war between the United States and Mexico. Her Majesty had contemplated sailing at the end of May.

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

Wabash passenger train No. 2, and a Grand Trunk freight, met in head-on collision at Newbury, Ont., yesterday morning. Nobody was hurt.

In a fit of despondency, Mrs. Mary Gardiner, aged 31, 212 First avenue, Toronto, drank carbolic acid. She had been in ill-health for the past four months.

Early yesterday morning a large residence in Regent street, Welland, occupied by Daniel Hobden as a dwelling and boarding-house, was swept by fire.

A man broke into the Waterloo Golf and Country Club at two o'clock yesterday morning, but was overpowered by the steward before he could secure any booty.

The death occurred suddenly in London, Eng., of Sir George Doughty, M.P., a famous Grimsby fish trader who had many interests in Canada and especially in British Columbia.

"SOME HA'E MEAT, AND CANNA EAT"

So Bobby Burns tersely describes the rich, but still poor, dyspeptics. But their case is not now so desperate as when Burns wrote. For the man who has the food now can eat without suffering for it, if he just follows the meal with a Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablet.

These remarkable tablets banish the troubles of the chronic dyspeptic—the man who is bilious—the sufferer from heartburn, gas on the stomach or occasional indigestion. You can eat hearty meals of wholesome food—and digest them, too—if you take Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets.

Compounded by expert chemists, after probably the best formula known to medical science, they are quick and certain in their action, giving prompt relief from all forms of stomach trouble, toning up and strengthening the digestive organs and bringing about permanent cures.

PANKHURST GANG FAST DWINDLING

Mrs Pankhurst is Getting Rid of the Most Moderate Militants

LONDON, April 29—A new suffragette organization which has been formed here by several leaders who Union, has adopted for its slogan believe that the cause of woman sufferage has suffered by the practices of the Womens Social and Political "The Pankhursts must go."

The movement is being boomed by suffragists who were at one time supporters of militant tactics but who have been forced out of the leading militant organization because of their moderate views as to the campaign which should be carried on.

It seems that Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst has not only dismissed members of her personal staff but has also been discharging privates. One of these women who was dismissed last week, says she was forced out on a most trivial pretext and that recently Mrs. Pankhurst has dismissed a number of workers from the organization apparently through caprice. It is asserted by this woman that the militants are dwindling in numbers daily and that at present there are only 3,000 active workers.

GIRL STUDENTS GRAB MALE INTRUDER

ST. THOMAS, April 28.—A young lady student at Alma Ladies' College here, was awakened by a noise about two o'clock this morning and quietly investigating discovered a man in the corridor.

The other girls were aroused and while some stood guard at the windows and exits from the corridor, others flew to arouse the principal, his son and the janitor. These three arrived and took the man who still surrounded by the determined girls into custody. The police were called by telephone and the fellow was lodged in the cells.

He gave his name as Thomas and pretended to be intoxicated or dopey. He had climbed a fire escape to the second storey and gained entrance through a window. Before he had time to secure any plunder, if that were his object, the plucky lady students nabbed him.

NO CHEAP RATES ON KINGSTON LINES

KINGSTON, Ont., April 28.—After May 1 there will be no cheap market rates to Kingston along the line of the Kingston and Pembroke division of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Such an order has just been issued, and it hits local merchants very hard, as for years the old Kingston and Pembroke Railway gave cheap rates on two days of the week.

The C. P. R., which recently took over the road, was petitioned by the board of trade to continue the cheap rates, but the company claimed that in so doing they would be showing discrimination, and that cheap rates would have to go.

PRISONERS MAY SUPPORT WIVES

MONTREAL, April 28.—Alterations in the prison law were asked of Premier Gouin by a delegation of ladies representing the Ladies' Federal Society of St. Jean Baptiste, yesterday in the Government offices. They suggested that a prisoner who does work while in confinement should be paid for it and the proceeds handed over to his family. The Premier said that he considered such a course quite proper, and assured the ladies that he would take the matter into consideration.

PREDICTS FISH WILL COST HIGH PRICE

ST. JOHN N.B., April 29.—(Special.)—Stocks of fish in the warehouses are light and hardly sufficient to meet the demand from the West Indies, before the arrival of new fish. The Lunenburg fishing fleet has sailed for the spring catch and conditions point to a very high price for the first landing of bank cod. It is admitted by the trade that the price per quintal will probably be at $7 or over, the highest price ever paid to the Lunenburg fishermen at the opening of the season. Last year the price was opened at $6, and rose until at the end of the season it was a dollar higher. The average price per quintal during the past season was $6.50 paid for Lunenburg fish.

CANADIAN REACHES VERA CRUZ WITH A SENSATIONAL STORY

Declares 85 Americans are in Cardoba Prison, Ill-Fed and Assaulted When They Protest

VERA CRUZ, April 29.—Special—Contradictory reports of the treatment of Americans held at Cordoba have been received. Consul-General Canada has had a talk with a man who arrived last night from the city where the Mexicans appear to be gathering Mexican hostages, and his report is most reassuring. This man, whose name is not given, declares that the Americans held there, after being taken from trains, are undoubtedly well treated. The women, he says, are at hotels and the men at the commandencia.

Another arrival, with a different story, is W. H. Mechling, of the Geological Survey of Canada, who has been in Mexico for some months in behalf of the Universities of Harvard, Columbia and Pennsylvania. Although Professor Mechling is a citizen of the United States, he passed at once for a British subject, and was not molested when he arrived at Cordoba last Friday or on Saturday or Sunday. He was permitted to visit the jail where the Americans are confined. He says that he found 85 of them held prisoners, men and women and children. They are herded like cattle in the jail, subject to the jeers and insults of the Mexican inmates and the jailers, ill-fed, and the men are struck whenever they protest. Among the prisoners, according to Mechling, are Superintendent Emery, of the Visto Hermosa Sugar Plantation, of Vera Cruz State, who entertained John Lind, the special envoy, some months ago. Another is a young American woman with a four months' old child. There are other women and children.

Mechling is also authority for the statement that there are 87 Americans held prisoners at Tuxtepec, State of Vera Cruz. They were gathered in from the surrounding plantations and towns. Consular Agent White is in jail at El Hule, near Tuxtepec.

He left Tuxtepec, he says, last Wednesday. He evaded a mob by giving an assumed name and claiming British protection. He was dragged from a train at El Burro, but got back again after being robbed. At Tierra Blanca, fourteen whites and thirty-two negroes were put on board the train to be taken to Cordoba. They were met at the station by a mob, but were not injured.

LAND WILL BE OPEN FOR PRE-EMPTION

EDMONTON, Alta., April 29.—Eighty thousand acres of agricultural lands, situated in the valley of the south fork of the Fraser river along the Grand Trunk Pacific railway, 456 miles west of Edmonton, will be opened to pre-emption on June 1 and 15, when entries may be made at the office of the government agent at McBride and Fort George. The reserve was created in 1907. The valley is from one to two miles in width at Tete Jaune Cache, five miles in width at McBride and fully ten miles in width at the Fraser river canyon. The altitude is 2,250 feet above sea level. Government reports say the land is suitable for mixed farming and live stock raising. Some of the land is covered with timber. Prospective settlers have come to Edmonton from various parts of the United States and Canada to join the throng in the rush for free land, which is valued at from $10 to $25 an acre, according to the distance from the railroad.

TELLS SAD TALE OF DESERTION

MONTREAL, April 28.—With a three weeks old baby in her arms, Mrs. Peter Login, a Polish woman, appeared in the detective headquarters this morning and amidst sobs related a pitiful story. Her husband, she stated, left her and two children, the elder one being 17 months, and as he had taken with him every cent in the house, she was starving. She said that the neighbors had helped her out a little, but she is penniless and does not know where her food is to come from. The young woman said that her husband came home last Friday and after having his supper went to bed. When, however, she awoke on Saturday morning the man was gone and so were the money and even clothes which belonged to her. She brought the picture of her husband and the Chief of Detectives Charpentier will set detectives on the track of the alleged deserter.

INDIANS CELEBRATE

EDMONTON, Alta., April 29.—Two hundred braves of the Indian tribe on the Hobema reservation, 60 miles south of Edmonton, were in attendance when Chief Samson and his headmen conferred the title of chieftain upon Charles L. Gill, of Edmonton, for services rendered to the red men. The feature of the entertainment, which followed the ceremony, was a cycle of 13 tribal dances. One of the participants, Buffalo Chip, 90 years of age, a veteran of the Reil rebellion literally danced a half dozen young men off their feet. The braves were garbed in festal finery of silks and furs and bead-work. Their faces were painted with yellow and red ochre. Following the usual exchange of presents, the Indians met in council, at which Gill was admitted into the brotherhood. A permanent record of the ceremony and dances was made by a moving picture camera operator. This will be exhibited for the first time on the reservation about the middle of May.

WRESTLING ENCOUNTER TO COME OFF

EDMONTON Alta. April 29.—Pat Connolly of Vancouver, undefeated heavyweight champion catch-as-catch-can wrestler of Great Britain and Dr. Benjamin Franklin Roller of Seattle, who has met most of the top-notchers in the United States and Canada, have been matched for a finish bout, to take place in the Arena here the evening of May 23. Connolly, who weighs 200 pounds in condition, was seen in Edmonton recently in a match to throw two men, including "Kid" Sandow, in an hour. He turned the trick in a traction less than 21 minutes, without extending himself. Reports are current in sporting circles here that J. G. Feltus, manager for Connolly, is negotiating for a match with Frank Gotch, the world's champion to be staged soon after the bout with Roller. The Seattle man is now making a tour of the continent. Experts say that Connolly and Roller are fairly equally matched. The British champion has a large local following but Roller is not without support.

AUTO ACCIDENT MAY END FATALLY

TORONTO, April 29.—One man lying at the point of death and another very seriously injured is the result of a collision between an automobile and a street car which occurred near the corner of Grace Street and College at 12.25 this morning. The names of the injured men are Harold Roy Wight, 278 George Street, and Wallace Cowan same address.

The motor was proceeding north on Grace Street, and at College turned west. It was travelling at a good rate of speed, and the wheels skidded as the driver attempted to make the turn. Fearing to strike the curb, he turned his steering wheel sharply and the car swerved again, the wheels skidding in such a manner as to set the car directly facing Carlton Street car No. 1312, which was proceeding east at a good pace.

The force of the collision was so great that instead of throwing out the two men they were tightly wedged in the motor car, which was crumpled out of all shape, and it was found difficult to extricate them.

GIRL TRIES TO CARVE HER STEP-MOTHER

MONTREAL, April 28.—A fifteen-year-old girl, armed with a long carving knife made a murderous attack upon her step-mother. Her father put up a lively battle and after a terrible rough-and-tumble fight on the kitchen floor, wrested the knife from her. Then he swore out a warrant for her arrest in the juvenile court.

The girl, who is big for her age and alleged to be a wayward one, was remonstrated with by her step-mother for her street-walking tendencies. She flew into a dreadful passion, and, grabbing the knife, made a sudden leap for her. The father jumped and grasped her arm and the two fell to the floor. She put up a furious battle before she was overpowered.

WHY ADVERTISED GOODS ARE GENERALLY BETTER

That trademark is valuable to him only so long as he makes good.

His investment in good will pays him dividends only so long as he retains that good will.

He has set a high mark and must live up to it.

Manufacurers are turning today to the daily newspapers for their advertising campaigns, because they find that through them the "Good Will" they value so highly can be built up at less expense to themselves than in any other way.

BOOSTER PERIOD CLOSES TO-NIGHT

Each and Every Candidate Should be in the Intelligencer Office by 10 p.m To-Night or Have Their Subscriptions Mailed at Their Local Post Office by That Hour

"Booster" period is the real starting point of the contest and every subscription that is secured now will be worth more votes than ever again, so it is up to candidates not to falter or flinch during the final hours of this great period. Don't stop as soon as you secure one subscription, but just keep going, and you will find at the close of the contest that you made no mistake, as in this competition the ones that get started with the flying star have a clear field ahead, and all they have to do is to watch the other party and keep on the inside track to the winning wire.

Contest Ginger

Perhaps you think that because there are still a few weeks remaining of the contest you have plenty of time and you can afford to take a rest. This is a mistake.

The days pass very quickly. "The bird of the time has but little way to flutter and the bird is on the wing." You should not be on some restful twig. There will be time to rest when you have won the prize of your choice.

Until then let your motto be: "Haste not waste". Do not waste a minute and you will not lose a prize.

Every one you ever knew, every one you know now, every one you may know in the future, are the ones you should ask for a subscription in your favor. Keep your friends in mind that the big vote offer ends to-night.

Now is the time to go out after those subscriptions that have been promised you.

There is no way of telling who will be in the lead after the big vote, but it is safe to predict that it will be someone who is no wasting time at this particular minute.

Contest Dept.

The contest department of The Intelligencer is open this evening until TEN o'clock. Write, phone, or call for all information.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN LABOR SITUATION

A Letter Received By Local Banker Gives Inkling of Conditions

It is quite possible that many of us, in this peaceful land, have drawn our own conclusions regarding conditions in South Africa, and particularly in the striking regions, and as we read of the recent deportations of the heads of the labor troubles we wonder not a little as to the inner workings of the problem. A faint idea, however, is given us through a brief section of a letter received by Mr. Henry Sneyd, of this city, from his brother Walter, who is connected with the Modder B Gold Mines at Brakpan, Transvaal, South Africa, in the centre of the late uprising, at times not knowing what event would next turn up. Following a sketch of home news, Mr. Sneyd says:

"The past year has been a very bad year for most of us out here, especially for the women folk. It was as bad or worse than war, and we were in fear and trembling of the natives who were very disturbed. We are only about 200 yards from the compound where there are over 2,000 of them, and only once did they actually break out, and that was in a tribal fight among themselves, and luckily only one or two were killed. During the last strike there were about fifty rifles watching them, so they were very quiet. On some of the mines they had a lot of trouble, especially on the diamond mines. The "Premier" employs 17,000 natives. "Smuts" has turned out quite a useful man, and we consider he did the only thing possible in deporting the men; but it's hard for the old country to be turned into a dust bin. It is curious to think there were more armed men during the strike than at the beginning of the Boer war. The Boers are a tough lot, and no doubt saved the country from revolution or worse. Herzog is the thorn in the Government's flesh just now, and at present is playing up to the Labor party. If only we could have peace the country would go ahead, but I'm afraid that if the Labor party don't start their antics again the Kaffirs will, and so farming has not a very cheerful outlook, not to mention droughts."

So it will be seen that in South Africa, even among the gold mines and ostrich farms, the latter giving returns of from $5,000 to $50,000 per year, has its drawbacks, and all told we of this clime are in every way as well, if not better, situated than where our friend's brother resides, and if candidly expressed, we think our Mr. Sneyd's choice would be that of managing a bank in Belleville, Ont., rather than conducting a gold mine with 17,000 natives as employes. Yes, we'll remain in Belleville, at least until there is peace in South Africa.

WON'T TAKE LONG TO CLEAN UP MEXICO

Writes Engineer In U.S. Navy to His Brother in Ottawa

OTTAWA, April 28.—Mr. J. W. Nesbit, of 21 Euclid Ave., has just received a letter from Annapolis, from his brother, R. G. Nesbit, who is chief engineer of one of the torpedo boats of the American navy.

Mr. Nesbit has had a considerable amount of experience with the American navy, having sailed around the world on a cruise lasting four years.

He is well informed on all subjects pertaining to his profession, and writes as follows:

"I will not take the United States long to clean up things when we get started. The American ambassador for Mexico has been recalled, and we are leaving tonight (April 23) for Mexico. We are sailing at full speed to take him on board our torpedo. We are going because the one I am on is the fastest here, and we expect to make the trip in about 60 hours.

"Throughout the American navy today starts double pay for all marines, officers and men. We return as soon as we get the ambassador and will not return to Mexico as there are already forty battleships and double that number of torpedoes there now; enough to take all South America as soon as they get down to business. You may consider everything alright and success sure."

MORE AGRICULTURAL SCHOOLS FOR N.B.

FREDERICTON N.B., April 29.—(Special.)—Further substantial advances in the development of scientific agriculture is predicted for the Province of New Brunswick. Because of the pronounced success of the recently opened agricultural school at Woodstock it is announced by the government that another like building will be put up in Sussex inside of twelve months and in the year following another agricultural school will be erected in the northern part of the Province.

A hope is expressed by the Commissioner of Agriculture that there will soon be such schools in every one of the counties. This summer there is to be a course in agriculture in the Woodstock school for the teachers of the provincial public schools. That the interest in agriculture is on the increase throughout the province is evinced by the large increase in the number of agricultural societies in New Brunswick, forty woman's institutes have also been organized and two additional orchards are to be established this year.

Twenty thousand fruit trees, it is estimated, will be planted in this province this year, and the orchard industry is rapidly assuming an important aspect. Eight hundred trees were sent out last year by the Department of Agriculture to an orchard established by a group of members of the Board of Trade, and out of that number but three have been lost.

He had the policeman looking for a second man for some time, but it failed eventually. It is an old trick, and Louis is an old offender, who was finally recognized by the bluecoat as the man with two voices. His explanations satisfied the court and he was allowed to depart.

ATTACK IS PERSONAL

Hon. Mr. Hanna Vigorously Denounces "Peanut Politics."

Formal Charges By Charles M. Bowman of a League With the Liquor Interests to Defeat the Scott Act Through the Agency of Inspector Snider Receive an Unequivocal Denial From Hon. Mr. Hanna.

TORONTO, April 29.—The dying days of the session of the Legislature were marked yesterday by an acrimonious debate arising out of Charles M. Bowman's formal charges against Provincial Secretary Hanna and the demand for a royal commission to investigate the conditions surrounding Inspector Snider's visit to Welland during the Scott Act elections.

At a late hour last night the debate concluded, and on a division the motion for an inquiry was defeated.

The charge which Mr. Bowman preferred against Hon. Mr. Hanna was, in brief, that he and the organized liquor interests through their representatives had agreed that the Government or one of its officials should take steps to procure the defeat of the Scott Act in Peel, Welland, and Huron Counties, and that the visit of License Inspector Snider to Welland just prior to the election was in fulfilment of that compact.

In conclusion it was charged that the Minister had "illegally, wrongly and corruptly intervened, interfered with and influenced voters."

Mr. Bowman declared that the liquor interests had decided that the Scott Act, which was likely to became popular in the province, should be defeated, and accordingly raised $60,000 to defeat it. They supported Government candidates in bye-elections and promised support in the general election. It was agreed with the Government that the act should be defeated jointly, and the statement as to weaknesses prepared by the Government was issued with that intention. It was prepared in a conference of liquor interests with license authorities.

In beginning his brief reply, Hon. Mr. Hanna said that this "last act in a splendid drama," although called a discharge of duty by the Opposition, was not so in the minds of the people who had observed affairs of the last eight months, both in and out of the House. Some would term it the "worst example of personal persecution that they had known in the annals of the province." He would speak however to the House and to the province with confidence and show that as far as the charge concerned him the conditions in the province and the constituencies gave them a complete lie.

On the 22nd day of this month the member for North Bruce, under the guidance of his leader, had made a statement and motion, dealing with the same episode. Not a new tittle had been added here, nor a circumstance that was not challenged then. When the matter was disposed of some gentlemen were ashamed of their course and two or these were members of the Opposition.

"While my name did not appear in that statement, it was to me, and at me," declared Mr. Hanna. "I made a complete statement, absolutely true from start to finish, and meant to be full and fair and frank. That statement was accepted by this House, this province, and the press outside of those too tightly bound to ties of party."

"This," he declared, "is the best living example of peanut politics that the province has yet given."

"I am going to say this, that from one end of the province to the other, and without qualification or reservation, and I care not what test may be applied, what I said was absolutely true. (Applause.) Every charge of alliance between the Government and the liquor interests was untrue, and every one imputing wrong doing on his part was untrue. No matter the language used, it was untrue."

Mr. Hanna then reviewed the attacks on his Department and the charges of an alliance with the liquor interests.

"There is no such bargain and never was such bargain, and as to $60,000, I know absolutely nothing, but when they speak with such certainty they will doubtless be accepted as authorities."

Mr. Rowell contended that the Provincial Secretary had failed to meet the motion. His hon. friend had referred to the conditions existing in Huron and Peel, and had suggested that this answered the charges.

The public wanted to know if when Mr. Snider went into the ridings; when he represented that he came from the Department of the Provincial Secretary, when he went there with all the weight and prestige of the Government and sought to influence temperance Conservatives to defeat the Scott Act—did he go there of his own mind or at the request of the chief of the Department of the Provincial Secretary? Upon that question they had had no light, and the only way they could get that light was by the granting of the motion.

Mr. Rowell then quoted a letter which he had received from a prominent Conservative, at one time a Liberal, Mr. Charles Steel, reeve of Port Colborne. In his letter Mr. Steel called for the dismissal of an official who sought to interfere in a local election, and offered to testify at an enquiry.

Messrs. Proudfoot, McGarry, Pattinson, Anderson, Musgrove and Ferguson participated in the debate.

PROPOSALS APPROVED

Contracts With C.N.R. Ratified by Conservative Caucus.

Two Dissenting Voices Raised Against Resolution to Guarantee Bonds to the Extent of $45,000,000 in Exchange For Large Share in Project and Wide Powers of Control—Comes Up Thursday.

OTTAWA, April 29. — The much discussed Canadian Northern aid proposals which have been the subject of negotiations for some months have been placed before Parliament in the form of a notice of resolution in the votes and proceedings to-day. Premier Borden will move that the Government be authorized to guarantee the bonds of the C. N. R. upon certain terms contained in the resolution.

The contract of the Government with the C. N. R. was submitted to the Conservative caucus and ratified by all but two members—R. B. Bennett (Calgary) and W. F. Nickle (Kingston).

The resolution will probably come up on Thursday. It is in brief:

(1) Provision is made for guaranteeing the bonds to the amount of $45,000,000 which, with the other assets now available, is considered sufficient for the completion of the company's lines as a transcontinental system, which will comprise nearly 10,000 miles of railway.

(2) The company's stock issue at the present time amounts to $145,000,000, of which about $138,000,000 is held by Mackenzie and Mann, Limited, and $7,000,000 by the Government. The total capitalization of $145,000,000 is reduced to $100,000,000, of which the Government receives $33,000,000 in addition to the $7,000,000 already held, or $40,000,000 in all. On the other hand the stock holding of Mackenzie and Mann, Limited, namely $70,000,000 of C. N. R. stock and $68,000,000 in the subsidiary companies, or $138,000,0000 in all, has been reduced to $60,000,000, that is to say a total reduction of $78,000,000.

(3) Mackenzie and Mann, Limited, have absolutely released all claims against the C. N. R. and its various subsidiary companies for any services which they have performed during the past eighteen years, or since the inception of the enterprise.

(4) The Government receives security by way of mortgage on the C. N. R. lines in three prairie provinces, comprising about 5,000 miles. This is the most remunerative portion of the company's system.

(5) In case any portion of the 45 millions to be raised by the Government's guarantee should be applied in completing or improving any of the company's subsidiary lines, such company must also execute a mortgage for the protection of the Government for the amount so expended upon such company's property.

(6) The reduction of the stock issue from one hundred and forty-five millions to one hundred millions, has been accomplished by having all the stocks of the various subsidiary railway companies, of the terminal companies, telegraph, express and elevator companies as well as the steamship company, transferred to the C. N. R. so that the Government holding forty millions out of one hundred millions of C. N. R. stock, has a corresponding interest in all these companies. The interests of Mackenzie and Mann, Limited, which owns the townsites, which holds very valuable real estate in the three prairie provinces, has also been pledged to the Government as security.

(7) In order to ensure that the forty-five million dollars to be raised by the Government's guarantee shall be applied to the completion of this transcontinental system, and to no other purpose, the Government has made provision for the most thorough and strict stipulations in the trust deed, so not one dollar of the moneys so raised can be appropriated or diverted to any other purpose.

(8) As the company, outside of the amounts owed to contractors which are very large at the present time, owes about fourteen million dollars of temporary loans, raised by the pledging of securities which have not been sold and which hitherto have not been saleable at reasonable figure, and as the company has also a floating indebtedness of between ten and eleven millions of dollars, the Government have stipulated that Mackenzie and Mann, Limited, shall give absolutely satisfactory security that both the temporary loan and the floating indebtedness shall be paid off by them without recourse in any way to the moneys which are to be raised by the guaranteed securities for the completion of the road.

(9) Provision is made that all traffic arising on the C. N. R. system shall be transported over Canadian lines, and if for export shall be conveyed to Canadian ports. In this respect the Government has exacted a strict covenant which admits of no evasion.

(10) Provision has also been made for interchange of traffic between the C. N. R. system and the I. C. R.

(11) The provision is made for inspection by the Government officials of books, reports and other records of the C. N. R. and its subsidiaries at any time.

(12) Provision is also made for the appointment by the Government of a director upon the board of the C. N. R. and each of its subsidiary companies.

(13) It is provided that all the lines comprising the C. N. R. system shall be subject to the legislative jurisdiction of the Parliament.

(14) In the event of any default by C. N. R. or any of its subsidiary companies in meeting the interest or principal due upon any securities issued by such companies, the Government may dismiss the directors of

"RUN TO EARTH"

By the Author of
"Lady Audley's Secret," "Aurora Floyd," etc., etc.

This man was on brotherly terms with Sir Oswald, and was about the only creature who had dared to utter disagreeable truths to the baronet. He was very poor; but had never accepted the smallest favor from the hands of his wealthy friend. Sir Oswald was devotedly attached to him, and would have gladly opened his purse to him as to a brother; but he dared not offend the stern old soldier's pride by even hinting at such a desire.

Captain Copplestone came to Raynham prepared to remonstrate with his friend on the folly of his marriage. He arrived when the reception room was crowded with other visitors, and he stood by, looking on in grim disdain, while the newly arrived guests were pressing their felicitations on Sir Oswald.

By and bye the guests departed to their rooms, and the friends were left alone.

"Well, old friend", cried the baronet, stretching out both his hands to grasp those of the captain in a warmer salutation than that of his first welcome, "am I to have no word of congratulation from you?"

"What word do you want?" growled Copplestone. "If I tell you the truth, you won't like it; and if I were to tell you a lie, egad! I think the syllables would choke me. It has been hard enough for me to keep patience while all those idiots have been babbling their unmeaning compliments; and now that they've gone away to laugh at you behind your back, you'd better let me follow their example, and not risk the chance of a quarrel with an old friend by speaking my mind."

"You think me a fool, then, Copplestone?"

"Why, what else can I think of you? If a man of fifty must needs go and marry a girl of nineteen, he can't expect to be thought a Solon."

"Ah, Copplestone, when you have seen my wife, you will think differently."

"Not a bit of it. The prettier she is, the more fool I shall think you for there'll be so much the more certainty that she'll make your life miserable."

"Here she comes!" said the baronet; "look at her before you judge her too severely, old friend, and let her face answer for her truth."

The room in which the two men were standing opened into another larger apartment, and through the open folding doors Captain Copplestone saw Lady Eversleigh approaching. She was dressed in white—that pure, transparent muslin in which her husband loved best to see her—and one large natural rose was fastened amidst her dark hair. As she drew nearer to the baronet and his friend, the bluff old soldier's face softened.

The introduction was made by Sir Oswald, and Honoria held out her hand with her brightest and most bewitching smile.

"My husband has spoken of you very often, Captain Copplestone" she said; "and I feel as if we were old friends rather than strangers. I have pleasure in bidding welcome to all Sir Oswald's guests; but not such pleasure as I feel in welcoming you."

The soldier extended his bronzed hand, and grasped the soft white fingers in a pressure that was something like that of an iron vice. He looked at Lady Eversleigh with a serio-comic expression of bewilderment, and looked from her to the baronet.

"Well, Oswald, if the truth be told I think you had some excuse for your folly. She is a beautiful creature, and if there is any faith to be put in the human countenance, she is as good as she is beautiful."

The baronet grasped his friends hand with a pressure that was more eloquent than words. He believed implicitly in the captain's powers of penetration, and this favorable judgment of his wife he adored filled him with gratitude. It was not that the fiantest shadow of doubt obscured his own mind. He trusted her fully and unreservedly; but he wanted others to trust her also.

* * * * *

While Sir Oswald and his friend were enjoying a brief interval of confidential intercourse, Reginald Eversleigh and Victor Carrington lounged in a pleasant little sitting-room smoking their cigars, and leaning on the stone sill of the wide Gothic window.

They were talking, and talking very earnestly.

"You are a very clever fellow, I know, my dear Carrington", said Reginald; "but it is slow work, very slow work, and I don't see my way through it."

"Because you are as impatient as a child who has set his heart on a new toy", answered the surgeon, disdainfully. "You complain that the game is slow, and yet you see one move after another upon the board—and made successfully. A month ago you did not believe in the possibility of a reconciliation between your uncle and yourself, and yet that reconciliation has come about. A fortnight ago you would have laughed at the idea of my being here at Raynham, an invited guest; and yet here I am. Do you think there has been no patient thought necessary to work out this much of our scheme? Do you supose that I was on Thorpe Hill by accident that afternoon?"

"And you hope that something may come of your visit here?"

"I hope that much may come of it. I have already dared to drop hints of injustice done to you. That idea of injustice will rankle in your uncle's mind. I have my plans, Reginald, and ou have only to be patient, and to trust me."

"But why should you refuse to tell me the nature of our plans?"

"Because my plans are as yet but half formed. I may soon be able to speak more plainly. Do you see those two figures yonder, walking in the pleasaunce?"

"Yes, I see them—my uncle and his wife", answered Reginald, with a gesture of impatience.

"They are very happy—are they not? It is quite an Arcadian picture. I beg you you to contemplate it earnestly."

'What a fool you are, Carrington!" cried the young man, flinging away his cigar. "If my uncle chooses to make an idiot of himself, that is no reason why I should watch the evidence of his folly!"

"But there is another reason", answered Victor, with a sinister look in his glittering black eyes. "Look at the picture while you may, Reginald, for you will not have the chance of seeing it very often."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that the day is near at hand when Lady Eversleigh will fall from her high estate. I mean that an elevation as sudden as hers is often the forerunner of a sudden disgrace. The hour will come when Sir Oswald will mourn his fatal marriage as the one irrevocable mistake of his life; and when, in his despair, he will restore you, the disgraced nephew, to your place, as his acknowledged heir; because you will at least seem to him more worthy than his disgraced wife."

"And who is to bring this about?" asked Reginald, gazing at his friend in complete bewilderment.

"I am", answered the surgeon; "but before I do so I must have some understanding as to the price of my services. If the cat who pulled the chestnut out of the fire for the benefit of the monkey had made an agreement beforehand as to how much of the plunder he was to receive for his pains, the name of the animal would not have become a bye-word with posterity. When I have worked to win your fortune, I must have my reward, my dear Reginald."

"Do you suppose I should be ungrateful?"

"Of course not. But, you see I do not ask for your gratitude—I want a good sum down on the nail—hard cash. Your uncle's fortune, if you get two-thirds of it, will be worth thirty thousand a year; and for such a fortune you can very well afford to pay me twenty thousand in ready money within two years of your accession to the inheritance."

"Twenty thousand!"

"Yes: if you think the sum too much, we will say no more about it. The business is a very difficult one, and I scarcely care to engage in it."

"My dear Victor, you bewilder me I cannot bring myself to believe that you can bring about my restoration to my old place in my uncle's will; but if you do, the twenty thousand shall be yours."

"Good!" answered the surgeon, in his coolest and most business-like manner; "and I must have it in black and white. You will give me two promissory notes: one for ten thousand, to fall due a year hence—the other for the same sum, to fall due in two years."

"But if I do not get the fortune—and I am not likely to get it within that time; my uncle's life is a good one, and——"

"Never mind your uncle's life. I will give you an undertaking to cancel those notes of hand if you have not succeeded to the Raynham estates. And now here are stamps. You may as well fill in the body of the notes, and sign them at once, and so close the transaction."

"You are prepared with the stamps?"

"Yes; I am a man of business, although a man of science."

"Victor", said Reginald Eversleigh, "you sometimes make me shudder. There is something almost diabolical about you."

"But if I drag yonder fair lady down from her high estate, you would scarcely care if I were the foul fiend in person", said Carrington, looking at his friend with a sardonic smile. "Oh, I think I know you Reginald Eversleigh, better than you know me."

* * * * *

Amongst the guests who had arrived at the castle within the last few days was Lydia Graham, the young lady of whom the baronet had spoken to his nephew. She was a fascinating girl, with a bold, handsome face, briliant gray eyes, and aquiline nose, and a profusion of dark, waving hair. She was a woman who knew how to make the most of every charm with which nature had endowed her. She dressed superbly; but with an extravagance far beyond the limits of her means. She was, for this reason, deeply in debt, and her only chance of extrication from her difficulties lay in a brilliant marriage.

What all poetry and prose suffers if read by a discordant voice, all music suffers through rendering by a strident, harsh, unmusical piano. MUTT AND JEFF

Standing room was at a premium last night at Griffin's Opera House when Bud Fisher's quaint production of "Mutt and Jeff in Panama", was the attraction. The production proved to be a hit from start to finish. The adventures of Mutt and Jeff kept the audience convulsed whenever the pair was on the stage. Jerry Sullivan, who has been seen here twice previously in the role of Jeff, was back once again and in his new series of mishaps is funnier than ever, while Earl Redding got all kinds of fun out of the part of Mutt. The musical numbers were tuneful and well rendered. Miss Flora Russell, a decidedly dainty little Miss, danced and sang charmingly. Jethro warner sang several numbers in magnificent voice. "If I Had a Girl Like You," "You'll Come Back to Me", and "Moon Beams" were among the most popular of the songs. The costumes were good and the scenery effective.

OFFICIALS ARE IN SYMPATHY WITH ULSTER

LONDON, April 28.—Colonel Seely saw the Prime Minister today before the meeting of the Cabinet, which lasted two hours. The Evening News' Belfast correspondent declares that the police, coastguards, and other officials are in thorough sympathy with the volunteers. Any friend of the cause who crossed the channel took the opportunity of smuggling one or two rifles and as much ammunition as possible.

BECKER'S SECOND TRIAL

NEW YORK, April 2.—District Attorney Whitman appeared before Justice Seabury today and moved for a special panel of three hundred talesmen for the second trial of ex-Police Lieutenant Charles Becker, who is to be brought to the bar on May 6 for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler.

Mr. Whitman is ready to proceed with the trial on the day set, and it is understood that he has secured at least one witness, but he refused to discuss any part of the revised prosecution. It is expected that Martin Manton, Becker's new counsel, will apply on May 6 for a further delay in order that he may obtain complete familiarity with the details of the first trial.

IT WAS ONLY A PROMISE

Liberals have openly declared war on the Hudson Bay Railway enterprise. The value of the pledge to the West in 1911 can now be judged. Last year the hostility against this enterprise took the form of spreading malicious reports about the work at Port Nelson. Everything possible was done to discredit this undertaking. This session, A. K. McLean, financial critic of the Opposition, referred to this national undertaking as "a doubtful enterprise."

It remained for E. W. Nesbitt, member for North Oxford, to inaugurate the campaign of open opposition. Mr. Nesbitt gave the Liberal policy on the Hudson Bay enterprise during the budget debate.

"The hon. member for Brandon (Mr. Aikins) the other day gloried in the fact that the present Government is building the Hudson Bay Railway, and he condemned the late administration for not building it. Let me say that if there is anything which I shall be proud of in the future it is the fact that we were not stupid enough to build the Hudson Bay Railway. From what I have read of the Hudson Bay route I cannot see how it would be possible to lower the freight charges by the transportation of grain by that route. I am told that the road cannot be considered as a colonization road—that there are no lands to colonize there—and if that is the case I am quite sure that it is not worth while building a railway at enormous cost merely for the purpose of transporting the fish that may be caught in Hudson Bay.

Mr. LALOR: "Is it not a fact that the late Government committed the country to the building of the Hudson Bay Railway?

Mr. NESBITT: Quite right; they were foolishly committed by the violent clamor of the people of the West at that time to the building of the Hudson Bay Railway. I hope to live five or six years longer, and if I do you will find that I am absolutely right when I tell you that the Hudson Bay Railway will never pay for the carrying of that fish from Hudson Bay; it will never pay as a route for the transportation of grain. We have three transcontinental roads without it, and the construction of this road will involve an expenditure of $150,000,000 of public money, for which we will receive no benefit."

Liberals were committed to the building of this road. It was just before the 1911 election votes were wanted, and as they say now, "they were foolishly committed by the violent clamor of the people of the West at that time," but it was only for "that time"—until the elections were over. Mr. Nesbitt admits this when he says, "We were not stupid enough to build the Hudson Bay Railway." So, then, the promise of 1911 was only for "that time," and if the Liberals had been returned to power they would never have built this road, upon which the progress of the West is so dependent.

As you know, "catching a cold" simply means allowing the germs of a cold to catch you.

Usually these germs, which abound wherever people congregate, gain their first foothold in the mucous membrane lining the nasal passages. Here they multiply if unchecked, and quickly set up an inflammation. Then follows that smarting, burning, stuffed up, "headachy" feeling—that cold in the head that is so depressing and so likely to develop into something more serious.

Fossal Balm goes right to the spot, kills the germs and checks the cold. Fossal Balm is an antiseptic, healing ointment, put up in a collapsible tube with a long, nozzle-shaped opening. This little nozzle, inserted in the nostril, carries the Fossal Balm well up into the passage, where it quickly spreads over the inflamed membrane, destroys the germs that are causing the trouble, soothes the irritation, clears the passages, and gives grateful and lasting relief.

Get a 50c tube of Fossal Balm from your Druggist or write for it direct to us. National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 4

RHEUMATISM

SCIATICA AND LUMBAGO QUICKLY CURED BY "KEPHALDOL."

A druggist in Toronto said that he was asking an Old Country customer of his about KEPHALDOL TABLETS. This customer told him "I suffered from severe Rheumatism and Sciatica for twenty years hardly ever being free from these troubles. I read about KEPHALDOL in the Glasgow papers and sent home for some. Three hours after taking two tablets, the pain was almost gone, and after taking six or seven, I hadn't a bit of pain.

This druggist went in to see his doctor about his wife and asked him if he had ever heard of KEPHALDOL. The doctor said: "Yes, I understand KEPHALDOL is a reliable sedative and anodyne relieving pain without affecting the heart or the vital organs. Since KEPHALDOL has been introduced into Canada, I have prescribed it in cases of severe Headache and Neuralgia and just recently succeeded in helping a most severe case of La Grippe with it."

Since then, this druggist has ordered KEPHALDOL and recommended it to those of his customers who wanted something to relieve pain. If you are unable to get KEPHALDOL Tablets at your druggist's, send 50c to Kephaldol 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

PROTECTIONIST LIBERALS

Prominent among the Liberal speakers during the long debate in the present session of Parliament, were some protectionists. One of the most advanced of these, more advanced than most Conservatives, was W. F. Carroll, a Liberal member from Nova Scotia. He actually criticised the changes in the tariff affecting steel products, claiming that they did not go far enough; in fact, he was ready to stand for a bounty being paid to the manufacturers of structural steel. He laid down the policy that infant industries which had not reached the strength to capture the home market should be protected, and he placed the steel industry in this class. Another Liberal, E. W. Nesbitt, of North Oxford, came out against free agricultural implements. He said he would reduce the duty slightly further than the Conservatives had done, but he would not take it away altogether, as his own party proposed.

PROGRESS OF GERMANY

For weeks, of course, nearly all that the House of Commons has talked about has been questions of tariff, and occasionally there have been some highly interesting statements. One of the most valuable speeches was made by W. G. Weichel, of North Waterloo, a German-Canadian. Naturally, he is a keen student of affairs in the country of his ancestors, and he finds noteworthy comparison between the progress made in protectionist Germany with that made in free trade England. The advance made by Germany provides some hard facts which the free traders cannot disprove. Not alone in the production of raw materials, but in the manufacture of these Germany has made progress that is astounding, while there has been a general advance in the condition of the workingmen of that country.

CURRENT COMMENT

The Toronto Globe thinks the Government of Ontario is going to pieces, but it has nothing to say of the condition our provincial affairs were in when the present government assumed control. It appears to be a matter of who is guiding the ship of state.

The Canadian output of canned salmon ranges in the neighborhood of $8,000,000 to $10,000,000. The intelligent housewife should not neglect the salmon."

EATING RELIEVES STOMACH TROUBLE

A Prominent Physician's Advice

"Eat good foods and plenty of them. Dieting, in many cases is almost criminal. Get back to normal. To do so you must have the proper quantity of nourishment. You need it for brain or physical work. Probably there is nothing the matter with your stomach except acidity. That is merely an abnormal secretion of acid in the stomach. Neutralize that acid and your stomach trouble end at once. Neglect may mean ulcers if not cancer of the stomach. Do not take patented medicines or pepsin tablets for dyspepsia. Simply take a neutralizer of acid. Decidedly the best neutralizer is ordinary bisurated magnesia. It is inexpensive and you can get it at any drug store. Take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water after each meal. The relief will be immediate."

UNITED STATES RUSH TROOPS TO THE FRONT

Long Sessions at the Argentine Legation Are Being Held By the Three Peace Envoys, But In the Capitol Mexico Has Been Forced Out by Colorado Affair — Gen. Funston Lands Forces.

WASHINGTON, April 29. — The Mexican crisis is now centreing on the issue between those who are seeking, through the good offices and intermediation of Latin-America, to find some middle ground for pacific adjustment, and those who regard a resort to arms as an inevitable consequence of what has occurred.

Throughout the day two distinct branches of activity were manifest here—that of the envoys of Argentina, Brazil and Chile, in formulating a plan of adjustment to be submitted to the United States and the Huerta regime, and that of the military and naval forces of the United States, which continue to go forward steadily in preparation for any eventuality which may develop. The arrival of Gen. Funston and a brigade of 5,000 troops at Vera Cruz, was one of the notable military developments of the day.

Chief interest was directed to the sessions of the South American envoys, lasting through the day and late into the evening. The meetings are held at the Argentina legation, where, seated about a long mahogany table, the three envoys deliberated much as an international court would weigh a case of supreme importance pending its decision.

At the White House President Wilson and his Cabinet advisers held a lengthy meeting, devoted chiefly, however, to the Colorado situation, although the Mexican crisis continued in the foreground. To a large extent, however, it was felt that the Mexican situation was now before those who had undertaken to exercise their good offices, and care was taken not to embarrass the efforts of the envoys by any announcements of conditions of settlement which the United States would insist upon. A spirit of optimism over the progress of the negotiations was distinctly apparent in executive quarters.

CHURCHILL MAKES OFFER.

Unofficial Proposal to Carson Arouses Interest In London.

LONDON, April 29. — Much interest has been created by a new offer to Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader, made by Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in the course of a speech in the House of Commons last night. The Minister invited Sir Edward Carson to make an attempt to compromise the Home Rule question on the federal basis.

Mr. Churchill is reported to have spoken entirely for himself and without the authority of the Cabinet. Many of the Liberals are indignant at him for taking the course he did, contending that it will only be interpreted as a sign of weakness on the part of the Government. John Redmond, in an interview, said he did not understand there was anything new in Mr. Churchill's offer, but that if anything came of it he was ready to exert himself to placate the Ulstermen and reach an honorable settlement of the question.

The view of the Unionist leaders here is that Mr. Churchill's offer must have been debated in a Cabinet Council held earlier in the day. They believe it entirely changes the situation and improves the prospect of an agreement being reached. Andrew Bonar Law, the Opposition leader in the House of Commons, is said to be ready to renew negotiations with Premier Asquith if the Government will take the initiative.

TROOPS ARE SENT.

n Orders Federal Forces To the Scene of Strike Riots.

SHINGTON, April 29.—On the ent request of Governor Elias M. mons of Colorado, President Wilson yesterday ordered Federal troops sent to the scene of strike disorder, and issued a proclamation directing all persons "engaged in or connection with said domestic violence" to retire peaceably to their homes on or before April 30. Secretary of War Garrison at once directed the 2nd Squadron, 5th Cavalry, at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, under command of ajor Lucius R. Holbrook, to go to rinidad, Colo., and troops E. and 12th Cavalry, at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyom., under Major Nathaniel P. McClure to Canyon City, Colo. These troops, which will go out without their horses, will arrive probably some time to-day.

TWO BYE-ELECTIONS.

Deaths In British Commons Lend Excitement To Situation.

LONDON, April 29. — The death yesterday of W. E. Harvey, the miners' representative from Northeast Derbyshire, creates a vacancy in the Parliamentary representation of Northeast Derbyshire. The late member's majority was 1,750 over Dr. Court, local Unionist, who has several times contested the seat. The bye-election will be rather piquant. Harvey joined the labor party, but supported Barnet Kenyon, in the neighboring Ilkeston division, who is now classed as a Liberal.

Both sides in Grimsby are unprepared for an election through the death of Sir George Doughty. Sir Berkeley Sheffield is spoken of as the Unionist candidate. The Grimsby contest is certain to be a momentous one. The Radicals already are prophesying the winning of the seat, seeing that Doughty had a peculiar hold on the constituency's favor which another Unionist is unlikely to maintain.

Still Wrangling Over Terms.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 29. — The offer of Major R. W. Leonard of a military residence at Queen's University over which there has been much controversy, was discussed at a meeting of the council of university yesterday afternoon. No recommendation was made, the matter being left over for the trustees to decide at the meeting to-day.

The council is divided on the question, one half holding that Queen's should have full control of management while others claim the board of control should be equally divided between members of the militia and the college.

Quebec Rejoices at News.

QUEBEC, April 29.—The bells of all the Roman Catholic churches of this city pealed out joyously at 11 o'clock yesterday when the news of the elevation of His Grace Archbishop Begin to the dignity of cardinal was officially confirmed in a communication from Mgr. Stagni, apostolic delegate at Ottawa, in which he also transmitted the cablegram which he received from Cardinal del Val.

More For Newfoundland.

OTTAWA, April 29. — In the House yesterday afternoon the Prime Minister alluded again to the Newfoundland sealing disaster and stated that, as it was worse than at first was thought, the Government proposed to increase its grant to the relief fund from $10,000 to $25,000.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he had great pleasure in supporting the motion.

AMERICANS IN CANADA LOOKING FOR FIGHT

EDMONTON, Alta., April 29.—Native-born and naturalized Americans, representing 27 states, now living in Edmonton and other parts of central and northern Alberta, were among the callers at the American consulate here to ascertain if a call had been made for volunteers to participate in the Mexican hostilities. Willis Lang and Calvin J. Round, formerly of Fort Worth, Tex., who have been prospecting in the Wabisca Lake district, walked a hundred miles to be in readiness.

"There is absolutely no doubt as to the eagerness of hundreds of men in this district to go to the front," said George S. Montgomery, the American consul in Edmonton, today. "Many of them are laborers, who have been working in railroad and lumber camps all winter. They spoke with me about the threatened strike of the Independent Workers of the World, saying they were just as ready and willing to fight against these men as against the Mexican forces."

Some of the other callers at the consulate during the last few days are men occupying positions and a few of them are engaged in business. Mr. Montgomery also was interviewed by citizens of Canada and British subjects, who appeared eager to go to the front in the event President Wilson calls for volunteers.

The newspaper offices are besieged day and night by men in all walks of life, also retired officers and soldiers of the British army and navy, for despatches from Washington and the scene of conflict, and the Mexican situation is easily the chief topic of conversation in hotels, restaurants, clubs, workshops, offices and stores.

British Baptist Fund.

LONDON, April 29.—The Baptists of Great Britain Monday night celebrated by a great mass meeting in Albert Hall the completion of the fund of $750,000, to provide more adequate stipends for the ministers of the church. At present 140 ministers receive less than $375 yearly, while 700 are paid less than $750.

There is some heart-burning amongst the more strict members of the denomination, because it is claimed that participation in the benefits of the fund means control of the individual minister by the board of trustees.

AN EARLY DIP

Fred Newman, a young man who is employed with Mr. W. W. Anderson of Ameliasburg Township, on Monday donned his bathing suit and took a swim in the waters of the bay. The water was by no means very warm, but Newman apparently did not mind it, and was none the worse for his adventure.

To Cure Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness and head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected a complete cure after all else has failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear a watch tick have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear.

Therefore, if you know someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrh, or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand to them and you will be the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double strength), about 75c worth. Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of moist or granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one teaspoonful four times a day.

The first dose promptly ends the most distressing head noises, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., while the hearing rapidly returns and the system is invigorated by the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell and mucus dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms that show the presence of catarrhal poison, and which are quickly overcome by this efficacious treatment. Nearly ninety per cent. of all ear troubles are directly caused by catarrh; therefore, there are but few people whose hearing cannot be restored by this simple home treatment. Every person who is troubled with catarrh any form should give this prescription a trial. There is nothing better.

Important:—In ordering Parmint always specify that you want Double Strength; your druggist has it or he can street, Montreal, P.Q., who make a spe- with head noises catarrhal deafness or get it for you; if not, send 75c to the International Laboratories 74 St Antoine St. Montreal, P.Q., who make a speciality of it.

A PERTINENT INQUIRY ON THE LETTING OF THE PAVING CONTRACT

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

As a resident ratepayer of the city of Belleville, and also interested in the contract for paving Front and Bridge streets, I wish to place certain facts before the public and ratepayers in connection with the awarding of the paving contract to the highest bidders, Messrs. Foley & Gleeson of Ottawa.

(1) Both Mr. Harvey and myself have had an extensive experience in nearly all classes of construction and engineering work, having done work for the Dominion and Provincial Governments, several cities, towns and counties in Ontario, as well as for large corporations and private individuals, amounting in value to approximately one million dollars ($1,000,000) within the past ten years, and we defy any one to show any contract or work that we have undertaken that was not completed in a satisfactory manner.

(2) We have made a special study of concrete work, which is a large and essential item in the cost of the concrete base for any permanent pavement and could have performed that part of the contract at a lower cost than any other contractor outside of the city of Belleville.

(3) We proposed, had we been awarded the contract, to have arranged to have the entire work of laying the Asphaltic Concrete wearing surface and binder performed by the best and most practical men to be found in that line of work, using only the best plant and machinery obtainable for paving work. These men have had long years of experience in laying all classes of asphalt pavements, thereby ensuring the best and most permanent work obtainable by any other contractor, and no contractor tendering for this work could have offered more in the way of experience or superior workmanship.

(4) Our tender was the only tender submitted to the Chairman of Public Works that was in strict accordance with the specifications upon which all tenders had to comply. Although we considered from a vast amount of information secured from independent sources, that Trinidad Lake Asphalt is not the equal in quality to several other standard brands of refined asphalts, we submitted tenders covering the use of both Trinidad Lake Asphalt and Aztec Brand Mexican Asphalt, either one of which at our tender would have saved the City of Belleville and the ratepayers on Front and Bridge streets several thousand dollars.

(5) We offered to deposit with the city either ten per cent of the contract price in cash, or the same amount in city debentures, for ten years as a guarantee on our work, and in addition a guarantee bond from the U. S. Asphalt Refining Co. of New York City, that their asphalt would outwear Trinidad Lake Asphalt, under similar conditions. Did Messrs. Foley and Gleeson offer any better guarantee? If not, why not, at an increased cost to the citizens of Belleville over our tender of the sum of $7,415.14?

(6) We would like the Chairman of Public Works and those members of the Council who voted to award the contract to an outside firm with no better guarantee, at an increased cost to the citizens of Belleville of over $7,000, to explain, if they can, this uncalled for waste of public money. We would also like to know, as the lowest tenderers, why Messrs. Foley & Gleeson's tender submitted on March 23rd of $2.38 per square yard, which was exactly the same price and on similar specifications as they tendered the second time on April 23rd, WAS NOT ACCEPTED, thereby saving all the other contractors tendering the first time the trouble and expense in submitting new tenders, with apparently no prospects of receiving fair treatment by a majority of the Council. These are only a few of the facts in connection with Front street paving that seem to be puzzling a large majority of the best citizens of Belleville at the present time, and perhaps if the few pertinent questions referred to in this letter were truly answered, more light would be shed on why the tax rate in this city does not show any signs of decreasing.

In conclusion, I wish to thank those members of the Council and the large number of citizens who have supported our proposition.

How to Be Healthy

Fine Address to the Outlook Club by Local Physician

Dr. R. J. P. McCulloch addressed the members and friends of the Baptist Outlook Club last Monday evening on the question of health. The address was racy and informal, yet packed full of valuable suggestions for rational living. The doctor is one of the most brilliant members of the younger medical fraternity of Belleville, and his views represent all that is best in advanced and specialised medical science. His address could well be epitomized by the Arabian proverb: "He who has health has hope, and he who has hope has everything." He laid down the following principles for rational living:

(1) It is the duty of every man to look after his health. People admire strength, and Christianity becomes attractive when men see a sound mind in a sound body. Christ's gospel could never have been delivered by one who was diseased.

(2) It is the duty of a man to be a success in his chosen profession, and to be efficient a man must live rationally. The fate of a nation, or business, concern, or even a church, has often depended on the good or bad digestion of a prime minister, a chairman, or a deacon.

(3) We should unite to promote civic health laws, and to stamp out diseases that are the products of ignorance and neglect. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure in this respect.

(4) Alcohol, considered solely from the standpoint of sheer science, is deleterious to health and efficiency. Here the doctor related a series of experiments by a noted German specialist on animals and students which proved conclusively that alcoholic stimulants dull the intellect, lower vitality, and reduce the power of mental clarity and concentration. This section of the address was particularly keen and well reasoned out, and was really more effective than the dying-mother and brutal-father stories and pathos of the old-time temperance orator.

(5) A cheerful outlook on life is a vital aid to health. Health and good humor are a sort of Siamese twins, they flourish together and are to the human body like sunshine to vegetation and flowers. We should cultivate friends, live out of doors as much as possible, read good books and never lose our faith and trust in God, humanity and ourselves.

At the close of this capital address a number of questions were put to the Doctor, which he answered briefly and wittily. Some of the questions were: "What do you think of Fletcherism?" "Which is the best exercise, rowing or canoeing?" "What do you think of Christian Science?" "Are there good germs as well as bad ones?"

JACKSON WILL RUN NO MORE

New York, April 28.—A. N. S. Jackson, the 1500-metre Olympic champion and the fastest miler in all England, who ran as anchor mile for the victorious Oxford team in the greatest relay race ever run, yesterday announced that he is through with athletic competitions forever. Jackson will complete his law course at Oxford during the coming summer session and will commence practising his profession immediately.

"In England," said Jackson, "the college athlete considers participation in athletic competitions as part as his curriculum, and if he is at all capable, considers it his duty to represent his university or college. As far as I am concerned, I first of all indulged in athletics for the healthful qualities brought by the training and will therefore continue to run occasionally, but just for the love of the sport and not in competition."

So Jackson will, it is regretted, be lost to England at the Berlin Olympic meet in 1916.

SUDDEN DEATH OF WM. FITZGIBBON

Well Known Lacrosse Enthusiast is Dead at Cornwall

CORNWALL April 29.—The announcement this morning of the sudden death at the Hotel Dieu at 3 a.m. today of Wm. Fitzgibbon came as a great shock to his many friends in Cornwall, as Mr Fitzgibbon was at business until 7.30 last night, when he collapsed in his store. Medical aid was summoned and he was removed to the Hotel Dieu, where he passed away a few hours later.

In the lacrosse world Mr. Fitzibbon was always a prominent figure, for years filling the position of president of the Cornwall Lacrosse club and in the year 1913 he occupied the position of president of the N.L.U. At all times his advice on matters of importance in connection with lacrosse was sought. While not an active officer of the C.L.C. for the last couple of years, he was always prepared to do his share to keep alive the interest of Canada's national game.

At the time of his death he was a member of the dry goods firm of J. E. Snetsinger & Co.; he was also manager of the citizens' band and played in that organization for many years. He belonged to St. Columban Court, Catholic Order of Foresters and Ontario Council, Knights of Columbus. The late Mr. Fitzgibbon was a native of Ottawa but came to Cornwall when quite young and was employed in the establishments of D. Mann and Duncan McRae. In 1883 he joined the staff of J. G. Snetsinger and four years later, with J. E. Snetsinger, was taken into the firm and in 1893 the two latter gentlemen bought out the business and conducted it under the firm name of J. E. Snetsinger & Co.

He is survived by one half-brother, Patrick McNeil, of Prince Albert, Sask., and two half-sisters, Mrs. Ladouceur, of St. Andrews East, Que., and Mrs John Tyo, of Rochester, N.Y.

COBALT MINERS MAKE HAUL OF SILVER

COBALT, April 29.—Last Saturday four Finlanders, all Cobalt miners, were arrested with 200 pounds of silver ore in their possession and at the trial yesterday three of them turned King's evidence against one who is regraded as the ringleader, Emil Wippula. Evidence was given to the effect that three of the men, Wippula excepted, were wearing waistcoats filled with silver ore weighing all told, 200 pounds, which in court was valued as $6.75 a pound. Wippula got two years in Central Prison and the others were sent to three months' hard labor each in North Bay Prison.

TRAGEDIES ON THE LAKES RENEWED

DULUTH, Minn., April 29.—The tragedies of the Great Lakes have commenced again. This morning wreckage found near here indicated the loss, with twenty of a crew of the steamer Benjamin Noble, running between Lake Superior ports with a cargo of coal.

Severe gales have been raging on the lakes for two days. The lost steamer and crew belonged to Detroit. Five other vessels are overdue here and several at Fort William and Port Arthur.

A TRAIN'S EXCITING RACE WITH FIRE

MILFORD Conn., April 29.—With the engine cab a mass of flames and the engineer and fireman sticking pluckily to their posts, an eastbound express on the New York, New Haven and Hardford Railway last night raced into Milford where the local firemen previously notified put out the fire. Both the engineer [illegible] firemen were burned, but not seriously.

A back draught caused the blaze. At Naugatuck Junction word was telephoned ahead to have the local fire department at the depot.

The train was delayed for an hour, the passengers swarming out of the cars and watching the work of the firemen. The train later proceeded to New Haven, its destination.

WOMAN CAPTAIN ON OCEAN LINER

Danish Woman Receires Master's Certificate—Husband Surgeon On Same Steamer

COPENHAGEN, April 29.—Frau Baudinz, wife of a ship's surgeon, is the first woman to command a transatlantic liner. She has just received the Danish Government's certificate authorizing her to be skipper of ocean-going steamers, and has been appointed commander of a ship running between Copenhagen and the United States. Her husband will be surgeon on the same vessel, and of course must obey her orders while afloat.

CHIEF NOW WANTS FOUR POLICEWOMEN

MONTREAL, April 29.—Although the city charter contains no provision for making such an innovation, Chief of Police Campeau in a report submitted to the Board of Control yesterday afternoon stated that he was in favor of appointing four policewomen to the Montreal force, as he thought they would be able to do good service in devoting their attention to women and young girls in need of protection.

Chief City Attorney Laurendeau, who has been instructed to look up the charter on the matter, reported that the present wording of the law required that the police force be composed of men. There would, the chief attorney said, be no difficulty in engaging some women as aids to the police, but the law made no provision to swear them in as members of the force.

The Controllers, who appeared to be strongly in favor of appointing some policewomen as suggested by the Local Council of Women, have asked the chief attorney to report to them whether there is not some way by which the women, if engaged, could be sworn.

SEARCH OF RICH BRIDES.

Matrimonial Agents Barred to German Officers.

BERLIN, April 29.—German officers in search of rich brides, who communicate with matrimonial agents will in future be subject to instant dismissal from the army and with loss of pension.

This secret order, it is stated, has been sent to all officers of the army and navy, certain specially notorious matrimonial agencies being mentioned by name.

The order was doubtless occasioned by the recent disclosures in the court in which women agents and highly placed officers were concerned. During the trial of "Countess Creuberg," it was shown that she and others had arranged for marriages with special regard to officers seeking rich wives.

BABY BORN ON LINER PLACED IN INCUBATOR

NEW YORK, April 29.—The arrival of the stork on the Cunard liner Ivernia, which left Naples on April 12, was responsible for a radiogram being sent ashore yesterday for an incubator and an ambulance to meet the liner at her pier.

The wireless was sent by Oric Bates, a Boston archaeologist, who, with his wife, was returning from Egypt. Eight days out from Naples a Bates baby boy arrived. It was with difficulty the baby was kept alive until the vessel reached port, when the baby was placed in an incubator and taken to a private hospital.

YOUNG MOTHER ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

SARNIA, Ont., April 29.—Annie Lauzon, aged 22 years, attempted to commit suicide in her apartments in Port Huron and would have succeeded but for a dose of alcohol a policeman poured down her throat to offset the acid. She stated she was despondent and did not care to live. Later she added that she had been married and had two children residing in Canada. She is now out of danger, and will be all right in a few days.

OPPORTUNITY PERIOD IN THE INTELLIGENCER'S AUTOMOBILE CONTESTS STARTS TO-DAY

Ten Days of Golden Opportunity For Candidates Who Wish to Have any of the Many Valuable Prizes That are to be Given for a Little Effort

A QUICK, ENERGETIC EFFORT REQUIRED

Hustle, Hurry, Wake up if You Are Going to be Among the Winners in This Great Contest---Last Wednesday Night Was a Record Breaking Success

In blaze of glory the biggest and best offer, known as Booster Period, in The Inteligencer's great contest ended Wednesday night at ten o'clock, and the second largest vote offer known as "Opportunity Period" starts to-day.

"Opportunity Period" starts to-day and will end Saturday night, May 9th, at 10 o'clock, and is put on for the purpose of introducing new entries. It also affords excellent opportunity for those who are already in the race, but were unable to get as early a start in "Booster Period" as they should. The late start has seriously hampered some of the candidates, and it was at their request that the vote proposition was put on.

A Million Votes Easy

While "Opportunity Period is not as good as "Booster Period" candidates should make the best of the offer. It is still possible for a new candidate to enter and carry off one of the large prizes, if he or she takes advantage. Stop, take out your pencil and do a little figuring and see what you can do on this offer in the way of getting a good reserve vote. First you should go over your list of friends and nearest relatives; after this is done an effort should be made to procure the subscription of those who have not as yet given a subscription to The Intelligencer. Show them what it means to you to secure their subscription. The Intelligencer is the largest and best newspaper published in this part of the Province. It is possible that one single subscription may mean the winning of the Grand Prize for you.

This is absolutely the largest number that ever will be given on subscriptions during the remainder of the campaign.

Don't Hesitate

If candidates show these figures to their friends they will rally to their support with a two years' subscription instead of a six months. The friends of all the candidates take some paper, why not The Intelligencer? Whatever paper they take they must pay for sometime, and by taking it during this campaign for a certain period they will not be bothered about paying the collector each month, and when they help some hard working candidate with a subscription they may be responsible for that cardidate winning the first greatest victory in their life. It is not the value of the prizes that a gerat many candidates are working for, it is the honor and the distinction of being the only one in this part of Ontario who has friends and energy to win first place in this great proportion.

No Offer Like Opportunity Period

This offer will not be extended. It will not be repeated. This is positively the last chance. The result of the Contest Department depends upon the effort of candidates during Opportunity Period. Candidates during Booster Perjod cannot afford to pass up this Opportunity Period. If they do they may find when the votes the counted that they will win one of he smaller prizes instead of the Grand Prize as they now anticipate. A great many of the very best candidates are just getting started. The next few weeks will show who are the best workers. It will show who has the nerve and courage to stick in the race to the end.

Don't Listen To Knockers

Don't listen to the fellow who comes up to you and tells you that so and so has several millions of votes. Don't pay any attention to the many stories that are brought to you, if you expect to win the Grand Prize. In a proposition of this kind there are always people that like to discourage the person that is trying to earn a little honest fame and fortune. Why do these people do it? Look at it in a business way for a moment. Is it because they feel that you are not able to look after yourself and need their assistance. Is it from experience that they speak? Have they ever taken such an interest in you before? And a thousand other questions could be asked, but the fair-minded candidate that looks about will find that the very one that has been giving him advice generally has somewhere about him an axe to grind. It is not because you are so and so that they are so much interested in your welfare. It is because you are going to hurt them or their friends, and, as a general rule, the class of people that are always telling you what to do in a proposition of this kind are not noted for their enthusiasm or for being public-spirited. Look on the bright side of life and go out the beginning of this week with a determination and make up your mind that you are going to win, no matter who says you cannot, and you will find that success will crown your efforts. It is the things that look impossible that stirs the true Canadian blood. If winning the Grand Prize were an easy matter we would not have such a high class list of candidates. It is for this very fact that so many are looking on with jealous eyes and are trying to discourage the strongest candidates. Make up your mind you will win and you will. It is better to fail trying than not to try.

GOVERNMENT DRIVES GOOD C.N. BARGAIN

OTTAWA, April 29—The announcement of the details of the arrangement arrived at with the C. N. R. made first to the Conservative caucus yesterday morning and publicly to-night, has been received with the greatest satisfaction by the Government members. Opinion was practically unanimous that the Government had driven a good bargain and one that is in every way in the interests of the Dominion.

The proposals cause a complete surprise. It was known that the Goverment was insisting on rigid concessions, but it was never expected that they would be able to make the bargain that has been closed. It is the first time that a Canadian Government has ever attempted to secure anything so substantial in return for the credit of the country. In this case the country secures 40 per cent. of the whole C. N. R. system including its profitable express and telegraph companies and in return simply lends its credit to the amount of $15,000,000. The Liberal Government in 1911 guaranteed bonds to almost the same extent but obtained nothing in return.

Notice of the resolution upon which the bill to validate the agreement will be based was given by Premier Borden to-night. It is understood that the question will be taken up in the House on Thursday of this week. Before the agreement comes into effect all the subsidary companies will have to declare their allegiance to the terms.

It did not come as a surprise today when R. B. Bennett, of Calgary, and W. F. Nickle of Kingston, after hearing the statement concerning the affairs of the C.N.R. and the proposed action of the Government at the caucus this morning, announced that they were opposed to it by walking out of caucus this morning. Ever since the C.N.R. lobby began both these members have expressed strong views concerning it. Their action does not mean that they have broken with their party, but simply in effect that they disapprove of the proposed agreement.

It is understood Mr. Bennett and also Mr. Nickle disagree with the Government on two points and that they desire, first, a temporary arrangement by means of which the construction of the road will continue during the next year, and in the second place that a public investigation be held into the standing and security of all the various parts of the Canadian Northern system during the next year.

Both Messrs. Bennett and Nickle left the caucus after hearing the Premier's statement of the proposed agreement and will probably make speeches in the House giving their reasons for their opposition. No other member of the Conservative party has signified opposition to the agrement.

NEW YORK CLAIMS POPULATION OF 5,333,537

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The population of New York city, as estimated by the United States Bureau of the Census, will be 5,333,637 on July 1, this year. The figures are based on the arbitrary rate of calculation pursued by the Census Bureau.

The population of New York city at the time of the census of 1910 was 4,766,833. The estimated gain in four years has been 566,654.

According to these estimates the population of New York state for the same date is 9,899,761, a gain of 786,047.

PARIS, April 30.—Wilfrid de Fenville, the oldest aeronaut in the world, died yesterday at the age of 90. As early as 1856 he began experimenting with balloons and made remarkable ascents. During the siege of Paris he crossed the Prussian lines in a balloon.

STEAMER KEYPORT IS QUARANTINED

Had ton of Contaminated Ice Aboard Health Boards Act

KINGSTON, April 29.—The steamer Keyport, which is unloading coal at the Frontenac Lumber and Coal Company's dock at the foot of Beverely street, is at present under quarantine, the ban having been placed on it this morning by the local Board of Health. The reason for this action is that a local butcher stored a ton of contaminated ice on the steamer and the Board will not allow the steamer to leave port until the ice has been removed.

The Customs House authorities have been authorized not to issue clearance papers to the steamer until ordered to do to do so by the board of Health.

GROSSLY ONE SIDED AND ANTI-BRITISH

(Intelligencer Special)

LONDON, April 30.—The Times publishes an earnest protest from Massachusetts against the "grossly one sided anti-British character" of despatches to American and Canadian journals regarding the Irish crisis. It says they reach an even lower depth of flagrant misrepresentation than during the Boer war, and especially mentions what it calls O'Connor's turgid effusions and sneering references to Bonar Law.

Counsel Says She Has Not Recovered From the Shock

TORONTO, April 29.—"This woman is the mother of little Tommy Prince, who was killed by two companions near Port Credit, while they were out shooting. She has never recovered from the shock."

This was the plea put forward by counsel for Mary Cris, a middle-aged woman who pleaded guilty, before Judge Coatsworth, to a charge of stealing from a departmental store.

"I am sorry that the woman has had trouble, but I cannot depart from my custom. Five days in jail," said His Honor.

MARRIAGE AT VERONA

BERONA, April 29.—A quiet wedding took place on Saturday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Burnette, of Verona, when their second daughter, Nettie May, was united in marriage to Charles Henry, son of Albert Buskard, of Belleville by the Rev. E. J. Dowdell, of Sydenham. The bride was accompanied by her sister, Bella. A wedding reception was given by the bride's father and mother on Saturday evening and a very dainty repast was partaken of by the guests.

The bride looked very charming in a cream satin dress with trimmings to match, and her sister, Bella was daintly attired in a pale silk mull. The bride received many pretty and useful presents The young couple will soon leave for the north where Mr. Buskard will follow his profession as mining engineer.

Note:—The above, which has been contributed, we publish in full.

GIVES BALL AT HAVANA

New U. S. Minister Criticized For His Entertainment

HAVANA, April 29.—The United States Minister Gronzales to-night gave his first entertainment on a large scale since his arrival here. There were some criticism because of the giving of a ball, while the United States is practically at war with Mexico, but the invitations were issued prior to the outbreak of hostilities.

VILLA'S ATTITUDE MAY CHANGE WITH FALL OF TAMPICO

Has Noved His 7,000 Troops to Chihuahua in Order to Dominate Rebel Politics

EL PASO, Texas, April 30.—Pancho Villa's personal brigade of troops, numbering about 7,000 men, and known as "the Brigada Villa," reached Chihuahua City from Torreon yesterday, according to Americans who arrived today from that city.

The movement of the troops can have but two meanings. Villa either brought up his personal army from the front in order to be strong enough to force his opinion on Carranza in the present controversy with the United States, or Villa is insincere in his protestations of friendship for the United States and is moving his troops towards the border. Villa's American friends are disinclined to believe the latter, and are inclined to credit the troop movement to the rebel general's desire to have military forces at Chihuahua sufficient to dominate rebel politics.

Generally here it is believed that Villa is sincere and that so far as the rebels at the present are concerned the United States has nothing to fear in the way of trouble.

What may come in the event of the rebels capturing Tampico is another question. Today they are talking that they do not care about the United States embargo on war munitions, as they expect to capture Tampico in a few days, when they will be able to get all the arms they want. Should the United States continue the Tampico blockade after it falls into rebel hands, the rebel officials do not hesitate to say that this would be considered a violation of rebel territory.

According to a Washington despatch, the State Department has appealed to the Constitutionalists in the vicinity of Tampico to agree to a neutralization of the territory, including the oil fields and tanks. The British Legation in the City of Mexico is at the same time making an effort to induce General Huerta to join in this scheme of protection.

Further confirmation is had today of Villa's supremacy at Chihuahua, but it is said that Carranza has not yet supplemented his note to President Wilson. In some quarters it is now said that there may be no further exchange between Carranza and President Wilson, and that Carranza may let his note stand and do nothing. The tone of the note indicated that he meant war, but Villa has informed him that there will be nothing of the kind allowed.

STEAMER'S LOSS CERTAIN.

Wreckage From Benjamin Noble Found—Twenty on Board.

DULUTH, Minn., April 30.—That the steamer Benjamin Noble, her crew of 20 or more, and a large cargo of railroad iron, were swallowed up in the turbulent waters of storm-swept Lake Superior Tuesday night, was made almost certain yesterday when the life-saving crew picked up wreckage from the steamer off Minnesota Point, Duluth. All efforts to find the hulk of the steamer have proved fruitless.

The general belief is that she missed the Duluth entrance and struck the point and foundered in very deep water. In addition to the high seas Tuesday night, there was a heavy mist and snow, and the Duluth entry light was out.

Up to last evening no bodies had come ashore. Reports by excited people who lined Park Point that bodies had been found yesterday afternoon proved incorrect.

While the Noble was trying to make the harbor, the south light on the Duluth entry pier went out. No blame is attached by marine men to Capt. Prior, who has charge of the lighthouse here, or to members of his crew. If the fault lies anywhere, vessel men say, it is with the antiquated equipment of the lighthouse department. The lighthouse has no electrical service and when a storm of such proportions as that of Tuesday and Wednesday night comes up, there is no way for the lighthouse men to get back and forth to attend to the lights.

The list of dead or missing includes: Capt. John E. Iseshardt, aged 31, Milwaukee; First Mate Geo. R. Longlary, Niagara Falls, N.Y.; Chief Engineer A. C. Coger, Port Clinton, Ohio; Steward John Coleman, Oswego, N.Y.; Assistant Steward Thomas Proud, Oswego; Fireman Otto Guntch, Toledo, O.; Fireman Wm. Goulett, Toledo.

MINERS GIVING UP ARMS.

An Era of Peace Seems To Be Dawning In Colorado Mine Districts.

DENVER, Col., April 30.—Under a truce agreement, which stopped the fighting at Walsenberg yesterday afternoon, approximately 650 strikers to-day are surrendering arms to militia officers appointed by Col. Verdeckberg. The strikers were not taken into custody, but will be subject to prosecution in the courts for the killing of Major P. P. Lester of the hospital corps.

Violence in the strike zones of Colorado came to an end shortly after midnight when a downpour of rain drove to cover striking miners who near Walsenburg, the only point in Colorado where actual violence obtained, and yesterday dawned with the prospect of indefinite peace between the warring industrial factions. Federal troops from Cheyenne, Wyo., arrived in Canon City, and troops from Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, were expected to reach Trinidad last night.

The situation in the northern district became quiet Tuesday when the strikers ran out of ammunition.

Seven More Strike Victims.

FORBES, Col., April 30. — Seven men lie dead in the Forbes camp of the Rocky Mountain Fuel Co.

Most of the mine buildings are in ashes. Nine defenders are missing, but are believed to have reached the Majestic mine. Three strikers are thought to have been killed in the latest outbreak in the Colorado labor war.

VILLA MAKES HAY.

Rebel General Pushing His Campaign With Great Success.

LONDON, April 30. — The relief caused in Mexico City by the proffered mediation of the South American republics was only transitory, according to a despatch dated April 28 from the Mexican capital to The Daily Telegraph. The correspondent adds that after having believed it had to face war with the United States the Mexican Government again finds itself confronted by revolution under more unfavorable circumstances. It fears that mediation has come too late to affect the internal struggle, and that it will only prove to be a vain attempt to settle by pacific means a situation which is apparently approaching a violent solution.

Francisco Villa, according to the correspondent, has united under his command the most important nucleus of the combatant forces, and appears to have resumed hostilities with greater vehemence and success.

Mayor On His Dignity.

VANCOUVER, B.C., April 30.—Mayor Baxter told Rev. Dr. Eber Crummy, president of the Lord's Day Alliance for British Columbia, in a letter yesterday that he would not reply to any communication from nor receive any delegation, including Rev. C. H. Huestis, secretary of the Alliance for British Columbia and Alberta. His action was the result of a letter from Mr. Huestis demanding a more definite reply as to the enforcement of the Lord's Day Act than the "vague and childish" statement that the law would be reasonably enforced.

One Standard of Morality.

LONDON, April 30. — The Lower House of Convocation of Canterbury Tuesday discussed the attitude of the Church of England towards divorce.

The Bishop of Southampton moved a resolution expressing the opinion that there should be one standard of morality for men and women and equality of treatment by the law.

The present state of the law, the bishop said, was barbarous in its treatment of women. The resolution was carried.

TALLASSE WINS FAME AT SHANNONVILLE

This Sweet Little Character of Mr. Macfarlane's Book Goes to the Hearts of Delighted Indians

A full house greeted the drama "Tallassee, the Indian Princess", in the Odd Fellow's Hall, Shannonville, laste evening, enacted by the young ladies of the Apex Club assisted by young gentlemen of the Baraca Club of the Tabernacle church. While the play had been freely revised and added to by the author, and every part was perfectly carried out, the sweet character of Tallasse, so beautifully impersonated by Miss Edna Bowen, took the many Indian young men, who were present, by storm. In a word, it was a complete walkover by the pretty little lady in her Indian costume, so far as the braves, and in fact the entire audience, was concerned, and as the play, from the first, approached scene by scene to the wigwam village, from the moment the Indian maiden apeared before her canvas home, bedecked with the colors of her tribe, two bright feathers adorning her raven-black hair, she was the queen of the evening, and all bowed in spirit at her throne. From that on, sent by her benefactor, Alex Grant, to the home of friends in the Dakotas, step by step she developed into a young lady of society, yet ever retaining the quaint ways of her birth, which proved so attractive. The climax, as is the usual case, was the joining of hearts and hands between rescued and rescuer, in an eastern city, bringing to a close, what has been thus far wherever presented, an entrancing play.

Last night's presentation was for the benefit and under the auspices of the Emmons' Methodist church, and proved financially successful.

Refreshments were freely served the visitors at the parsonage, by Rev. and Mrs. J. G. Robeson and friends, following which the company left for Belleville, reaching home without mishap.

INTERESTING LECTURE BY TORONTO PRIEST

"The Inquisition, its Origin and Objects," was the subject of an address delivered last evening in St. Michael's Academy by the Rev. J. A. Canning, D.D., of Toronto, who is a prominent dignitary of the Roman Catholic Church. The gathering was under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus of this city. The spacious academy was well filled and all present listened attentively to the speaker. Mr. B. Taugher occupied the chair, and associated with him on the platform were Rev. Father Killeen, the local parish priest; Rev. Father Corrigan, curate, and a number of the members of the Knights of Columbus.

The proceedings opened with a solo rendered in a most acceptable manner by Miss Kate Bawden, whose sweet contralto voice was heard to great advantage in the selection she gave.

Rev. Father Canning, upon being introduced by the chairman, in a most appropriate manner, said it would be rather difficult to live up to the introduction he had received by the chairman. The subject he had to deal with was not only important, but difficult. He referred to the inquisition which was originated and carried into effect to prevent and stop blasphemy against God and Christianity, and the Catholic Church was a check against the inquisition as it at first was conceived to be. The Catholic Church would and always did do all in her power to check an evil when it was found out. There were many superstitions, such as witchcraft, blasphemy, etc., and the Catholic Church is continually fighting against them as a sin. There are some beliefs which strike at the state and these could not be tolerated. There were also some beliefs which strike at Christianity, and these could not be tolerated and punishment had to be meted out. Suffering is the life of love; love and suffering were intermingled, as was exemplified in the life of Christ. The Spanish Inquisition was referred to by the Rev. lecturer, and its abuses were repudiated. In concluding his address Rev. Dr. Canning said the Catholic church was the only church that dares to do unpopular things. The church doctrines were the same and unchangeable. The church is partly human and partly divine, the same as was Christ, and she was always going to be like Him. The human and the divine must go side by side. Through all ages the Catholic church has shown mercy.

At the conclusion of the address a vote of thanks, moved by Mr. W. N. Belair and seconded by Rev. Father Killeen was tendered to Rev. Father Canning, who replied to it in an appropriate manner.

A solo and encore by Mr. Vincent Doyle and the singing of the National Anthem brought the proceedings to a close.

GRAND PRESIDENT VISITS LOCAL LODGES

Mrs. Taylor of Hamilton, Grand President of the Rebekah Assembly, last evening paid an official visit to Quintena Lodge in this city. The gathering was held in the lodge room of Belleville Lodge I. O. O. F., and many were in attendance. The degree work was exemplified in a manner that demonstrated the sisters were well up in the work. After the lodge work had been completed a social time was held and a brief but interesting programme was carried out. The I. O. O. F. orchestra was present and discoursed a number of selections. Mrs. F. B. Naylor gave a reading; Miss Davis rendered a solo, as did also Miss Mae Terwilliger; Mr. M. Gilbert gave a reading which all thoroughly enjoyed. A piano duet was given by the Misses Terwilliger. During the evening refreshments provided by the ladies were served. The whole proceedings were both profitable and instructive.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. Margaret Taylor, President of the Rebekah Assembly, I. O. O. F., of Ontario, is in the city the guest of Mrs. Jas. McCurdy, Moira street.

QUEBEC, April 29.—The C. P. R. steamer Montfort, bound from Antwerp to Montreal, with 160 passengers and a general cargo, went aground while approaching the harbor of Quebec at 9.30 o'clock yesterday morning during a fog. She went aground on the beach just below the Island of Orleans.

The tide had been running down over two hours when the accident occurred. Experts said there was no danger for the vessel, except injury by her own weight, as she was lying on a sandy bottom.

Legislature's Work Ends With Redistribution Measure.

Mr. Rowell Makes a Last Effort to Explain That He Was Not in the Employ of the Federal or Provincial Government in the Oka Indian and Soo Cases — Mr. McDonald Fights Hard for Riding.

TORONTO, April 30.—The Ontario Legislature faces prorogation on Friday. The last item of the year's business was swept from the boards yesterday when the redistribution bill finally passed third reading after three hours of vigorous opposition from the Liberal members.

William McDonald (Centre Bruce), whose constituency is no more, made a determined effort to change the clause affecting the riding but his two amendments, one that the boundaries be left as before and the other that certain townships be changed about, were defeated.

The constituency of Monck disappears entirely.

In the last minute of the session a Government bill to license employment agencies and require them to show security went through without opposition.

An echo of the debate of Tuesday over the Snider affair, in which G. Howard Ferguson accused Mr. Rowell of having done professional work for the Federal Government was heard yesterday when the Liberal leader made a formal statement to the House.

Mr. Rowell said that he had been retained by the Oka Indians and the missionary society alone, and produced letters telling of the arrangement. Everything had been done at any rate before he became a candidate for the Legislature. He was not employed by the Ottawa House.

Mr. Ferguson retorted that this was the sheerest quibbling and deception for it was well known that the Indians were wards of the Government and that his fee had been paid for Government service.

This was followed by a charge by Thomas McGarry (Renfrew) that he coud prove that Mr. Rowell was the paid agent of the former Ontario Government, and had engineered the Soo Industries' deal, including the Lake Superior Steel Corporation loan. The records would show that he received $50,000 and over for that work.

Mr. Rowell stated that his firm had acted in an advisory capacity to defend the interests of the province in this matter, and that his fees had come from the corporation.

The Renfrew member asked if Mr. Rowell still drew money from the corporation, and was told that until two or three months ago such had been the case.

"I did not say that I was not retained by the old Government, but I do say that my fee was paid by the corporation," stated Mr. Rowell.

After several sharp passages the discussion terminated.

When the statute law amendment act was in committee, Hon. I. B. Lucas introduced a clause implementing the resolution of the Hydro-electric municipalities permitting the payment of a sum annually up to $15,000 to the members of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. Mr. Lucas explained that whatever portion of this money went to Hon. Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, would be in addition to the salary of $6,000 voted by the Legislature, and the act of indemnity passed a year ago would apply in this case as well. As Col. Hendrie and Mr. W. K. McNaught had both declined to accept any remuneration for their services on the commission no clause indemnifying them from the provision of the Legislative Assembly act was included.

The law respecting moving picture shows was amended to include theatres as well. This was done to prevent children under the age of fifteen years attending shows unless accompanied by an adult member of the family.

What Time Is It?

How many times have you been asked this question and have had to give the same old answer?

WHY NOT HAVE IT RIGHT?

The way we look at it, a thing isn't fixed at all until it's fixed RIGHT.

If it is UNFIXABLE, of course it's a different thing, and we will tell you.

But if we undertake to set your watch going right, the job will be done in a perfect manner.

RUN TO EARTH

heyday of their youth. Her affection was reverential, profound, and pure. To her mind, Oswald Eversleigh was the perfection of all that is noble in mankind, and she was proud of his devotion, grateful of his love.

No guest at the castle was more popular than Victor Carrington, the surgeon. His accomplishments were of so varied a nature as to make him invaluable in a large party, and he was always ready to devote himself to the amusement of others. Sir Oswald was astonished at the versatality of his nephew's friend. As a linguist, an artist, a musician, Victor alike shone pre-eminent; but in music he was triumphant. Professing only to be an amateur, he exhibited a scientific knowledge, a mechanical proficiency, as rare as they were admirable.

"A poor man is obliged to study many arts", he said, carelessly, when Sir Oswald complimented him on his musical powers. "My life has been one of laborious industry, and the cultivation of music has been almost the only relaxation I have allowed myself. I am not, like Lady Eversleigh, a musical genius. I only pretend to be a patient student of the great masters."

The baronet was delighted with the musical talent of his guest because they assisted much in the display of Lady Eversleigh's exceptional power. Victor Carrington's brilliant playing set off the magnificent singing of Honoria. With him as her accompanyist, she sang as she could not sing without his aid. Every evening there was an impromptu concert in the long drawing-room; every evening Lady Eversleigh sang to Victor Carrington's accompaniment.

One evening, in the summer dusk, when she had ben singing even more superbly than usual, Lydia Graham happened to be seated near Sir Oswald, in one of the broad open windows.

"Lady Eversleigh is indeed a genius" ,said Miss Graham, at the close of a superb bravura; "but how delightful for her to have the accomplished Mr. Carrington to accompany her—though some people prefer to play their own accompaniments. I do for instance; but when one has a relative who plays so well, it is, of course, a different thing."

"A relative! I don't understand you, my dear Miss Graham."

"I mean that it is very nice for Lady Eversleigh to have a cousin who is so accomplished a musician."

"A cousin?"

"Yes. Mr. Carrington is Lady Eversliegh's cousin—is he not? Or, I beg your pardon, perhaps he is her brother. I don't know your wife's maiden name."

"My wife's maiden name was Milford", answered the baronet, with some displeasure in his tone. "And Mr. Carrington is neither her brother nor her cousin; he is no relation to her whatever."

"Indeed!" exclaimed Miss Graham.

There was a strange significance in that word "indeed"; and after having uttered it, the young lady seemed seized with a sudden sense of embarassment.

Sir Oswald looked at her sharply, but her face was half averted from him, as if she had turned away in confusion.

"You seem surprised", he said haughtily, "and yet I do not see anything surprising in the fact that my wife and Mr. Carrington are not related to each other."

"Oh, dear no, Sir Oswald; of course not", replied Lydia, with a light laugh, which had the artificial sound of a laugh intended to disguise some painful embarrassment. "Of course not. It was very absurd of me to appear surprised, if I did really appear so; but I was not aware of it. You see, it was scarcely strange if I thought Lady Eversleigh and Mr. Carrington wer nearly related; for, when people are very old friends, they seem like relations; it is only in name that there is any difference."

You seemed determined to make mistakes this evening, Miss Graham", answered the baronet, with icy sterness. Lady Eversleigh and Mr. Carirngton are by no means old friends. Neither my wife nor I have known the gentleman more than a fortnight. He happens to be a very accomplished musician, and is good enough to make himself useful in accompanying Lady Eversleigh when she sings. That is the only claim which he has on her friendship; and it is one of only a few days' standing."

"Indeed!" said Miss Graham, repeating the exclamation which had sounded so disagreeable to Sir Oswald. "I certainly should have mistaken them for old friends; but then Lady Eversleigh is of Italian extraction, and there is always a warmth of manner, an absence of reserve, in the southern temperament which is foreign to our colder natures."

THE REFUGEES AT GALVESTON

The plight of the Americans driven out of Mexico and now assembled in a camp at Galveston, Texas, compels the sympathy of all their fellow-countrymen. It is not the time to reproach these refugees for not leaving Mexico sooner. All that most of them owned was tied up in that disturbed country. They are the victims of Mexican irresponsibility and brutality, and the failure of the United States government to protect American life and property in Mexico. To be sure, they were warned from Washington more than once to leave, but the circumstances did not seem to warrant them in abandoning all their belongings, sacrificing the results of many years of labor. For thirty years, every inducement was held out to thrifty Americans to settle in Mexico, to invest their savings there, to help in the work undertaken by Diaz to upbuild that country. Since the disastrous revolution began in 1910 they have been told again and again by the conflicting parties that protection would always be given to American residents.

More than 4,000 of these shockingly ill-treated compatriots of the United States, men, women and children, will be in Galveston before the week is out. The tales many of them have to tell of insult, robbery, intimidation, and torture must stir the blood of all who read them. But anger suffices nothing now. Succor for the refugees is the need of the hour. They have lost everything and at best a long time must elapse before they receive any indemnity. They need shelter, food, and clothing. To any formal appeal made in their behalf there should be a generous response.

RELIABLE WAR NEWS

In the view of the uncertain character of a great deal of war "news", the new regulations of the United States War Department touching correspondents in the field are interesting. Each accredited newspaper correspondent must deposit a certified check for $1,000, against which he may draw for supplies and equipment. He must provide a bond of $2,000 for good conduct, which in case of forfeiture may be transferred to a charity designated by the Secretary of War. Commissioned officers will act as censors with the army and at Washington. The licensed correspondent will have the status of a non-commissioned officer and will enjoy many privileges. It is not to be understood that the regulations are intended to hamper honest and competent newspaper men in the performance of their duty.

The value of this precaution must be tested by its operation, but we are afraid it will be ineffective in the suppression of many so-called dispatches which can be justly attributed to no discoverable correspondent. Readers of the Standard newspaper scarcely need to be told that all reports which cannot be reasonably verified are zealously excluded from its columns, and there are many newspapers thus cautious. But there are plenty of exceptions, which scarcely need be specified.

CURRENT COMMENT

Montreal Daily Mail: "The interesting suggestion is made that, since President Wilson's quarrel is with Huerta personally, the two should retire to a backyard somewhere and fight it out."

* * *

W. D. Haywood, leader of the I. W. W., says he will call for a general strike if the United States declares war on Mexico. As the Philadelphia Bulletin points out, he is consistent. In peace—I won't work; in war—I won't fight.

* * *

There is one class of food which, in the interests of the Liberal party, we think ought to be made free. We refer to fish. It is a recognized brain food. There is an accumulation of evidence that the Liberal leaders have suffered from an insufficient supply of this diet.

* * *

The Dominion Government is establishing a Fruit Division in connection with the Department of Agriculture. All very well in its way, but what Mackenzie King and S. Fisher would like to see is something which would bring them a little nearer to the fruits of office.

THE OLD-TIME LIBERAL FREE TRADER IS ALMOST EXTINCT

Years ago the Liberal party contained quite a few free traders of the orthodox sort, men who verily believed that it was a panacea for all the ills of this world, and who regarded protectionists with a condescending air as heathen whom it was their duty to convert:—

"Can we, whose souls are lighted
With wisdom from on high,
Can we to men benighted
The lamp of life deny?"

In due course, however, these followers of Cobden and Bright, of Gladstone and Villiers were corrupted by their surroundings. They got into business or entered politics, and, while remaining true till death to the principles of free trade, were against their enforcement when enforcement would have injured their own private or political interests, or put a stop to contributions to the campaign chest.

Mr. Blake deserted tariff reduction because it did not bring in votes enough. George Brown was a tremendous free trader, but after a time thought it would be for the good of the country to protect the infant industry of producing petroleum, this after he had purchased oil lands in Bothwell. John Charlton was a decided free trader, but, as the owner of timber limits in Michigan, fought tooth and nail at Washington to prevent the lowering of the American duty on Canadian lumber; and so, one by one, the brethren fell from grace, till in the end the party was not really in favor of anything in particular except office.

Today the Liberals from Eastern Canada in the House describe themselves for the most part as moderate protectionists, which, to an old-rock Cobdenite, is as though they styled themselves moderate heretics, or moderate burglars. What Sir Wilfrid is at present no one knows; it is doubtful if he himself knows. But Graham and Guthrie, Lemieux, German, Macdonald of Pictou, and other lieutenants openly or tacitly confess that they have abandoned the old creed, and, as Cartwright used to say, gone over to the flesh pots of protection. It may be taken for granted, in fact, that every Liberal member in the older proivnces who has a factory or two in his riding has experienced a change of heart, although at rural meetings, where there are no reporters, he is as prone as ever to boast of his loyalty to the "grand old principles of the party, free trade included."

One of the most cynical of the lot is Mr. Carroll, the member for South Cape Breton. In the budget debate this session he fairly roared against protection to farm products and ordinary factory goods, and then coolly turned around and confessed that he was heart and soul for the protection of iron and steel. A night or two afterwards he addressed a public meeting at Ottawa, and told the audience that Tory protection since 1911 had brought about the hardest times in the country's history, although he knows quite well that the tariff in force since 1911 is really the Liberal tariff which he himself supported, and that the only fault he has to find with it when he is addressing the coal miners and steel workers of Cape Breton is that it is not high enough. Could political dishonesty reach to a lower depth?

On the other hand, the Western Liberals are yelling for free implements, free wheat, free everything, especially free factory goods from the United States and Great Britain. These are the cries that suit the members of the Grain Growers' arganizations, with the help of whose votes Sir Wilfrid hopes to carry the West at the next election; while in the meantime he imagines that the artisans in the older provinces can be won by the pretence of moderate protection and the promise of free food.

This dual sort of campaign exactly suits Sir Wilfrid's curious turn of mind. In 1896 he gave the West to understand that he was opposed to the Remedial Bill for the settlement of the Manitoba School Question, and swept it; whilst he kept Quebec by promising to do still better for the Roman Catholic Church. This time, however, the policy of facing both ways is not likely to succeed. A leader, who, in a country like this, where East and West have not yet had time to become thoroughly united, seeks to play the one against the other in order to obtain office, deserves to be condemned by both, and we believe that will be his fate.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is not much when it comes to questions of war (painful subject), but he's the real cheese in all the arts of peace, more especially, particularly and conspicuously in the building of railroads. Wild cheers from the eleven Grit contractors.

* * *

Guelph Herald: "The local Liberal organ said on Saturday that When Mr. Rowell arrived he was in the best of spirits, and was optimistic over the political outlook in Ontario at the present time." It would be cruel to say what he felt like when he boarded the train at the Grand Trunk Station to return to Toronto."

In the melancholy words of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, we cannot all be empire builders, but we can be railway builders. And to quote the unuttered words of Dr. William Pugsley, we cannot all be statesmen, but we can all be G. P. Grahams in our idle moments.

There is one feature of the new tariff changes which even the most rabid Grit papers in the country have been forced to praise. Hon. W. T. White, Finance Minister, has been generally congratulated for having prohibited the importation of aigrettes, ospreys, etc. It is an advanced humane move, which has been the subject of most favorable comment from coast to coast.

"RUN TO EARTH"

By the Author of
"Lady Audley's Secret," "Aurora Floyd," etc., etc.

For nearly nine years she had been trying to make this brilliant marriage. She had 'come out'', as the phrase goes, at seventeen, and she was now nine and twenty.

During that period she had been wooed and flattered by troops of admirers. She had revellled in flirtations; she had triumphed in the power of her beauty; but she had known more than one disappointment of her fairest hopes, and she had not won the prize in the great lottery of fashionable life—a wealthy and patrician husband.

Her nine-and-twentieth birthday had passed; and contemplating herself earnestly in her glass, she was fain to confess that something of the brilliancy of her beauty had faded.

"I am getting wan and sallow", she said to herself; "what is to become of me if I do not marry?"

Lydia Graham possessed an income of two hundred a year, inherited from her mother; but such an income was the merest pittance for a young lady with Miss Graham's taste. Her brother was a captain of an expensive regiment, selfish and extravagant, and by no means inclined to open his purse for his sister's benefit.

She had no home; but lived sometime with one wealthy relation, sometimes with another—always admired, always elegantly dressed; but not always happy.

Amidst all Miss Graham's matrimonial disappointments, she had endured none more bitter than that which she had felt when she read the announcement of Sir Oswald Eversleigh's marriage in the 'Times' newspaper.

She had met the rich baronet very frequently in society. She had visited at Raynham with her brother. Sir Oswald had, to all appearance, admired her beauty and accomplishments; and she had imagined that time and opportunity alone were wanting to transform that admiration into a warmer feeling. In plain words, Lydia Graham had hoped with a little good management, to become Lady Eversleigh of Raynham; and no words can fully describe her mortification when she learnt that the baronet had bestowed his name and fortune on a woman of whom the fashionable world knew nothing, except that she was utterly unknown.

Lydia Graham came to Raynham Castle with poisonous feelings rankling in her heart, but she wore her brightest smiles as well as her most elegant dresses. She congratulated the baronet in honeyed words, and offered warmest friendship to the lovely mistress of the mansion.

"I am sure we shall suit each other delightfully, dear Lady Eversleigh", she said; "and we shall be fast friends henceforward—shall we not?"

Honoria's disposition was naturally reserved. She revolted against frivolous and unmeaning sentimentality. She responded politely to Miss Graham's proffers of friendship; but not with corresponding warmth.

Lydia Graham perceived the coldness of her manner, and bitterly resented it. She felt that she had reason to hate this woman, who had caused the disappointment of her dearest hopes, whose beauty was infinitely superior to her own; and who was several years younger than herself.

There was one person at Raynham whose scrutinizing eyes perceived the animosty of feeling lurking beneath Lydia Graham's smooth manner. That penetrating observer was Victor Carrington. He saw that the fashionable beauty hated Lady Eversleigh, and he resolved to make use of her hatred for the furtherance of his schemes.

"I fancy Miss Graham has at sometime of her life cherished an idea that she might become mistress of this place, eh, Reginald?" he said one morning, as the two men lounged together on the terrace.

"How did you know that?" said Reginald, questioning and replying at once.

"By no diabolical power of divination, I assure you, my dear Reginald. I have only used my eyes. But it seems, from your exclamation, that I am right. Miss Graham did once hope to become Lady Eversleigh."

"Well, I believe she tried her uttermost to win my uncle for a husband. I have watched her manœuvres—when she was here two years ago; but they did not give me any uneasiness, for I thought Sir Oswald was a confirmed bachelor. She used to vary her amusements by flirting with me. I was the acknowledged heir in those days, you know, and I have no doubt she would have married me if I had given her the opportunity. But she is too clever a woman for my taste; and with all her brilliancy, I never admired her."

"You are wise for once in the way, my dear Reginald. Miss Graham is a dangerous woman. She has a very beautiful smile; but she is the sort of woman who can smile and murder while she smiles. But she may be made a very useful tool, notwithstanding."

"A tool?"

"Yes; a good workman takes his tools wherever he finds them. I may be in want of just such a tool as Lydia Graham.

All went merry as a marriage-bell at Raynham Castle during the bright August weather. The baronet was unspeakably happy. Honoria, too, was happy in the novelty of her position; happy in the knowledge of her husband's love. His noble nature had won the reward such natures should win. He was beloved by his young wife as few men are beloved in the

SIR EDWARD TO MEET MR. CHURCHILL'S TERMS

Day of Momentous Debate at Westminster Ends With Defeat of Chamberlain's Motion For an Inquiry Into Curragh Camp Affair, But Outlooks Is Brighter For Conferences Between Parties.

LONDON, April 30. — A compromise on the question of Home Rule for Ireland seemed yesterday nearer than ever before. There existed a strong belief in Parliamentary circles that the conferences between the leaders of the two great parties which had been unsuccessful in reaching any agreement last autumn would shortly be resumed.

The House of Commons discussed the Ulster crisis again yesterday, when it wound up the two days' debate on Austen Chamberlain's motion for a judicial inquiry into the Government's "plot" to crush the Ulster Covenanters. The motion, which was virtually a vote of censure on the Cabinet, was eventually rejected by a party vote of 344 against 264, a Government majority of 80.

An atmosphere of great solemnity and restraint overhung the House throughout the debate. The growing belief that civil war in Ireland is a reality which cannot be escaped if the Home Rule bill becomes law as it at present stands seems to have influenced members on both sides of the House as it has the newspapers supporting both parties. During the past week the press of both opinions has become more conciliatory in tone than it has been at any previous stage of the discussion.

Sir Edward Carson, whose leadership of the Ulster rebellion makes him the dominating figure on the Opposition side of the House, yesterday accepted the overtures made Tuesday by Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, who had invited Sir Edward Carson to make an attempt to compromise the Home Rule question on a federal basis. Sir Edward reiterated his detestation of Home Rule and repeated his offer, that if Ulster were excluded from the bill "until this Parliament shall determine otherwise," instead of the six years' period which Premier Asquith had offered, he would submit the proposal to the people of Ulster.

Sir Edward in his reply to Mr. Churchill's invitation declared all he wanted for Ulster was such terms as would conserve the dignity of the Ulster men and their civil and religious freedom. He concluded that in case the Home Rule bill passed it would be his earnest prayer that the government of the south and west of Ireland would prove so successful that it might be to Ulster's interest to join and form a united Ireland.

Premier Asquith concluded the debate with an eloquent speech, which contained the statement that his offer of the temporary exclusion of Ulster Counties from the operation of the Home Rule bill for a period of six years remained open. He said he considered Sir Edward Carson's statement a most important one, and he recognized and reciprocated its spirit. A settlement, he declared, could not be successfully negotiated by bargaining across the floor of the House of Commons, and the questions at issue could not be settled behind the backs of the men of Ulster or of the rest of Ireland.

Arthur J. Balfour, former Unionist Premier, in a moving peroration to his speech, justified Ulster in making civil war. He said his public life had been devoted to the cause of the union between Great Britain and Ireland, and concluded:

"If, in order to avoid the incalculable horrors of civil war, we must set up a separate Parliament in Dublin, I shall think it marks the failure of my whole life's work."

ALL ASIATICS BARRED.

New Interpretation of Regulation Is Sweeping In Its Effect.

VANCOUVER, April 30.—Asiatics of all races will be barred from entry into Canada under a new interpretation, or order-in-council, No. 897, details of which were made public yesterday to representatives of trans-Pacific lines by Malcolm R. J. Reid, superintendent of immigration. The new interpretation has made the order-in-council applicable to Chinese, Japanese and Hindus, and will become effective on May 31.

It will be remembered that entry of laborers, skilled and unskilled artisans into British Columbia was prohibited for a period of six months. At the expiration of this time the order was extended for another six months, or until Sept. 30. This order keeps out all labor under the head named, both white and yellow, but there was some misapprehension as to how it would affect Chinese who were prepared to pay the head tax of $500.

The possession of $500 for the head tax will avail them not at all, and the bars will be rigidly enforced against Chinese, Japanese and Hindus, as against white labor.

Maori Chiefs To See King George.

VANCOUVER, April 30.—Four of the most important chiefs of the New Zealand Maoris arrived in Vancouver by the Niagara from New Zealand on their way to the United Kingdom, where they are to have an audience with King George concerning affairs of state. All of them speak excellent English.

Buffalo Aground.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., April 30.—The steamer Buffalo, downbound with flour, which in a storm ran aground on a shoal midway between Round Island and Point Aux Pines, in the upper St. Mary's river Tuesday, is out of the water two feet forward and six inches aft, and is resting on big boulders which punctured her on the starboard side. She is leaking, but the pumps have been able to keep her clear.

BILL IS ALMOST LAW.

Compensation Act Ends Course In Legislature Amid Cheers.

TORONTO, April 29—A loud burst of applause echoed about the legislative chamber yesterday afternoon, when the workmen's compensation bill wound up its career on the order paper and stood merely waiting the gubernatorial sanction to become law.

Liberal amendments to include a first aid provision, to limit the term of commissioners to ten years, and to make certain alterations in the classification of industries, were voted down.

Hon. Adam Beck's two bills to amend the Power Commission Act passed their third reading yesterday. The first provides for the public construction and operation of Hydro Radials, and was exhaustively explained by Hon. Mr. Beck a few days ago. The second bill Mr. Beck explained yesterday. The first section provides for the expropriation of flooded lands on behalf of municipalities. The next section gives certain powers to townships to make appropriations for the lighting of highways.

"The third clause," said Mr. Beck, "refers to the amendment to the act, giving the commission power to authorize and approve of inspectors to look over wiring and plant installed by municipalities."

FULL PROBE ORDERED.

Investigation Into Marine Department Scandal To Begin at Once.

OTTAWA, April 29.—In the House yesterday Hon. J. D. Hazen outlined the position in Quebec, where graft charges in the Marine Department are being investigated. Mr. Doutre, the purchasing agent of the Department and an official of the Justice Department have been sent down to investigate.

In reply to Sir Wilfrid's question Mr. Hazen explained that the pay sheet had been padded in 1908-1909. The timekeeper, the accountant of the Department and the paymaster had all passed the accounts, and they were paid to persons who were not really employed.

This was admitted by the accountant and another official. The investigation would commence immediately, and four officials were now suspended.

Only Her Latest.

"What is your last name, please madam?" inquired the clerk, deferentially.

"My latest name," corrected the literary woman, who is always careful of her English, "is Mrs. Havre Fourth."—Kansas City Star.

CONVICT PLEASED AT RECOMMENDATION

KINGSTON, April 29.—There is one convict in the big prison at Portsmouth who is "tickled," as it were, over a recommendation in the report of the Prison Reform Commission.

He is "Texas" Burdell, the London, Ont., convict, and the recommendation which has brought joy to him and make no mistake on it he has heard the news, is that the cropping of the convict's head be abolished.

"Texas" made this one of his strong objections when he gave evidence before the commission. He claimed that he was in ill-health, and said that his illness was due to the cutting of his hair in the cold weather. He did not mind having a close hair cut in the warm weather, but with zero weather especially, he thought the "pen" officials should be more considerate. The members of the Prison Reform Commission who listened to his story, agreed that the practice of cutting the hair should be done away with. There is but one exception mentioned, and that is in the extreme case where it is necessary that the head should be cropped in order to assure cleanliness.

"Texas" has been in the penitentiary now for close on to nine years, and he has all the prison regulations down from A to Z. He has been acting rather queer at times, and it is feared that he will go insane, and that he will have to be placed in the insane ward. He has failed a great deal since he entered the Penitentiary. At the time he gave his evidence before the commission, Dr. D. Phelan, the surgeon stated that Burdell's mind had become slightly unbalanced.

The London convict, who has now been behind the bars for about nine years, is serving a fifteen-year term for robbery.

Burdell's friends have been working for some time in an endeavor to secure his release on parole, but so far their efforts have been frutile. The prisoner claims that his letters have not been forwarded to the minister of justice.

P. Bryce, pastor of Earlscourt Central Methodist Church. Mr. Bryce immediately communicated with Mrs. Preece at the downtown factory where she was working, with the result that she visited him at the church, where he read her the contents of the cable.

CHAIRMAN OF PUBLIC WORKS EXPRESSES HIMSELF, RE PAVEMENT

Editor of The Intelligencer.

With your kind permission I should like to answer the question re pavement — "Has Belleville Money to Burn?" which was the heading of a letter of the Warren Bituminous Paving Co., who tendered for our pavement. They are very, very sore because they did not get the contract and are thus trying to arouse the ire of the citizens.

Now, let us look at their letter. Tender No. 1, they say, would have saved the citizens $8,550.00 and given to them the best pavement to be had. This is so utterly misleading and false that the average citizen should know different. This class of pavement was discussed in council and was not entertained for one moment by any of the aldermen. Moreover, one of the aldermen, when in Toronto last week, asked the city engineer of Toronto what he thought of such a proposition for Front street, and the answer he received from the engineer was that he wouldn't consider it for one moment. Yet this company would try to make our citizens believe it is the best pavement to be had and would give a saving of $8,550.00.

Next they would try to make out that tender No. 2 would give exactly what Foley & Gleeson's tender offered and thus have saved the citizens $2,280.00. Again they are wrong, and the citizens have cause to be grateful to their council that they rejected their tender and accepted the one they did. The great difference in the two tenders is the quality of the asphalt used. The Warrens use California asphalt, and Foley & Gleeson use Trinidad Lake asphalt, which so far has given the best satisfaction wherever it has been tried. Here are a few facts for your thoughtful consideration: New York City, after having tried all kinds of pavements on one of their best streets, namely, Fifth Avenue, put down seventeen years ago a Trinidad Lake asphalt pavement. It gave such excellent satisfaction that last year it was repaved with the same asphalt. The city of Buffalo was one of the first to lay asphalt. She has experimented with everything. Up to date she has laid 4,677,359 square yards of Trinidad asphalt; 40,678 of California asphalt. Just note the difference, irate citizen! And now she has discarded all asphalts except Trinidad, of which last year she laid 200,000 square yards, or over ten times what Belleville will lay this year. The city of London, England, is discarding all other asphalts, claiming Trinidad Lake to be the best. The city of London, Canada, turned down Warren's tender, which was 18c. per square yard less than Foley & Gleeson's, and gave it to the latter, saying they wanted no more experiment. Lindsay doesn't even call for other tenders, but gives the work to Foley & Gleeson, so well were they satisfied with the work they did for them last year.

Mr. Editor, the council have conscientiously given the contract to the firm whom we think will give the best pavement, and the best is none too good for Belleville.

E. O. PLATT.
Chairman Public Works.

GRAND TRUNK NEWS BUREAU

RAILWAY SERVICE THAT SATISFIES.

Railway men, like workers in other spheres are gratified when they find that their efforts to attend to the comfort of the travelling public are appreciated.

Mr. E. J. Chamberlin, President of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways, received the other day an interesting letter of commendation from an official, prominent in one of our industrial corporations.

The letter said:—

"On Tuesday, April 7th, 1914; the President of this Company and myself took your train No. 14 from Chicago to Toronto, occupying the drawing room in car No. 2 and it gives us a great deal of pleasure to say that the equipment, dining car service, and the manner in which this equipment was handled on curves, at stations and when dropping or picking up cars at different junction points was most excellent.

"We have but recently returned from an extensive trip to the Pacific Coast and have also been east several times within a short period, and do not know of any trip that we have made where the run was more thoroughly enjoyed than the trip above mentioned. Your Conductors, trainsmen and porters were all exceedingly courteous and the dinner we had in your dining car between Chicago and Durand was most excellently prepared and served in splendid manner."

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-west Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

McMullen Suspended.

TORONTO, April 30.—York County Constable James E. McMullen has been suspended until further order by his Honor Judge Winchester. The suspension, which comes into effect immediately, is not made on the ground that criminal proceedings are pending against McMullen in the Police Court, but the senior county judge has taken action under the Private Detectives' Act.

This act provides that no person shall engage in the business of a private detective without having first obtained a license from the Treasurer of the province.

Three Big Guns Destroyed.

NEW YORK, April 30.—A London cable says: The British ordinance department has had a series of mishaps in the big gun and shell tests at Shoeburyness. The last, which has just occurred, due to a defective shell, and which has been kept secret, is the third within the last six months. Since each gun costs $100,000, the loss of three is a serious matter to the Exchequer.

SUFFERED AGONY WITH NEURALGIA

Nothing Helped Her Until She Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

CAMPBELLVILLE, ONT., May 5th. 1913.

"I cannot speak too highly of "Fruit-a-tives". For over thirty years, I have suffered from Chronic Neuralgia and Constipation, experiencing untold agony. The Neuralgia settled in my lungs and I took bottle after bottle of medicine without relief. The doctor told me I would not get better but "Fruit-a-tives" proved that the doctor was wrong, by giving me quick relief and finally and completely curing me.

I would not have my present health if it was not for "Fruit-a-tives" and I am glad of the opportunity of giving you this letter about such a splendid remedy as "Fruit-a-tives", for the guidance of other women who may be similarly affected"

MRS. NATHAN DUNN.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine made from fruit juices and is particularly suited to women because of its mild action and pleasant taste.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or may be obtained from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE SOUTHPAW HOODOO

Toronto, April 29.—That old southpaw hoodoo still pursues the Toronto team. Another left hander took the measure of the Leafs yesterday. Three of the four games this year have been at the expense of port siders. At that four of the seven hits accumulated by the Leafs were made by the left hand batsmen on the team. This state of things should waken President McCaffery to the fact that unless he fortifies his outfit with some capable subs, who bat the right way he will find every manager in the league shooting his southern exposure pitchers at his club regularly.

BARROW OPPOSED TO POST SEASON BALL

TORONTO, April 28.—President Barrow has admitted that an effort has been made to revive the plan to hold a post season championship for the Class A.A. leagues. This would call into competition the winners of the International League, the American Association and the Pacific Coast League. Barrow is dead set against the project for the year, and in the face of his opposition there is no chance of Tom Chivington carrying out his pet scheme just yet. There is a possibility, however, that in 1915 the plan may get a trial.

Under present conditions," said Barrow, "the railways would get all the money. We would have to gamble too heavily against the weather of the fall. But it might not be a bad idea a year later. The winner of the series between the International and American Association could travel direct to the coast and wait for the close of the Pacific Coast League championship race. With the big exposition there, the financial risk should not be great.

"Personally I would not oppose such a three cornered series if I believed public interest justified a trial. But the series of the past between minor leagues have not been popular with the general public. Perhaps this is because the general public has begun to look upon the world's series as the great classic of the season. Anyhow baseball enthusiasts would sooner stand around bulletin boards for their world's series results than to watch the struggles of minor league champions. It might be different with exposition crowds on the Coast. The promoters of the fair intend to make a great play on baseball and they are reasonably sure of pretty good baseball weather there."

SEASON OPENS TOO EARLY SAYS M'GRAW

New York April 28.—Manager McGraw of the Giants will champion Charles H. Ebbets, in his fight for a later opening of the National League championship next year.

"I have fought for five years against starting hostilities in mid-April he said yesterday afternoon.

"Go back five years," he continued, and you will find an average of five days lost out of the first ten. This is very disastrous to the good of the game in more ways than one. To begin with it is a hardship on the the players. If they are in good condition on their return from the South a few days of idleness will put them back almost where they started. It is an imposition on the fans who support a club to ask them to sit through two hours of chill wind and raw weather.

"To my mind every game played in the early spring when weather conditions are not right for fast baseball is a knock on the national pastime. Those who attend and who escape heavy colds or something worse will not come out again for weeks. It takes them about a month to thaw out. If the major leagues would open ten days or two weeks later they would be reasonably sure of fair baseball weather all the way. Fandom, I am sure would be pleased to wait."

McGraw looks with disfavor also upon the general practise of baseballing the people to death before the opening of the season.

WELSH WAS WINNER OVER CROSS

Los Angeles, Cal., April 29.—Freddie Welsh, British lightweight champion was awarded the decision over Leach Cross, of New York, in a twenty-round boxing contest at Vernon Arena last night. With the exception of the final round the fight was a very tame affair. More than half of the time the men were on their feet was spent in clinching.

Neither men fought in anything like near championship form, much to the displeasure of the spectators. In the 18th round the Arena resounded with cries of "fake" and "make him fight." The referee continually had to pull the men apart.

Cross seemed worried from the start and Welsh early revealed an inclination to clinch. Both attempted ineffectual infighting and neither landed more than one or two telling blows. In the latter half of the twentieth round Welsh forced the fighting amid considerable applause. Welsh finished much the stronger.

ROD AND GUN

ROD and GUN for May is out with, as usual an attractive bill of fare for the sportsman. The Dogs of the North, A Hunting Trip to Pocologan, N.B., The History of the Canoe, Building a Sectional Boat, The Swamp Maiden, The Roughneck Fishing Club, Obnoxious Fishing in Lakes and Ponds, Idea Trout Fishing in Ontario Waters are some of the articles worth special mention while the regular departments are well maintained and the whole of interest to both Canadian and American sportsmen. W. J. Taylor, Limited Publisher, Woodstock Ont., issues this Canadian outdoor magazine.

PHILLIPSTON

Mr. Wilfrid Phillips, youngest son of Mr. Harrison Phillips, is in the Belleville hospital undergoing treatment for his eye, which became very sore, the result of an accident sustained while coming out of the sugar bush some two weeks ago. He was driving under a tree when a limb struck him in the eye. We understand he is doing well.

Mr. Ben Sayers is making some changes in his dwelling which will improve the appearance very much.

Master Ross Salsbury, aged 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Salsbury, met with a painful accident recently. He was returning from a drive with his mother, when, on getting out the buggy, slipped and fell, breaking his arm. We hope he will soon be around again.

Thin Folks Who Would be Fat

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE

I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way, declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by J. S. McKeown, Drug Store and other good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous digestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.
